PASTORS MAY STAY 5 YEARS AT CHARGE

Conference to Act on Amendment Permitting Extension in U. E. Church

Special to The Telegraph
Bangor, Pa., Feb. 28.—The East Pennsylvania Conference of the United Evangelical Church in session in the First United Evangelical Church, is attended by a large representation, although there are a number of ministers and laymen absent, owing to illness. Among the important matters to be brought before the conference will be the extension of the time limit permitting pastors to remain five years with a charge. It seems to meet with universal favor and will undoubtedly be adopted. An amendment will also be presented which will make it possible for a pastor to remain eight years under certain circumstances.

Among the ministers and prominent members of the conference who died during the year were the Rev. D. F. Kostenbuder, of Danville; the Rev. Edmund Butz, of Allentown; the Rev. Joshua Wilson, a local minister of Mount Carmel; Mrs. Adelia Neitz, widow of the Rev. H. A. Neitz, New York City; Elizabeth H. Staver, wife of the Rev. H. Franklin Schlegel, of Mount Carmel; Mrs. Susan Ross Miller, wife of the Rev. E. J. Miller, of Harrisburg; and Mrs. Mary E. Hoover, wife of Presiding Elder J. Willis Hoover, of Harrisburg. Gettysburg Firms Gets Contract For School Brick

Brick for the new Hill grade school building, at Sixtyfour and Cherry streets, will be furnished by the Auburn Brick Company, of Gettysburg, at $14 per 1,000. The contract was let last evening by the school board in special session. Harry Miller is the city representative for the Gettysburg firm. Architect C. Howard Jones estimates that 185,000 brick will be needed. The session was held for the purpose of agreeing upon bids opened a week ago. The meeting was enlivened by a little tilt between Miller, the agent, and Director Polk. This grew out of the action of the board last week in postponing a decision because it was said that the same brick for which the Gettysburg firm had asked $14 had been bought by the Pennsylvania Steel Company for $12.45. Director Houtz wanted a few days delay until a committee could be appointed to look into the matter. The award of the contract was called on the award of the contract to the Auburn Company. This was by the vote of four to three. Directors Boll, Houtz, Bretz, and Boyer voting for and Directors Yates, Fohl and Werner voting against the award. Mr. Yates protested against the award of the job to the Gettysburg concern.

Aunt Este's Olden Stories For Children

My dear little ones:
I wonder whether you would not like to hear another story in rhyme?
Well, I am going to tell you one of
THE SNOW FLAKES WHO CAME TO TOWN
A lot of little snow flakes all lived up in a cloud, and there they used to scamper round, and holler good and loud. One day, old Mother Cloud got cross—upon my word she did; and to herself she vowed that of those snow flakes she'd get rid. So open wide she flung her door—the wee flakes hurried out, and through the air they fluttered and they scampered round about. "Where shall we land?" one fellow asked of his fond playmate small, said he, "Me for the country, or I will not land at all." "Oh, my!" another fellow said, "That's far too slow for me. I want to land a place where there is something fine to see. I'll take that great large city I can see right there below, and make the dirty place clean as Sapolio with snow." So each flake chose a side, just as in London Bridge, you know. Then Uncle Wind blew each side off to where each wished to go. The one side fell in great green fields, on trees and country roads, the other side on fine paved streets, and all sorts of abodes.
The side which chose the country to visit remained pure, their coats stayed white, their faces bright, you may be very sure. And fun reigned high, for sleighing parties everywhere were seen; snow-balls, snow-men, snow-forts—and yet they're pretty coats stayed clean. But how about the city choosers? Well, 'tis very sad—but they were treated very, very, very bad! As soon as they got there, snow sweepers roved from all about, and straight from out the streets and driveways drove the poor things out. They're pretty white coats of which they had been so very proud, those nasty city folks just turned right straight into a shroud; and buried them with dirt and grime—tramped them beneath their feet, 'til none could know they once had been snow flakes so pure and sweet. And when they all got home again, so many moons had passed, the ones who chose the city clung to Mother Cloud's skirts fast. "Oh, mother dear," they sobbed, "if e'er again you send us down, we sure will choose the country side and not that nasty town."
Lovingly, AUNT ESTE.
