By Associated Press
Altoona, Pa., March 23.—A lone bandit to-day shot the cashier of the Union Bank of this city, wounded a depositor and got away in an automobile with about $500 of the bank's money. A young man drove up to the bank in the central part of the city in an automobile and entering pointed a revolver at Mr. Burton, the teller, and demanded the bank's money. Burton ducked behind the counter. The stranger climbed to the ledge of the counter, vaulted over the iron screen and landed inside. The cashier, A. P. Rupert turned in his chair just as the robber fired, the bullet striking him in the stomach. A bookkeeper and another employe escaped through a door to the cellar, while the teller lay concealed in the corner.

The robber proceeded to gather into a satchel all the loose bills he found on the counter. While so engaged a Mr. Blackburn, a depositor entered the bank to have a check cashed and as he was closing the front door the robber fired a bullet through the thigh. Makes Easy Escape
Opening the door from the inside of the bank counter, the bold intruder walked out to the street, many people were passing the bank corner at the time, and he fired every direction, chasing everybody to cover. Jumping into the automobile he drove off up Eighth avenue, disappearing before any attempt could be made to stop him.

Rupert was hurried to the Altoona hospital and Blackburn was taken to his home. The teller estimated the loss at $500, all in bills. The robber is described as a young man aged about 25, medium height and smooth face. He wore no mask. The wounds of the two injured men are not necessarily of a fatal nature.
