"That's Exactly What I Wanted to Know"

When you have seen and felt the influence of the new trend of fashion and style, where do you find out how to get what you want? Of course, if you have plenty of time and money there are many ways. But the quickest, most economical and simplest way, unfailling in smartness and freshness, is the Sunday Public Ledger. Whether the modes originate in Paris or New York, you will find them in the Sunday Ledger beautifully illustrated and graphically described by expert fashion writers and artists. Very often they originate in the Ledger.

Do you know Peggy Shippen, whose sparkling comments and gossip have been entertaining thousands every Sunday in this newspaper? You ought to. Get acquainted.

The Woman's Interest Section of the Public Ledger gives that broad viewpoint and detailed information that every woman seeks. It is brimming with new suggestions—for the family, the house, the garden, the club, gowns, millinery—every intimate phase of home life.

Tomorrow the Public Ledger will interest men, women and children by its stories gathered from all parts of the world, with stress upon two great centres of today's news—Ireland and Mexico. E. Alexander Powell draws with vividness and power a pen picture of Villa's camp of rebels—an Englishman just back from Belfast describes the Irish situation.

The Pictorial Section is especially catchy in its views. The sporting writers are restless for the cry of the umpire, "Play ball."
