

Women AND Their Interests

Her Married Life

By MABEL HERBERT URNER

"Lead Your Wife Not Into Temptation"

By DOROTHY DIX

I wonder how many husbands and wives whose marriages have turned out to be failures ever have the courage to face the real truth and recognize the part that they have played in wrecking their happiness?

It is necessary to a woman as the air she breathes or the bread she eats, and that if it is not given to her legitimately she will take it illegitimately.

A case in point: A man marries a pretty, amusement-loving, light-hearted girl. He puts her down into a little flat, and expects her to be happy and satisfied, with nothing livelier to do than the housework, and looking forward to his coming home of an evening.

Never Praises Her
He never pays her a compliment, or does or says a sentimental thing to her, and he shook off all love-making with the rice and old shoes after the wedding.

When he does come he is tired and grouchy and sits around all evening without speaking a word. If she proposes to go to the theater or to a friend's for a game of cards or to merely take a walk on the street he grows out a refusal.

Of course, if the woman had a calmly judicial mind this would be sufficient, but she isn't judicial. She is a creature of warm human sensibility, of hungry craving for tenderness and love.

She is young and full of the joy of living, and her natural instinct for pleasure is not to be denied, so she begins to find it on the outside of her home.

She is heart-hungry. She is starving for affection, and along comes some man who makes fervid and violent love to her, and, as a result, there's another domestic tragedy.

The women who write mash notes to actors, who dance with strange men at afternoon tea rooms, who carry on clandestine correspondence, who lunch with other men than their husbands at restaurants, and who are always looking out for a flirtation are invariably women married to men who do not realize that some amusement is as necessary to a woman as the air she breathes or the bread she eats.

When he wants to enjoy himself he goes to some place as far from his own domicile as possible, and he doesn't take wife along, either. He has no companionship in the woman to whom he is married, and he finds it in some other woman who goes with him to Reno, and considers herself very much missed, when, in reality, she is the sinner.

As that is a disputed point, why not amend this bill so as to continue the present law with the exemption section for two years or suspend it for two years? By amending the bill in this way the Speaker would be able to get the bill through the House.
