

WOMEN AND THEIR INTERESTS

By DOROTHY DIX

A great-hearted woman who has recently died has willed all of her fortune to build a home for poor women whose existence is made wretched by having to live with relatives who do not love them, and who find them "in the way." It is a beautiful charity, for there are tragedies in the world more poignant than the fate of those old women who are forced to eat the bitter bread of dependence, and to live in the homes of others where they are made to feel that they are one too many.

Sometimes it is an old mother who has given her best years to slaving and toiling for her children, but who finds herself an unwelcome guest in her son's and daughter's homes. Sometimes it is an old maid sister who has sacrificed her youth, and her romance, and her own chances in life in order to give younger brothers and sisters better opportunities than she could have, who is farmed out among those for whom she has done so much, and who regard themselves as martyrs for having to "take" Jane for so many months a year. Sometimes it is a forlorn old cousin, or a widowed aunt, childless, penniless, to whom, for very shame sake, an unwelcome door has been grudgingly opened.

Always these women who must live in other people's homes know they are not wanted. They see themselves slighted, patronized, put upon. In many cases they realize that they are a perpetual source of discord in the family, and that their presence is fiercely resented by some relative-in-law. There is no anguish of heart and love and bruised pride that they do not suffer, these poor, forlorn old women who are in the way of the young, the happy, and selfish.

God rest the soul of the woman who has remembered their sorrow, and whose money will build a home to which some of them may fly as to a temple of refuge until they creep into that last home that holds out its welcoming arms to us all.

The building of this home where specific purpose is to be a shelter for the women who are "in the way," should be more than a mere sanctuary for dependent old women. It should bring home to all women who are approaching middle life a warning of the fate that may lie in store for them unless they begin at once to take steps to protect themselves against it.

It is a harsh and cruel thing to say, but it is a truth that we do well to face, and that is—that every woman who lives in another woman's house is a woman "in the way." This will seem incredible to mothers. They will say, "My Mary and my Freddie will always want their mother. They will never find me in the way. I will always have a warm seat by the fire in my children's homes."

This may be true enough of one's own children, but there is Mary's husband, and Freddie's wife to take into consideration, and the son-in-law and the daughter-in-law have yet to be born who receive a mother-in-law into their homes without feeling that they are giving a living understudy of martyrdom, nobly borne.

If Mary's husband and Freddie's wife are pin-feathered saints, they try to do their duty by their mother-in-law, but it is duty and not pleasure, and in her heart the mother-in-law knows that she's de trop.

And if Mary's husband and Freddie's wife are just common, ordinary human beings, the mother-in-law is not only the woman in the way, but the woman who leads the way only too often for her son or daughter to the divorce court.

Of course if a woman is old, and sick, and poor, there is frequently no way in which she can prevent herself from becoming dependent, and being forced to live with those who do not want her, but there are many other cases in which a woman brings this cruel fate needlessly down upon her own head.

If I could say one word more earnest than any other to a middle-aged woman, who has a little home and a little property of her own, it would be to hang on her pocketbook to the last gasp of life, and not to be foolish enough, as so many mothers do, to give everything she has got to her children on the supposition that she'll be perfectly happy and need nothing, living about with them.

Children are human and in-laws are doubly human, and the minute they have done mother out of her property, they forget the obligation, and consider her a burden. Between mother with her own money and able to make presents, and mother who has to be taken care of, is the difference between a welcome guest and the woman in the way.

There is no way to keep your children's hateful attention fixed on you or having them have a wary eye on your will.

And I would equally urge the woman who is in business not to give up her job because her prospective son-in-law invites her to come and live with him. Ante-nuptial and post-nuptial sentiments in a man are seldom the same, and experience shows that the only possible way to keep the peace with in-laws is not to live under the same roof with them. Every mother who goes to live in her son's or daughter's house jeopardizes the peace and happiness of that home.

Therefore, every woman who is approaching the age at which her children are likely to marry and leave her, should begin preparing herself to make her own living in some way if she is poor, and, in any case, she should resolve that come what will, she will live independently of her children, and having them with her, but having her separate interests, and separate life, for in this way, and that way alone, can she keep herself from the sad lot of being a woman who is "in the way."

DEATH OF SAMUEL MUMMA
Mechanicsburg, Pa., April 1.—After several months' illness Samuel Mumma died last night of a complication of diseases. He was 73 years old and moved from his farm in Hampden township to his home in South Market street, Mechanicsburg, four years ago. He was a member of the Lutheran Church at Enola. His wife and one daughter, Mrs. Ella M. Adams, of Mechanicsburg, survive; also a half-brother, Fred Mumma, and eight grandchildren, Walter, Earl, Grace and Samuel Adams, Ralph, Annie, Samuel and Francis Mumma, all of Mechanicsburg, and vicinity. No funeral arrangements have been made at this time.

At the Great "Paquin" Paris Model Exhibition held at the Ritz-Carlton Hotel, New York City, from March third to eighth, the one great fashion novelty shown on almost every dress and blouse was THE JAPANESE COLLAR.

This smart fashion innovation was first described and illustrated by Pictorial Review in the March number, issued February 15th, and continued in the April number.

Once again, as usual, Pictorial Review was the first American publication to present the new style.

Before you decide on your Spring and Summer dresses, visit our pattern department and ask to see the following patterns illustrating the Japanese Collar:

M'CARRICK KILLED BY HORSE'S KICK, A FARMER WRITES

Protection Promised If Body of Missing Lad Is Returned to Parents

Philadelphia, April 1.—Police officials and detectives who have been directing a relentless search for almost three weeks in a vain attempt to recover 7-year-old Warren M'Carrick, are convinced that a crudely-written letter to local attorneys and made public yesterday solves the mystery surrounding the manner in which the boy vanished from near his home at 519 South Nineteenth street.

If the author of the communication is telling the truth, and detectives believe that a portion at least of his statements are correct, Warren M'Carrick was kicked on the head by a horse and killed and his body buried on a farm.

The letter gives a description of how the farmer placed the lad in his wagon after his horse had kicked the boy, and then ascertaining that the boy's fellow had been killed, the man feared a jail term and carried the body to his farm, where he burned the clothing and buried the lad.

So much confidence is placed in the missive that at a conference between Captain of Detectives Robert D. Cameron, Lieutenant James Tate, Detective Frank O'Connor and James M'Carrick, the father of the boy, held in the office of the detective captain last night, it was agreed to offer the writer of the letter complete immunity if his story is proven and the body returned.

Asks For Immunity

Such a guarantee the author asked for. When assured that he would not be prosecuted, the letter stated, the writer would disinter the body and carry it to the M'Carrick home.

The police are now endeavoring to learn the identity of the sender.

TOLLS FIGHT NOW ON IN THE SENATE

dent, and, I think when the committee was organized those who were in favor of the tolls exemption were in the majority.

"A number in the committee would be a reasonable time for discussion."

No Comment by Wilson

The President had no comment to make on the result in the House, but let it be known that he was not ill-feeling over those who, expressing their convictions, opposed the repeal.

"There was no comment made on the speaker's remarks."

Chairman O'Grady said to-day he would call the canal committee to meet Tuesday. It is apparent that an effort is to be made to amend the House bill with a clause asserting the sovereignty of the United States over the canal zone. Estimates of the number of Democrats who will oppose the repeal vary from eight to fourteen.

The repeal is not yet won by any means," said Senator Chamberlain, leading the opponents.

Senator Morris, Republican, introduced an amendment to reaffirm the right of the United States to grant an exemption, if it desired to do so, and to direct the President to begin negotiations to arbitrate Great Britain's protest.

Trying to surrender to Great Britain the right of the United States to obtain any special advantage from our expenditure of $400,000,000, in constructing the Panama canal, the House Democrats, who have stood by the side of the President in the most dramatic fights in his history, last night decided by a majority of 36, to repeal the provision exempting American ships from the payment.

This victory of President Wilson is decisive, but at what cost to the Democratic party only time will tell.

Speaker Champ Clark and Majority Leader Underwood, who have stood by side in many a fight in the Democratic party, battling in the national political arena when Woodrow Wilson was a professor at Princeton, had to bow to the superior strength of the newer leader.

The old-time leaders of the Democratic party, the men who guided the party out of the wilderness, have been thrown back into their trenches, and newer leaders are already threatening to take control of the House.

It had been expected that President Wilson would win, but it was not anticipated that he would have so large a majority. The vote on the first test, 247 to 160. It was indicated then for the vote being 247 to 161.

The President's supporters could count on a majority of 78.

There was some wavering on the second test, which was on the motion to recommit the bill with instructions to amend it so that the President would be authorized to suspend the working of exemption clause for two years. The vote was 176 to 232. Thirty-one Democrats, who were supporting the President, nevertheless supported this compromise. They went back to the repealer on the final vote, which was on the passage of the repeal bill itself, the vote being 247 to 161.

Speaker Clark took part in the closing debate in the House and among his telling sentences were:

"We built the Panama Canal. We bought it on American soil. We have fortified it. We will control it. I would rather see the canal walled up than give Great Britain control of it. I had rather see it filled up with gigantic boulders than to yield one iota of control over it to any foreign nation."

"Now may the God of our fathers who nerved 3,000,000 backwoods Americans to bring their gauge of battle into the face of the mightiest monarch in the world * * * may He lead members to vote so as to prevent this stupendous folly—this unquestionable degradation of the American Republic."

"The amazing request of the President for the repeal, like the peace of God, passeth all understanding."

"It is none of their business (foreign nations) what we do with our coastwise trade."

"The repeal means the practical abandonment of the Monroe Doctrine, which the American people will maintain at all hazards."

Stough Converts 100 Persons at Mt. Carmel

Mount Carmel, Pa., April 1.—"Jesus does not want your compliments; he wants your worship," shouted Evangelist Stough here last night. "Joining the church in itself never got a man anywhere. The church is merely a mechanism, which will break when you put your weight on it in your effort to obtain salvation."

Confirmation only touches the intellectual needs of man. I've never been in a campaign yet where men did not say they intended to quit drinking, swearing and vicious pleasures. You can swear off on April 1 and go on again April 2.

"Some people suggest that if you take away the saloons and wicked houses in a town you will make it clean. But you won't change the town a bit. A good environment won't do it. Adam and Eve had the finest environment in the world, but they fell."

BUST DEVELOPED ONE OUNCE A DAY

A New Simple Easy Home Method That Gives Quick And Permanent Success

Judge from my picture as to the truth of what I say to you—that the crowning feminine attribute is a bust of beautiful proportions, firmness and exquisite development with its lines of infinite charm and grace. It would be worth far more than a two-cent stamp, would it not? Then let me give you my message—let me tell you of what I have learned and let me give you recent pictures of my self to prove what I say—for if you will write me today

I Will Tell You How—FREE

I will tell you gladly and willingly. Why should any woman neglect an opportunity to escape the pain and heartache of being skinny, scrawny angular and unattractive in body? Misery is not our heritage. Nature planned that you—a woman—should have the pulsing lines of warm, living flesh molded after the mother of us all, the description of whom, perfumes our sacred literature with love and admiration for the divinity of woman's form. For why should there be that full aspect—the face of a woman and the form of a man.

Write To Me Today

I don't care how fallen, or flaccid, or undeveloped your bust now is—I want to tell you of a simple home method—I want to tell you how you can gain perfect development one ounce a day. No physical culture—no massage, foolish baths or pastes—no dusters, masks or injurious injections—I want to tell you of an absolutely new method, never before offered or told about—insuring immediate success and permanent beauty.

Send No Money

Just write me a letter—address it to me personally—name's all I will answer it by return mail—and you can develop your bust one ounce a day—you can be what you want to be. Believe me when I say that you will bless me through years of happiness for pointing the way to you and telling you what I know. Please send your letter to-day to the following address:
