WARRING FACTIONS JOLT DEMOCRACY

Talks of Woe Are Heard From Various Portions of Pennsylvania These Days

Here are a few newspaper extracts about the war among the Democrats in this State. There are many others which might have been used.

The Pittsburgh Gazette-Times, speaking about the retirement of Henry H. Wilson as United States marshal and the selection of Joe Howley for the place says:

"The effect of the flare-up over the resignation of Marshal Wilson is feared by Vance C. McCormick, administration candidate for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination in Pennsylvania. There has been so much dissatisfaction over Federal appointments that many disappointed party workers have left McCormick for Michael J. Ryan, who is fighting the Palmer-McCormick leadership in the State. The reorganization 'whore' in the party fears that Wilson in his campaign for Congress in the Twenty-fourth district, will attack Joseph F. Guffey and thereby spread further dissatisfaction in the already depleted ranks of reorganization Democrats."

A dispatch from Bradford to Pittsburgh says: "The Democratic party of McKean county is split badly. Recently County Chairman James G. Paul and others gave a reception for Vance C. McCormick and others. Disgruntled members of the party have passed resolutions, one section of which reads: 'Whereas, the chairman of the Democratic county committee and a few committeemen have assumed the name of the Democratic party of McKean county to discriminate against Michael J. Ryan, Democratic candidate for governor, by their endorsement of Vance C. McCormick for that office, such unauthorized action is in utter disregard of the spirit of the uniform primaries law of Pennsylvania and in violation of the Democratic principles of justice and equality and destructive of the unity and harmony of the party.' A meeting of Democrats is called for Friday evening to give equal favor to Michael J. Ryan's candidacy."

The Philadelphia Ledger says editorially: "Wilson Bailey, accredited collector of funds for the Democratic State committee, is grievously in error if he assume that his present attitude of contempt for the public opinion will be tolerated by the people. We have long ago departed from the beaten political path pursued successfully by men of the Bailey type. The people have a right to know who is solicited for funds in the interests of a party, and they have a right to know the amount of each contribution. In most States laws bearing upon this very subject have been passed and they have proved of wholesome effect."

BONNIWELL AGAIN FLAYS THE BOSSES

Makes Sensational Answer to Vance McCormick at Big Ryan Dinner Last Night

Judge Eugene C. Bonniwell, of Philadelphia, whose specialty appears to be putting sprags into the wheels of the Democratic machine, gave the orators and organs of the bosses opportunity for fresh outbreaks of pain last night at the Ryan dinner in Philadelphia. The dinner was ostensibly in honor of Thomas Jefferson's birthday, but in reality a boost for Ryan. There were 2,284 diners. Henry Budd, veteran reformer, president and Democrats from all over the State gathered. The speakers included Henry C. Niles, of York, who was a leader in the Berry campaign; Thomas H. Greevy, candidate for Lieutenant-Governor in 1910; City Solicitor Ryan, who talked broad Democracy and never mentioned his opponents; and Judge Bonniwell.

for Governor. It was an unusual dinner. It cost only one dollar a plate, but leaders of the Democratic party from nearly every county in the State participated. Tons of food were served; few ate. They talked Democracy, sang of Democracy, cheered Ryan and pledged to his candidacy their unreserved, unqualified support.

Urge Harmony, Too

The Record says: "Generally speaking, the addresses were sharply divided into two kinds—those which threw down the gauntlet to the Palmer-McCormick-Morris combination in the party, and those which offered the olive branch to the reorganizers. Thomas H. Greevy, of Altoona, and Judge Eugene C. Bonniwell, of this city, were bold and outspoken in their denunciation of the use of Federal patronage by Congressman Palmer to advance his own senatorial candidacy and the gubernatorial aspirations of Vance McCormick. Henry C. Niles, of York, more mildly ridiculed the patronage scandal, but Henry Budd, who was toastmaster, and Congressman Michael F. Conry, of New York, strongly advised party harmony. Mr. Budd placed it most forcibly when he said: 'We are not basing our claims upon the weakness of any other Democrat, but on the strength of our own candidate, Mr. Ryan.' Mr. Ryan himself avoided all mention of factional fights. He spoke on the principles of Thomas Jefferson and told of the great mission of Democracy."

A Terrific Attack

Municipal Court Judge Eugene C. Bonniwell made the most sensational speech. In replying to a speech by Vance McCormick, at Danville, in which he said McCormick assailed Ryan as a "bipartisan candidate," the Judge renewed his charge that "the Democratic party is obsessed by a leadership, both new and incompetent," and, he added, "and I now charge corrupt as well." Continuing he said: "The vain and incompetent leadership' of Vance McCormick, Palmer and Morris reduced the Democratic vote in Pennsylvania from 448,000 in 1902 to 395,000 in 1912. This leadership has brought Pennsylvania to the brink of a nauseating scandal. The corruption of the little post offices in York and Adams counties are only bolts compared to the cancer under the surface.

"When in the history of the Democratic party was a man authorized by their official bagman and collect the contributions of the petty officeholders as this Wilson Bailey has done. State Chairman Morris deliberately mis-stated facts when he charged the offenses in York and Adams counties to the Congressman.

"The contract for the $75 was made with Mr. Morris' collector, and as Morris says he is thoroughly honorable, and has his entire confidence, it must be assumed that he did those things with his knowledge and approval. Does not their own course make this true? Mitchell Palmer himself violated the Federal statutes when he permitted circular letters to go out containing his name, soliciting contributions from officeholders. No gang organization, Democratic or Republican, ever flished the assessment of contributions to support in a primary light in behalf of their own candidate as these three worthy gentlemen are now doing.

"Instead of this being a contest of reorganization against a bipartisan campaign, it is a contest of selfish, dishonest marplots in control of the State machinery against the honest Democracy of Pennsylvania. Were it possible that this lame, lamentable, ludicrous leadership were to be continued, it would only serve as a warrant to blackmail the petty officeholders and furnish a subscription list of the Harrisburg Patriot, perchance pay some more traveling expenses and telephone bills for Mitchell Palmer and buy a peacock feather for Roland Morris."
