MISSIONARY TELLS OF JAPANESE EARTHQUAKE

Miss Newbold Says It's Hard to Walk on Steps Bobbing Up and Down

Reports of the Japanese earthquake of March 15, as cabled to America, seem to have been somewhat exaggerated in regard to the extent of the damage, according to a letter which has just been received from Miss Elizabeth G. Newbold, of Lancaster, a missionary of the Protestant Episcopal church at Akita, the center of the tremor.

Miss Newbold wrote to her parents in Lancaster on Sunday afternoon, a few hours after the shocks, and while at that time it was not possible to get full reports it seems that the damage was comparatively small, although everyone had a bad scare.

The letter of Miss Newbold to her parents was forwarded to relatives here to-day. In it she says: "I have understood that the longer people live here the more they fear earthquakes and I can believe it now, for until now I have not been the slightest bit afraid, and at the other one six years ago, I stayed peacefully in bed and waited till it was over, but I assure you there was no question about staying in bed last night; I was out really before it began, waked by a premonition, I suppose, and I never once thought of my slippers and kimono kept by my bed for emergencies."

Out Into the Night "I stood for a second by the swaying bed, saw the large and very expensive mirror swinging out into the room and stepped over to rescue it, and then as I heard the crashing and smashing and felt the swaying all about me, decided I had better save my head instead of the mirror, and went to stand in the doorway, and I had always heard the safe place. When I got that far, I decided that I wanted to have as short a distance to fall as possible, and made for the stairs, bare feet and nightgown (caoton flannel), and I can tell you it is some experience to try to walk down stairs when they are bobbing and swaying about at every angle, so that you are never sure just where to put your feet, nor whether there will be any step to put it on when you get there. But I got down, and got over the debris of a flower vase in the hall, gained a fleeting impression of things generally sliding about, and breathed a grateful sigh of relief as I reached the front door. I stood there till I could see whether the inside or out was the safest, and as the shock subsided, and I felt it safe to go through the house, I made my way back to the rear to see how the family was, being immensely surprised to have heard no sound from them. Both were in bed, Midori absolutely unaware of anything unusual was going on, and Klau in the second story told me she was too scared to move and so thankful to hear my voice; satisfying myself there was no fire anywhere, and that the roof and walls were intact, I calmly went back to bed, as the warmest place I knew of."
