

MARINES IN FULL CONTROL OF VERA CRUZ

mination during the night came from the interiors of the houses. Much of the firing by the American marines and bluejackets was at long range and to a great extent during the night the city stood in the center of the city in which some determined Mexicans still occupied positions. At dawn some bodies could be seen lying about the streets beyond the American lines.

The efforts of Rear Admiral Fletcher late last night to find someone who exercised command over the Mexicans and to suggest that he call off his men in the interests of humanity were unsuccessful. The rear admiral hesitated to open fire with shell on the city, but the presence of riflemen hidden behind the copings of the flat-roofed buildings, which afforded capital shelter for the defending sharpshooters, made the use of artillery almost imperative to prevent sacrificing the lives of more Americans.

Of the twenty-one bluejackets and marines wounded in yesterday's fighting four are seriously hurt, according to the report of the surgeons to-day. There was no cannon firing from the Mexican side in yesterday's fighting and it is supposed their artillery pieces were taken from the city early in the day. With the exception of a few shots from the light field pieces of the bluejackets and a few from the Prairie it was a contest of rifles.

Bravery was shown by the Americans who among the youngsters wearing the blue jackets of their vessels behaved as well under fire as the marines.

In the earlier part of the engagement some detachments of the Americans who were guarding the approaches to the central part of the city stood without flinching while bullets from the rifles of the Mexicans sang about their ears.

CAPTAIN RUSH CONFIDENT

Captain Rush was taken aback when he knew would result in loss of life to his men and possibly noncombatants. While machine guns played their music and the rifle fire added to the din he remarked to the newspaper men his deep regret at the resistance of the Mexicans and expressed the hope that they would not persist until he had to call on the ships' guns for bombardment.

"It would be too bad to bad," he said, "to shoot up this town. I hope I will not have to do it."

Lieutenant-Commander Buchanan, second in command, was close to Captain Rush in the afternoon and he knew what he knew would result in loss of life to his men and possibly noncombatants. While machine guns played their music and the rifle fire added to the din he remarked to the newspaper men his deep regret at the resistance of the Mexicans and expressed the hope that they would not persist until he had to call on the ships' guns for bombardment.

The fiercest fighting occurred an hour or two after the opening shots. For a time the rifle and machine gun fire gave the people of Vera Cruz and the foreign refugees aboard the steamers in the harbor more thrills than most of them had ever had.

THRILL UPON THRILL

There was no charging of forces in a dramatic action, but the spirited manner in which the marines and bluejackets held their ground and, firing at will, cracked back at the enemy, gave thrill enough. A large percentage of the marines wore across their dun-colored shirts one or all three bars indicating marksmanship, and they were practicing, many of them for the first time, at living targets.

Like the Mexicans, the Americans also took advantage of the roofs. The top of the terminal station afforded an excellent position for sharpshooters.

The liveliest separate action of the day was that at the customs house and the water front adjacent. Mexicans had been sending across from the buildings near by an ugly and scattering fire and the American riflemen ashore had had the greatest difficulty in dislodging them. A little flotilla of launches, each carrying a one-pounder in the stern, advanced under the cover of the Prairie's three-inch guns. The one-pounders did viciously into the positions and shells from the three-inch guns finished the work nicely. There was no more trouble from that quarter.

1,000 MEN UNDER MAAS

At the most the number of men under General Maas did not aggregate more than one thousand.

Dramatic Prelude Lacking Events leading up to landing and battle were singularly lacking in dramatic features. Soon after 9 o'clock yesterday morning Consul Canada called General Maas, Huerta's representative, on the telephone and said to him: "General, I am instructed to tell you that the forces of the United States are about to take the town and summon you to surrender. I can guarantee in the name of humanity not to offer resistance or attempt to move any railroad trains and to assist us keeping order."

General Maas replied: "It is impossible for me to comply with your demand for surrender as I am acting under orders to the contrary. I desire to talk with you."

Canada told him he had no instructions to parley and rang off. In turn he talked over the telephone with the chief of police and the jefe politico, to whom he repeated the request that they assist in keeping order. He obtained no definite reply from either of them, both saying they would have to consult Maas.

Canada's last official communication was made to Senor Azcarazaga, the customs collector, who asked for two hours in which to secure papers and valuables of this office. "Stay where you are," advised Canada. "You and the effects in your office will be perfectly safe."

These exchanges between Canada and the Mexican officials occurred without the general's public knowledge. Scarcely 100 persons among the Americans and refugees actually knew that a landing was to be made to-day. The news quickly spread among the Mexicans but few believed it.

In the Vera Cruz business center "nooning" begins at 11 and lasts until 2. Shops close up tightly. Nothing but restaurants and cantinas are open. The streets are almost deserted, while people breakfast and afterward indulge in a siesta until the intense heat of mid-day has abated.

This is what was happening in the city to-day when the Americans came. It looked as though the Stars and Stripes would be flying over the serpent banner of Mexico over "the heroic city of the true cross," as Vera Cruz proudly calls itself, without the skip of a pulse beat in the plegmatic life of the city by the sea. But the occupation turned out to be considerable show after all, though tame enough to the Americans who went through the hell of Mexico City's "decena tragica" or "ten tragic days," February a year ago. But it was quite lively enough to satisfy the neophytes.

Marines Come Ashore By 10.10 the Prairie, lying between the ancient fortress of San Juan de Ulloa and the pier in the harbor, a bit to the right of it, could be seen dropping boat after boat. Through field glasses, standing on the end of the dock fronting the pier, the hills which mark the southern limit of the harbor, could be discerned launches, a half dozen of them, throwing long strings of cutters and whaleboats, wallowing shoreward from the Florida, two miles off shore.

Like yellow leaves dropping from frost-touched trees, the Prairie's khaki-clad marines tumbled smartly down the gangways to their places in the boats. Plainly to be heard, bugle calls, telling the lucky chaps told off to be of the landing parties that the opportunity for which they have been aching and sickening for more than a year to be up and at the job had arrived.

General Gustave Maas, commander of the garrison of Vera Cruz, left the city in a carriage at noon yesterday, half an hour after the first boat load

United States Decides to "Sit Tight" in Vera Cruz For Next Few Days

By Associated Press

Washington, D. C., April 22.—American operations in Mexico at Vera Cruz took on renewed aspects of war to-day when Rear Admiral Badger landed more marines from the Atlantic fleet and the United States forces proceeded to take the entire city.

While the orders of the President were being carried out to the letter it was made apparent in conferences at the White House that the United States will "sit tight" at Vera Cruz and that no further steps of pacification will be taken at this time.

For the present, it was declared on high authority, the forces at Vera Cruz would hold their position. Huerta said that the government means business and that no action would be taken at Tampico unless there are retaliatory acts on the part of the Huerta government.

No orders, it was stated, have been sent to the American officers with reference to landing at Tampico, the only order being that the fleet should be directed to ships sent to Vera Cruz. Admiral Badger will remain at Vera Cruz until further notice.

No advancement farther than Vera Cruz on the part of the United States forces, it was made plain, would be undertaken unless some overt act on the part of Huerta and his followers should precipitate further trouble and make more aggressive action necessary.

Despite the purpose of the administration to confine the operations at Vera Cruz, the situation took on an ominous aspect which indicated that no serious consequences cannot be averted. Though not officially announced, it was reported on high authority that Senor Alcazar, the Mexican charge d'affaires, had been directed by Huerta to ask for his passports and that the American charge at Mexico City, Mr. O'Shaughnessy, had been asked to leave.

With this prospective breaking off of diplomatic negotiations, together with the reports of aroused feeling among the troops, the feeling here is that it may be necessary in the near future to resist active attacks from Mexican federal soldiers.

Everything in readiness for actual warfare is being made. The congress to-day took the first step in justifying the President's course thus far.

Philadelphia Navy Yard in Readiness to Receive Marines Ordered There

By Associated Press

Philadelphia, April 22.—The Philadelphia navy yard is in readiness to receive the regiment of marines ordered here for Mexican service. Several detachments of the yard, to-day and the remainder are under orders to report by noon to-morrow. There are 243 marines at the yard. The regiment which will go south to-morrow will sail Tuesday night.

The transport Morro Castle, chartered by the government in New York yesterday, arrived here late this afternoon.

The scout cruiser Salem, under orders to prepare to sail, is ready for sea duty. Work is proceeding on the battleships Ohio, Missouri and Idaho and the cruiser Tennessee in anticipation of a sudden call to send these ships away.

A government tug arrived at the yard yesterday to convey the submarine G-9 south. It will probably depart Friday.

Officers and men at the Philadelphia navy yard have a particularly personal interest in the developments at Vera Cruz, where many of the marines at the front were assembled at this yard and are personally known to officers and men still here. And again, the fact that many of the officers of the fleet make their headquarters at the naval station and are constantly inquiring for news from Mexico.

Fletcher Asks People in Vera Cruz to Assist Him in Restoring Order

By Associated Press

Washington, D. C., April 22.—In Admiral Fletcher's proclamation to the people of Vera Cruz he called upon them to assist in the restoration of order by cooperating with the United States forces. He said they could carry out their municipal government as before and that the United States merely would hold the customs house and patrol the city.

Admiral Fletcher's proclamation to the mayor, chief of police and citizens of Vera Cruz read: "It has become necessary for the naval forces of the United States of America now at Vera Cruz to land and assume military control of the customs wharves of Vera Cruz. Your cooperation is requested to preserve order and prevent loss of life.

"It is not the intention of the United States naval forces to interfere with the administration of the civil affairs of Vera Cruz, but it is necessary for the purpose of maintaining a condition of law and order to enforce such sanitary conditions as are needed to meet military requirements."

"It is desired that civil officials of Vera Cruz shall continue in the peaceful pursuits of their occupations. Upon these conditions full protection will be given to the city by the United States naval forces.

"It is enjoined upon all inhabitants and property owners to prevent firing of individuals from the shelter of their houses upon United States forces or upon anyone else; such firing by irregulars not members of an organized military force is contrary to the laws of war; if persisted in it will call for severe measures."

Canada Says Customs House Was Burning

By Associated Press

Washington, D. C., April 22.—American Consul Canada cabled under date of 9 a. m. to-day that the total American forces ashore numbered 3,000. They were well into the city and had the situation in hand.

Consul Canada's message read: "Have sent messengers to all hotel-keepers to re-open their establishments which will be given full protection. Customs house and warehouse on fire but not extinguished. Now informed that American troops have been ordered to advance to take possession of the city. Informed also that first two sections of the train carrying American refugees from Mexico City arrived before the fighting commenced yesterday morning. Third section on its way but not heard from. Major Catlin with a force of 300 marines just landed to assist Captain Nevill, says total number of forces landed 3,000. Our forces now well in the center of city."

Germany Will Not Send Additional Warships

By Associated Press

Washington, April 22.—Admiral Badger has reported the arrival at Vera Cruz of the battleship Minnesota and the naval transport Hancock with marines from New Orleans. These ships had stopped at Tampico and were ordered to proceed to Vera. The admiral reported that he had plenty of marines now to control the situation.

FEAR FOR SAFETY OF O'SHAUGHNESSY IN MEXICO CITY

By Associated Press

Washington, D. C., April 22.—The dispatches from Vera Cruz that reached the State Department to-day developed that communication with the American Embassy at Mexico City had been completely cut off. Consul Canada said that all efforts to communicate with the Embassy, where Charge O'Shaughnessy is located, had failed. The department has not heard from the Embassy since Monday and some anxiety was felt as to conditions in the Mexican capital. The absence of news led to various reports that violence was rife in Mexico City. Secretary Bryan appeared worried about the situation.

Dispatches from Consul Canada stated that the Huerta forces in Vera Cruz had cut off all means of communication with the capital.

NOMINATIONS IN ENORMOUS VOLUME

By Associated Press

Over 2,800 Petitions Have Been Put on Record by Aspirants For Offices

Approximately 2,800 nominating petitions for the May primary have been filed at the Capitol by candidates for State-wide, congressional and legislative nomination; the number being 500 in excess of the number filed in 1912. Close to 1,000 petitions were filed in the last twenty-four hours of the period which expired Tuesday at midnight and it will take several days to properly examine and record the names. Many of those filed in the final rush were for men who are candidates on two or more tickets, filing for three party nominations being common in Philadelphia, Allegheny, Luzerne and some other counties.

Eighty papers were found deficient because lack of requisite number of signatures or affidavits and were rejected, half a dozen being refiled in the final rush. Twenty-five night Fifteen papers which reached the Capitol after midnight were refused, two arriving an hour after the department closed and the remainder being in mail to-day.

Scores of supplemental petitions were filed, especially for candidates for State wide nominations. Friday at 4 p. m. will be the time when the final tally will be made. After that the preparation of certificates of papers filed for county commissioners for printing of the ballots will begin.

15 HARRISBURG BOYS OPPOSING THE ENEMY

By Associated Press

Charles F. Schory, 1225 Derry street. The latter was a gunner's mate on the Maryland until six months ago.

A number of Steelton people are now in the Mexican war zone. Mrs. Harvey A. Neil, wife of Harvey A. Neil, a prominent business man of the borough, is now in the zone. Another now visiting relatives in Douglas, Arizona, one of the border towns. In case of raids across the border by Mexican soldiers or bandits, Douglas, Arizona, would be one of the first towns in the danger zone.

On Rear Admiral Badger's flagship, the Utah, are two Steelton boys, Charles McCoy, a petty officer, and Joe Marvetic, a sailor. McCoy is the son of Mr. Charles McCoy and has been in the navy for years. Marvetic is the son of Marko Marvetic, a South Second street business man.

Captain Frank R. McCoy, U. S. A., of Lewistown, Pa., will be an aid to Major General Leonard Wood, who is to command the army in the event of war with Mexico. The captain was an aid to General Wood in Cuba and in the Philippines. He has been a member of the general staff at Washington for the past year and more. His father, the late General Thomas F. McCoy, fought in the former war between this country and Mexico, with the rank of captain and during the Civil War was a colonel of the One Hundred and Seventh Regiment, Pennsylvania Volunteer.

Lieutenant Frank K. Ross of the Sixth Cavalry of this city, now at the Mounted Service School at Fort Riley, Kansas, will also see service at the front in the event of hostilities. Lieutenant Ross is the son of George K. Ross and Captain McCoy is his nephew.

BASEBALL IS GREAT ADVERTISING MEDIUM SAYS TRI-STATE HEAD

By Associated Press

Chamber of Commerce Heartily Endorses Work of League in This City

Baseball as a business stimulant and publicity factor in any community received emphatic endorsement from members of the Harrisburg Chamber of Commerce and business men at a noonday luncheon to-day.

The keynote of the baseball campaign which practically opened to-day came from George M. Graham, president of the Tri-State League. President Graham was introduced by George B. Tripp, president of the chamber, as the man who has been picked to rejuvenate the Tri-State League. Mr. Graham called attention to the wide publicity baseball has given other cities. He said in part: "Undoubtedly the best advertised city in the world is New York. A large part of this advertising it gets from its baseball team. Men know the Giants who could not name offhand ten of the industries of the leading city of the continent."

"Prior to the recent world's series between the Giants and the Athletics of the American League, Mayor Kline, of New York, sent an invitation to Mayor Blankenship, of Philadelphia, to see the games of the series. In his invitation he said, 'We want you to see the Giants wipe up the Polo Grounds with your team.'"

"This was not boasting on the part of the chief executive of the metropolis. He merely voiced the confidence of the city. He believed the Athletics would be defeated, and that the Giants would win. There was nothing in his records of the teams to justify these predictions. The Giants had twice been defeated in a world's series, one of the times by the Athletics. The baseball dope against any victory for the Giants, but the confidence of New York that everything with the New York stamp must win forced the expression of confidence that was shared in by the Mayor and by every fan from the foremost down to the smallest."

"Baseball has had a lot to do with this advertising of the metropolis. It has been considered impossible here to-day, as Adjutant General Chase refused to send more troops into the field."

"Not a newspaper but has given thousands of columns to this aggregation, and the entire city has been the gainer."

"What is true of New York is true also of the smaller cities. You gentlemen would be surprised if you could know to what extent this is true."

Back of Tri-State "The Tri-State has back of it a great prestige. It is no longer an experiment. It is an established institution. It has become famous in the country over when it ran as an outlaw and dared to oppose the powers of organized baseball."

Governor John K. Tener was unable to be present, having been called away to attend the funeral of a friend at Charleroi. President Tripp heartily endorsed the movement and wanted to be counted as one of the local boosters.

Another speaker was W. Harry Baker, president of the Pennsylvania Exhibition Company, backers of the Harrisburg club. Mr. Baker told how a few men had stood by the game and were pleased over the prospects of the Harrisburg Chamber of Commerce. Short addresses were made by Dr. Harvey A. Smith, Manager George Cockill, William H. Wagoner, Mercer E. Tate, A. E. Bachman and E. J. Stackpole.

Three Persons Die in Early Morning Blaze

By Associated Press

Philadelphia, April 22.—Three persons lost their lives in a fire that destroyed their home here early to-day. The dead are Julius E. Schaefer, 32 years of age, his wife, Augusta, 75, and their son, Paul, 52. Mrs. Paul Schaefer, who weighs more than 300 pounds, jumped from a window and fell on a man. Neither was badly hurt.

HELD FOR ENTRY Walter Unger and Wilson Pink were held by Mayor John K. Royal this afternoon on a charge of felonious entry. Both boys are 18 years of age. They were caught last night by Patrolman Coleman inside of the cigar store of J. H. Wagner, 1721 North Third street. They had in their possession goods valued at $14 and $1.10 in cash.

KREIDER P. O. BILL PASSES HOUSE; NOW GOES TO THE SENATE

By Associated Press

Washington, April 22.—The House to-day passed Congressman Kreider's bill appropriating an additional $75,000 for the remodeling and building of an addition to the Harrisburg Post Office.

This is the only bill of its kind that has been passed by the House this session. The measure now goes to the Senate. Precedent makes it at most rule that measures of this sort are immediately passed by the upper body when finally put through by the House.

This additional appropriation will permit the building to be built up three stories instead of one as at first proposed. Postmaster Frank C. Sites declares that the additional space is absolutely necessary because of the growth of the postal business in this city. The bill just passed was favorably returned from committee March 24.

City's First Planning Commission Meets to Organize This Afternoon

By Associated Press

Harrisburg's first City Planning Commission met this afternoon at 4 o'clock at the offices of Commissioner M. Harvey Taylor, superintendent of parks and public property and formally organized.

The superintendent of parks met with the members of the new commission. Edward S. Herman, George W. Stelly, Benjamin F. Umberger, Francis Jorian Hall and George A. Shreiner, and following the election of the president and secretary the tentative plans of the commission were discussed. Miss Anna Custison, clerk to Commissioner Taylor, was also chosen clerk of the new commission.

Deputy Prothonotary Elmer Hummel to Give Up Job on July 1?

By Associated Press

County political and courthouse circles considerably to-day over a report to the effect that Elmer E. Hummel, deputy prothonotary under Prothonotary Harry F. Loller, was to resign about July 1. Rumor was equalized by the names of Ross A. Walters, one of the younger Francis Jorian Hall and George A. Shreiner, and following the election of the president and secretary the tentative plans of the commission were discussed. Miss Anna Custison, clerk to Commissioner Taylor, was also chosen clerk of the new commission.

Prothonotary Holler said he knows of no such change.

Harrisburg's Guardsmen Ready For the Field

By Associated Press

Harrisburg soldiers are all ready to answer a call to duty and to go to the front. Following the inspection of Companies D and I last night every member stepped to the front and volunteered his services.

Colonel Joseph B. Hutchison, commanding the Eighth Regiment, in a short address following the inspection of the Eighth Regiment headquarters said his regiment would be the first in the field.

The inspection was made by Lieutenant Charles A. Hunt of the United States Army who complimented the members of the local companies and Colonel Hutchison. Lieutenant Hunt said the local soldiers are desirable men. Following the inspection a luncheon was served.
