KELLER MURDER CASE MAY CONTINUE WEEK

Strong Evidence Given Against Defendant When Court Trial Opens This Morning

Special to The Telegraph Chambersburg, Pa., May 4.—The second week of the trial of Zella Keller Gerholdt for murder of her husband, Floyd Keller, who died November 29, 1912, began this morning and promises to run much of this week. The Commonwealth has examined over twenty of its only lay witnesses and the defense has sixty-eight witnesses. It is said. One big development of to-day's evidence was that Mrs. Keller refused to remain in the room where her husband was being killed. "I won't stay to see him die," she said. "If you don't stay in the room I'll call Ike," referring to Heckman, her alleged lover, who was a close neighbor. To handle the mass of testimony an alternate stenographer was brought in. H. L. Williams, of Gettysburg, will aid D. O. Gehl, official reporter. Trooper Curtis Davies, the State's detective, and Isaac Herman, lover of Zella, have not yet been called.

ALMSHOUSE INMATES ELOPE AND WED

[Continued From First Page] pected of back that evening, as she was not given permission to remain away over the night.

When she failed to return, however, the excited friends of the bride just couldn't hold the news any longer. To the amazed Steward they explained that the "cousin" had been in the neighborhood; that Charley and Lizzie had met week ago when Charley first came to the poorhouse; that they—well, they got to think a lot of each other, and that it was arranged that when Lizzie saved enough they were to be married. From all appearance the couple seemed like any other middle-aged happy couple who stroll in the marriage bureau from time to time. And they had answered satisfactorily every one of the questions, even unto the final one as to whether either had been an inmate within the five years of any pauper's institution or county poor home. And both answered "No." Neither could write so they made their "mark"—and got the license.

WILLIAMSPORT TO GET A BATTERY

Governor Tells Representative Ulman, Ex-Mayor Wolf and Others of Plans

Governor Tener to-day told a delegation of Williamsport citizens that the three infantry companies of the Twelfth Regiment located at Williamsport would likely be changed into a battery of field artillery, but that action would hardly be taken until it was determined whether State troops would be called into the field by the national government. The committee came to enter a protest against disbandment of here, last night, calling attention to the fact that the city had given a donation toward the construction of the State armory. The Governor replied that there was no intention to withdraw military organizations, but that the battery would take the place of the infantry and keep Williamsport on the military map. A battery is composed of 132 men and two brothers also survive: Mrs. Annie Hoffman, this city, and Mrs. Mary Quigley, Los Angeles, Cal.; John and Joseph Wagner, both of Lebanon. Funeral services will be held Thursday, at 9 a. m., at the St. Lawrence Church, burial to be made in the Mt. Calvary Cemetery.

On Tuesday there will be a public hearing before the commission on the question of the installation of the passenger cars of the various street railway companies; and on the same day the railroad and street railway companies will be heard as to the scope and legal effect of the commission's order issued January 23, in the matter of providing drinking water and sanitary drinking cups in the cars and agency stations.

PRESIDENT WILSON SELECTS OLNEY

Official Washington as well as banking circles generally are awaiting the announcement of the full personnel of the Federal Reserve Board with intense interest, as it formally will set in motion the new currency law which was signed December 23 last. With the selection of the twelve regional reserve banks the organization of the board has been the most vital step in the operation of the new currency law. The banks are being organized and the expansion of officials is that within another month the entire system will be in full swing, although there are certain transitions which will occupy a greater length of time.

Olney Smiles When Told of Selection

With Mr. Olney representing New England and Mr. Warburg, New York, it was expected that the other members to be selected would represent the south, the middle west and the far west. The appointees serve ten years.
