Never Mind How Strong You Are—What d'ye Know? That's the point—"What d'ye KNOW?" To-day it's a battle of wits—and brains win. Muscle and brawn don't count so much as they used to. In the fight for good jobs and big salaries it's brains—not brawn—that win. "What d'ye KNOW?" is the one great question that draws the line between defeat and victory—between "wages" and "salary"—between you and the Boss. What do YOU know? Are YOU so expert in some line of work that you can "make good" as a foreman, superintendent, or manager? If not, why don't you mark and mail the attached coupon and permit the International Correspondence Schools to show you how you CAN "make good" on a big job? For 23 years the I. C. S. have been showing men how to do better work and earn bigger salaries. Every month over 400 students write of promotions or salary increases through I. C. S. training. What the I. C. S. are doing for these men they can do for YOU. No matter where you live, how old you are, what hours you work, or how limited your education—if you can read and write and are ambitious to learn the I. C. S. can train you in your own home, during your spare time, for a more important and better-paying position. Mark and mail the attached coupon—it won't obligate you in the least—and the I. C. S. will show you how you can acquire this salary-raising ability by their simple and easy methods. It will cost you nothing to investigate—it may cost a lifetime of remorse if you don't. Mark and Mail the Coupon NOW.

Aunt Este's Stories For Children

My dear little ones: I wonder whether you ever heard that old song: "There's a merry brown thrush sitting up in a tree, He is singing to you, he is singing to me." Aunt Este shall never forget it, for it was one of the first songs she learned when a little girl. So now she is going to tell you a story of the merry Brown Thrush and the name of it shall be "How the Thrush Eggs Were Saved From Mr. Blacksnake." Once upon a time in a great forest lived a dear little Brown Thrush. He had a wife and five little eggs. He was very happy and chuck full of glee. Only one thing ever made her stop to think; and that was those five little eggs in the nest in the tree. My, how she loved them! She would sit and watch them all day long, dear little ones, those five little eggs would soon be five dear little baby birds. Mrs. I. Tennis was one, and sang and chirped and took care of the tiny eggs. But once in awhile she had to leave the nest; for her little wings became cramped, and her little feet stiff, and more than all, her little stomach grew very empty and she had to find something to eat. But whenever she had to leave the nest of the five little eggs—she breathed this sweet prayer: "Dear Father watching far above, Look down in tenderness and love, And bring me home safe and alive, So I may hatch wee birdies five." Then away she flew in search of food and exercise, always trusting that all would be well when she returned. Now close to where Mrs. Brown Thrush had her nest—in fact on the very same tree street—lived a wicked old fellow by the name of Mr. Blacksnake. Only he lived in the lower end of the street, where everything was ugly and muddy and dark, while Mrs. Brown Thrush lived in the beautiful end of the street where everything was full of life and song. One day old Mr. Blacksnake watched Mother Brown Thrush make ready for a little trip. He watched her say her little prayer, put on her brown bonnet, and start off. "Aha! Oho!" Mrs. Brown Thrush, much good that prayer is going to you!" laughed Mr. Blacksnake. "You see I happened to be right on hand this time, and prayers or nothing else can save your eggs. I shall have a good meal, and you will have no eggs nor any baby state!" Aha! Oho!" which shows what a very wicked fellow Mr. Blacksnake was.

Quietly, cautiously, sneakily crept Mr. Blacksnake. Along the branch of the tree street, up to the very front door of Mrs. Brown Thrush, but just as he was about to stick his head into that nest—guess what? "Peck, peck, peck," went the tiny beaks in Mr. Blacksnake's eyes. "Ow! Ow! Ow!" shouted Mr. Blacksnake. "Have mercy! Have mercy! I will crawl back home again. Only let me have my eggs." But there was no mercy given. The little brown birds were fighting for their lives, and for the eggs of Mrs. Brown Thrush, who was away taking her exercise. They knew Mr. Blacksnake and his family. They knew how wicked and treacherous he was. He would try to do the same thing over, as soon as he had the chance. "You see, Mr. Blacksnake," sang they. "This is war. And you die." And so, indeed, indeed Mr. Blacksnake did. For at last he lost his eyes, and could not help himself and soon fell a helpless quack to the ground. When Mrs. Brown Thrush returned she found an excited crowd of little birds sitting around her nest, watching a long venomous thing which was strung on the ground. "What has happened? What has happened?" cried she. "Are my babies hurt?" "Our babies are safe, dear neighbor," said one little brown bird, "so calm yourself. We have waged war on Mr. Blacksnake, and he can never again try to harm any of ours. Little neighbor, we were very glad to see you, and for the eggs of Mrs. Brown Thrush, he crawled up to yours. She set the alarm. You know the rest. We all left our work and play at once and came to protect your eggs." Tears stood in the eyes of the trembling little brown bird. "How can I ever thank you, dear friends," she said. "And how can I ever thank the Dear Father who heard my little prayer. I know it was He who caused little neighbor Sweet Voice Brown Thrush to look out her door at just the right moment." Lovingly, AUNT ESTE.
