ARREST HARRISBURG MAN FOR MURDER

State road, one mile east of Mechanicsburg. Mr. Rupp is a dairyman and resides in a double house. He has a wife and two children. In the adjoining house reside Mr. Rupp's mother and a brother, Jacob. The Rupp's get up about 3 o'clock every morning. Mrs. Rupp, wife of the murdered farmer was first awakened by the noise of a wagon on the road. Going to the window she saw the wagon stop and a man alight. The man, she says, came toward the barn. Mrs. Rupp had just called her husband when the burglar alarm rang from the chicken house to the residence started to ring. "He's After Chickens!" "That fellow is after chickens," shouted Mrs. Rupp as her husband started down stairs with a revolver. Rupp got up and looked out of the window. She saw her husband walking toward the chicken house. A flash, she says, came from the direction of the chicken house. Then, says Mrs. Rupp, her husband fired a shot. Then, according to the wife of the dead man, came three shots in succession and she saw her husband fall. In the meantime Rupp's mother, Mrs. John Rupp, Sr., heard the shots. The mother reached the window just as her son fell and sobbed out, "They've killed Jack!"

Brother Rushes to Help
Edgar Rupp's brother, who made his home with the murdered man, was also awakened. As he was about to dress Edgar says he heard several shots fired. Rushing down to the front porch Edgar says he noticed a figure lying along the road opposite the house. In the darkness Edgar approached the injured man and found it was his brother. Rupp's assailants fled after Edgar was seen approaching.

Mother's Story
Mrs. Rupp, mother of the murdered man said: "I think it was after 2 o'clock when I heard someone stopping in front of our house. I got out of bed and went into the next room to look out the window to see who was there. I didn't want to look through my window because I had a light burning and they would see me, so I went into the other room. I saw a man walking towards the wagon shed. He had a flash light. A few minutes later I heard shots fired. I couldn't say how many. I threw open the window and I heard someone yell, 'Come or Jim!'

and a wagon started off. Rupp's mother says she believes Bent had accomplished his purpose.

Word of the shooting was immediately sent to Mechanicsburg and the Harrisburg police were notified to be on the lookout for the murderer or murderers. Lieutenant Worden once assigned his men to guard the river bridges. The officers hid back of the bushes near the western section of the bridge. About 5 o'clock they noticed a wagon stop at the western end of the bridge and saw the tollkeeper ready for the toll.

Waiting until the wagon was opposite the clump of bushes back of which they were hiding, the three patrolmen stepped out, each with a revolver in his hand and ordered Bent to stop. Bent was holding his wounded arm. He was in a dazed condition and offered no resistance. The three officers climbed into the wagon and brought Bent to the police station. A loaded 38-caliber revolver was found in the suspect's hip pocket. Bent was taken to the Harrisburg Hospital, where his arm was dressed. One of the bullets from Rupp's revolver hit Bent's wrist.

Some Cry 'Lynch Him!'
When news reached Mechanicsburg that the suspected murderer was being brought into town in a wagon hundred of people made a rush to Main street.

It was with the greatest difficulty that the police made their way through the streets with their prisoner. Someone in the crowd barked out "Lynch him" and it was necessary for Chief of Police Martin to threaten to shoot any person who made an effort to take Bent out of his hands. On an early train from Carlisle came District Attorney Alexander. He visited the Rupp home and got the story of the shooting from the relatives of the dead man. Later the district attorney returned to the Cumberland county jail at Carlisle, where the accused man told his story. He said:

Bent's Story
"I am a huckster and live in Harrisburg. I was selling produce in and about Mechanicsburg yesterday and was on my way home about 2 o'clock. As I passed the Rupp house the harbor called to me. I got out of the wagon to fix it.

"When I was about to step back into the wagon someone—I guess it was John Rupp—pointed a revolver in my face and told me to throw up my hands. I started to make an explanation when the man fired. I fired back and when I saw the man drop I got into the wagon and started for Harrisburg. The first shot fired hit me on the wrist, but I did not feel it until I started for Harrisburg. I shot back in self-defense and there was no one else with me in the wagon."

Blood on Wagon
The wagon in which Bent, in which were three chicken coops, one hen and several bags, with the horse was placed in charge of a Mechanicsburg Livestock dealer. On one side of the wagon are several bloodstains. Bent said first that the marks were strawberry stains, but later admitted that the marks were made by his bloody fingers after he had bandaged up his wounded arm.

Notwithstanding the early hour at which the shooting occurred, hundreds of people flocked to the Rupp home, which was known throughout Cumberland county and in Harrisburg. He and his wife, Mrs. Rupp, lived on a street market and had a milk route. Rupp was 40 years of age. He was a grandson of the late Judge Rupp, of Cumberland county. Besides the widow, two children survive, a daughter, Romaine, aged 10 years, and a son, Paul, 5 years. Other survivors are the mother, his brothers, Edgar and Jacob, and two sisters, Mrs. Henry Albright and Mrs. Park Brenneman.

Coroner's Verdict
An investigation and postmortem was made by Dr. J. H. Dearwater, coroner, and Dr. J. B. Spengler, of Mechanicsburg, the attending physician. The verdict was as follows:

"John Rupp, known to his death on the morning of May 21 by a bullet wound, the bullet penetrating the left side of the body, passing through the lung a short distance below the heart, lodging in the right lung, the cause of death was due to hemorrhages following the penetration of the lung. It is believed the bullet was fired from a revolver in the hands of one John Bent, alias Stine, of Harrisburg."

Following the postmortem the bullet was cut from the right side of the body. The bullet was 35 grains in weight and was found in the shells found on Bent.
