RATE CASES STILL HOLDING INTEREST

Furnace Allowances at Cambria Steel Works Under Discussion

The Public Service Commission today took up a new phase of the industrial railroad situation when it heard the objections of the Cambria Steel Company to cancellation of what are known as furnace allowances by trunk lines. The Cambria's case relates to charges at its works in Johnstown and is separate from the cases of the Union and Monongahela connecting railroads of the Pittsburgh district, which won their first fight against the trunk lines, and the Bethlehem Steel Company and the Philadelphia, Bethlehem and New England Railroad, which presented the case yesterday. Ten other industrial railroads and manufacturing companies have yet to present cases offering differing angles to the situation.

The Bethlehem cases closed last night, but a decision will not be given for some time. It attracted much attention because of the declarations that because the companies had not enjoyed joint rates and allowances they were losers. The Bethlehem contended that it was in the same position as the Pittsburgh companies, but did not get the advantages which they did.

The Interstate Commerce Commission has ruled differently from the state commission and this adds interest to the hearings.

On the subject of the controversy the Railway Age-Gazette says: "The Pennsylvania Public Service Commission has followed the commissions of New York state and Canada in ordering the railroads to continue their allowances to short industrial railroads, which allowances have been declared by Mr. Brandeis and the Interstate Commerce Commission to be, in most cases, exorbitant and illegal, and which, so far as concerns the United States Steel Corporation and a few other large mill owners, have been discontinued on interstate traffic. The apparent conflict between the views of the federal and the state authorities on this matter, of which much has been made in the press, is, probably, far less important than it seems. There may be no real conflict at all. The essential thing is the reasonableness of the compensation for the service on the industrial road, and the Interstate Commerce Commission itself has postponed judgment on many cases. The Pennsylvanians because the point had already been decided by the Supreme Court of the state, but it is going to investigate the matter further. Evidently there is a long legal contest ahead; for, not only the confusion of state and federal authority, but also the confusion incident to all complicated freight-rate puzzles, seems to afflict this controversy in a marked degree. But the State (or the States) is committed irrevocably to the duty of making all transportation rates, everywhere, reasonable and just; and shall such a power be thwarted by a sawmill or an iron furnace?"

LIBRARY WORK IS ENLARGING

April Circulation Large and Many More Readers Are at the Institution

Figures compiled at the Harrisburg public library show that there has been an increasing number of readers at the new institution and that during the month of April there were no less than 3,129 persons who went to the library to read. Of this number 1,961 were adults and 1,168 children, many of the latter being from the public schools of the city. This number is larger than in any previous month.

During April there were circulated 7,849 books, the largest number on one day being 694. There are now 10,029 books catalogued in the library. Last month there were 304 volumes added and ninety-one donated. The number of periodicals in the library is 104, five subscriptions having been donated during April.

In April 203 questions were asked involving search of books of reference. These questions were not merely asking for dates or other easily obtained information, but questions which required looking up and knowledge of the place where to look.

The registration of persons who desire to use books is almost 7,000.

"Willie, you have been fighting?"
 "Yes."
 "I thought I told you to be kind and peaceful."
 "Yes'm. But that boy don't understand that I was being kind and peaceful. I had to do something to show him I wasn't a mollycoddle and make him willing to co-operate in my lofty purposes."—Louisville Courier-Journal.
