YOUNG MUSICIAN IS UNUSUALLY GIFTED

Miss Pearle Lehman Plays With Remarkable Interpretation and Technique

MISS PEARLE LEHMAN

Early in the week Frederic C. Martin introduced to the musical public another of the wonderfully gifted musical prodigies that sometimes "happen" in the musical world.

Miss Pearle Lehman, this most recent and youngest aspirant to musical recognition, displayed a quite remarkable interpretative faculty as well as unusual technique in her playing of the following trying program:

Concert in G (Mendelssohn), Mr. Martin at 2nd piano prelude, Page No. 4, in C sharp minor from "The Well Tempered Clavichord" (Bach); Fantasia in D Minor (Mozart); Four Nocturns, "At Evening," "In the Night," "Why?" "Dream Visions" (Schumann); the twenty-four preludes op. 28 (Chopin).

Miss Grunden's School Closes With a Picnic

Miss Alva M. Grunden's primary school at Twentieth and Forster streets closed yesterday. The following children have not missed a day during the term: The Misses Ruth Hurst, Fannie Hicks, Geraldine Naomi Cooper, Masters Paul Hurst and Charles Lingle.

The children, under the care of their teacher, were taken to Paxtang Park where a picnic was held.

All the amusements of the park, even to seeing "Hans, the trained goose," swim were enjoyed and a picnic supper was served to the following members of the school: The Misses Helen Fox, Verna Koonos, Ethel Casels, Frances Carroll and Fannie Hicks, Masters Paul Gerhart, Vere Felker, Charles Lingle, Harry Kaufman, Raymond Goudy, Edgar Marty and Royale Hallman. On account of a Sunday School picnic at Hershey, some of the children were unable to attend.

TERRIFIC JOY RIDE FOR 4 DOZEN EGGS

"Constable's Delight" at Riverside, California. Had Them in Tonneau

In picturesque Riverside and throughout the populous orange-growing region of Southern California, A. J. Stalder has become known as the "Constable's Delight."

Mr. Stalder and his seven-passenger Studebaker "Six" have broken more speed laws than anybody in Southern California and the driver has cheerfully paid the penalty for being always in a hurry. In the long run, he maintains, the time he saves between his home in Riverside and his ranches along the river and in the Perris Valley, is worth the price.

At one of his places, about ten miles from Riverside, Mr. Stalder instructed the woman at the ranch house to load into the tonneau of his car whatever fruit and produce she had handy. She did so. Part of the load consisted of four dozen eggs in an open-mouthed paper sack which the woman placed on the rear seat and covered with a robe.

Mr. Stalder was absent while the car was being loaded, supervising some ranch work. When he returned to tell him about the eggs. He pressed the electric starting plunger, went through his gears and disappeared in a cloud of dust.

His next stop was fully 20 miles away, over a rather rough road and at a rate which brought him to his destination in less than 40 minutes. Here he reviewed some irrigation work, but eventually set sail for his return trip to Riverside. Once more he lost no time en route.

Mrs. Stalder was on hand to help unload the tonneau, when he reached home.

"I only hope you brought some eggs from the river ranch," she remarked. "Eggs" ejaculated Stalder; "If there are any in this load, they're an omelet now!"

Visions of smeared upholstery were in the minds of both as they hurriedly inspected the exhibit.

Mrs. Stalder was the first to lift the robe which covered the sack on the rear seat.

Here they are, and they're all right. Why not one of them is even cracked," she wonderingly declared.

Stalder and an irrigation engineer who had been his companion on the ride, joined in the inspection. After having seen some miles of rough driving across country, each egg proved intact.

"I owe the Studebaker corporation a letter on springs and upholstery," conceded Mr. Stalder.

And he went in and wrote it.
