IMPROVEMENTS ON PHILADELPHIA City Is Important Terminal For Pennsylvania Railroad System; A Few Figures

In completing the large grain elevator at Girard Point, the Pennsylvania Railroad Company went to an expense of $1,150,000. This improvement will be followed with the building of a large classification yard in West Philadelphia.

Statistics have been compiled showing just what the Pennsylvania Railroad is to the city of Philadelphia. It has 504 miles of track and 44 freight stations here. It carries a larger number of passengers in and out of Philadelphia than in and out of any other city on its lines.

In 1912, the latest period for which figures are available, a total of $27,582,961 was collected in Philadelphia on account of freight and passengers. The amount paid for salaries and wages in Philadelphia is about 15 per cent of the company's total pay roll.
