Found It Doesn't Pay to Try to Boss the Boss

A pair of black eyes, numerous bumps on the head and bruises on the face and body were what John Schauffman, a laborer on the river wall improvement job, received when he attacked C. F. Williams, the foreman, yesterday evening.

John Schauffman was "fired" yesterday morning. He returned at 4.30 and attacked the foreman. He left confident that it doesn't pay to try to boss the boss.

TERRIBLE CARNAGE FEATURES ASSAULT

Battlefield Strewn With Dead of Contesting Armies; Meuse Runs Red Streaked

Special to The Telegraph
London, Aug. 20.—The Daily News, under a Namur date, publishes the following dispatch from its special correspondent, Geoffrey Young:

"The aviators have stopped dropping bombs, and the soldiers here learned to-day that King Albert has sent an envoy to say that 10 prisoners are to be shot for every bomb dropped in the unprotected streets. Only girls and old men have so far suffered from this inhuman practice."

"The losses yesterday about Dinant seem to have been immense, in view of the fact that it was only an engagement of forces in reconnaissance. Rumor speaks of anything between 20,000 and 40,000 as the casualties in the two opposing forces, and it is probable from all accounts that the number must be reckoned in the thousands."

"A peasant from a village below Dinant said that when he was called back from the fields by the noise he came over the hill to see the Meuse running red-streaked with blood. Allowing for the Army's emotion, there seems to be no doubt that the fighting was savage and terribly costly, and that one, out of many good reasons that stopped our passage short of Dinant today was that the bridge had not yet been removed. In this war both sides are very rapidly ceasing their losses. Relatives are separately informed whenever it seems fit, and no lists are published."

Another correspondent describes the assault in the following dispatch:

"Shortly after noon the Germans seized the citadel, and at 1.30 o'clock the black flag was raised on the top of the German Empire was fluttering above the smoke of battle on the crowning heights of the citadel."

"Throughout the long, hot afternoon the German infantrymen, sheltered behind the natural ramparts of the heights, and supported with one machine gun, poured a steady fire down upon the French in the town below."

"The German lines on the Meuse began to fall back, but at 7 o'clock their artillery was silenced by the French guns. Only the citadel, with the German defenders, was left to make the French lines with its fire."

"The citadel rests upon a hill at the southern end of the town. The buglers were giving the signal to charge. With fixed bayonets the French moved forward on the run. At the front of the slopes they were met with a withering fire which sent the front ranks reeling backward."

"Again the shrill blasts of the buglers arose above the roar of battle."

"Up along every one of the rocky trails leading to the crown of the hill swept the French soldiers. The rear ranks, using their bayoneted guns to assist them, climbed with painful slowness the steep, rocky slopes of their bayonets into the hard, rocky soil."

"The French battle cry passed from lip to lip and the soldiers plunged onward up the slopes, swept with a never-ceasing fire."

"The German machine gun had been planted to sweep the broadest approach and a steady stream of fire spurted from its muzzle."

"Long afterward the barrel of this gun was found to be blazing hot, showing the terrific use to which it had been put."

"The paths became blocked with fallen French soldiers, but still the red-tressed lines passed on, the soldiers lifting their eyes to the hated standard of Germany to gain fresh courage."

"The gallantry of the French might have gone to the purpose, and the many sacrifices might have been made in vain but for a well-aimed cannon ball which struck the German machine gun, putting it out of commission. Within less than half an hour the French had gained the summit in the midst of a deadly rifle fire and hauled down the German flag. The Germans fought desperately, but were outnumbered. They fled while the French fired upon them from the heights which they had just been compelled to evacuate."

German Cavalry Attacks Panic Stricken People

By Associated Press
London, Aug. 20.—5.29 A. M.—A dispatch to the Times from Brussels, says:

"The Germans, in strong force, met by cavalry and artillery, entered Trier early Tuesday afternoon."

"The big guns shelled the place while the cavalry, panic-stricken populace, shooting and sticking them at random."

"About five miles from the town, two trains were made up and fully 1,000 refugees got away. So swift and terrible had been the onslaught of the Germans that in flight for their lives people left everything behind. Never had I seen such a picture of woe as that presented by a group composed of a peasant woman and five children, standing bewildered in the square, crying as though their hearts would break. The woman said: 'They shot my husband before my eyes and trampled two of my children to death.'"

"The last glimpse that the refugees had of their town showed smoke and flames in different quarters of the town."

Grand Duke Nicholas Sends Congratulations

By Associated Press
London, Aug. 20.—7.20 A. M.—The St. Petersburg "responder of Reuters' Telegram Company says that Grand Duke Nicholas, commander of the Russian army, has sent a letter to Prince Alexander of Serbia, saying:

"Having received news of the brilliant victory of the Serbian army, I send on behalf of the Pan-Slavic army cordial congratulations on the great victory which God has given us. The Russian army shouts to you a vigorous cheer in honor of the victorious serbs."

Belgians Retiring in Direction of Antwerp

Paris, Aug. 20.—10.15 A. M.—A portion of the Belgian army has begun to retire in the direction of Antwerp, according to an official announcement this morning concerning the situation in Belgium.

East of Namur the Germans have attained the line between Dinant and Neufchateau.

Large German forces continue to cross the River Meuse between Liege and Namur. German outposts have occupied Dyle.

The retirement of the Belgians toward Antwerp was a result of the German movement described above.

AT THE VICTORIA

AT THE COLONIAL
"Zuzu, The Leader of the Band," a feature comedy film to be introduced to patrons of the Colonial to-day, is said to be one of the best laugh-ringers the film makers have thus far succeeded in producing. During the past few weeks the management has adhered to films of dramatic or more artistic type, but this time they are announcing the biggest screen in films they have been able to secure. It has long since been discovered that Colonial patrons like to laugh, so the new experiment is apt to prove very popular. You'll want to get your money's worth in smiles alone in "Zuzu, The Leader of the Band." A splendid bill of vaudeville, including Haney and Long, in songs and patter, and Kubanoff, a comedy violinist, will support the Three Fountain Nymphs, expert swimmers and divers, who have grown so popular that they have been retained for the remainder of the week.—Advertisement.

AT THE PHOTOPLAY
"The Million Bid," which comes to this theater on Friday, August 21, is the feature with which The Vitagraph Theater in New York was opened. The film ran there for over 100 nights to crowded houses. The theme of the photoplay is one of common practice to-day, for it deals with the bidding for daughters in marriage. A beautiful young woman, Agnes Belgrind, is literally put up at auction by her mother to the highest bidder, who, in this instance of the film, happens to be Geoffrey Marsha, an Australian millionaire. Mrs. Belgrind, after a while sees her folly, and commits suicide by jumping into the sea. It is said, has a strong appeal to all of those who are in any way tempted to sell their children, or mother to the highest bidder, who, in this instance of the film, happens to be Geoffrey Marsha, an Australian millionaire.—Advertisement.
