$25.00 to Be Given Away as Prizes; Can You Figure Out Who Is Who?

An interesting puzzle is presented in this issue of the Telegraph, on opposite page No. 6. There are 56 advertisements of businessmen of Harrisburg and vicinity being represented. No names are mentioned in any of the advertisements, but in each one will be found suggestions that will aid one in seeking whether individual, firm or corporation.

To figure out Who is Who will necessitate careful reading of advertisements. This puzzle will prove a splendid form of entertainment, invite your friends and see which one knows Harrisburg the best, figuring out the correct names of each advertiser. After you have completed the list, make a copy of it, send the original in to the Telegraph office no later than Thursday noon, September 3, and file the copy away, and wait for the correct names to be published in the Telegraph next Friday. Then compare the list as published with the one you have and see how near you came to solving the Who is Who Puzzle.

TWO CASH REWARDS

To the person furnishing the most correct and nearest manuscript a cash prize of $15 will be paid.

For the second best manuscript a cash prize of 10 will be paid. In the event that two or more people tie for the first prize, the second will be annulled, and the total amount of $25 will be divided equally among the contesting contestants.

Bear in mind that the awards are based largely upon the skill displayed in the preparation, of the nearest manuscript, cleanliness of paper, penmanship, spelling, and the manner in which the manuscript is folded. All will count.

The puzzle is open to everybody except the employees of the Telegraph and members of their family.

Remember that all lists should be submitted to this office no later than Thursday noon. All answers should be addressed to "Ad Contest Editor, Harrisburg Telegraph, Harrisburg, Pa."

The judges' names will be announced later.

German Paper Tells of Army Mobilization

Mails received in this country from the European warring countries at intervals that are few and far between, and among the more interesting packets that reach this city from time to time are those from German newspapers that have been published under the stress of war times.

The first German newspaper received here, perhaps, were sent to John L. Huston from his friend, Frederick Crouse, editor of the "Kriegsblätter" papers, and contain a single sheet. Regular editions of the "Kriegsblätter" are published on one side only. Practically all the space is taken up with accounts of army mobilization.

ANCIENT MEXICAN SACRIFICES

With all his diplomacy, and his great need of powerful allies, Cortes could not endure the daily horrors of that idolatry which at Zempoalla, as in nearly all the cities of Mexico, devoted human beings to the horrible living torments of the Stone of Sacrifice. Stretched naked upon a sacrificial stone, which appears in most cases to have been somewhat convex upon its surface, a yoke across the neck held the victim utterly helpless; while the attendants confined his arms and legs, straining the spine over the central ridge of the altar; and the chief priest, with a sharp flake of obsidian, laid upon the heaving chest and tore out the heart of the sufferer.

Caesar-Law Laid Down by Lord of Life Grips Modern Man in His Citizenship

(By William T. Ellis.) Every close reader of history, whether it be written in books or in the daily newspaper, has been struck by the pitiable spectacle of the opposition which great statesmen and leaders have met that was not sincere and disinterested. It interposed partisan, personal and petty objections to public programs, merely to harass a foe.

The crafty bosses of the Pharisee party sent their underlings to the Teacher for whose feet they were laying snares of death with a set of questions in truth, so eager were these hounds in pursuit of the quarry that the Pharisee pack joined numbers with the Herodian pack; although, except when some great common hunt at every meeting. But every crime like the present was afoot, these two packs howled at each other and fought requires compromise; and if the Nazarene was to be caught, both Pharisees and Heredians had to swallow their scruples against each other. The present war in Europe illustrates how a common foe makes strange bedfellows.

The hostile questions—so smooth, so plausible, so religious, so appropriate to Jesus were the emissaries pronounced to be not sincere. An honest doubter, beset by perplexities, has sympathy in heaven; but a crafty, pettifogging, insincere twister of truth had fellowship only with the lower regions. These false seekers after light were children of darkness. Their ends were evil, and they deserved the approbrium which the gentle Galilean heaped upon them.

"Diplomacy" Or Plain Lying? Displaying all the outward signs of respect, these enemies drew near the Teacher, saying, "Master, we know that thou art true, and teachest the way of God in truth, and carest not for any man: for thou regardest not the person of any man."

"Tell us therefore, What thinkest thou? Is it lawful to give tribute to Caesar or not?"

Sometimes "that sort of thing is called "diplomacy," or "jollifying" or "tact"; but in the vocabulary of truth it is plain lying. These men were saying what they did not believe, and saying it for a low, selfish purpose. How they must have jumped—and how we would jump, too, if our duplicity were uncovered with the same directness and candor—when Jesus in the straight-talking words of the fearless and sincere soul, came back at the obsequious questioners with the instant with, "Ye hypocrites!"

That was victory number one: the blow from truth that sent the pretenders staggering. Nothing is so hard to stand as the plain word of integrity. Truth triumphs. That is why the so-called "shirt-sleeves diplomacy" of America, which means telling the simple truth, has won such notable achievements in recent internationalism.

A Great Answer to a Clever Question Of course the question was a poser. Not in vain had the shrewdest lawyers of Jerusalem framed it. If Jesus said, categorically, "Pay tribute to Caesar," all the Jewish patriots would turn against him; that great multitude of followers whom his enemies feared. If, on the other hand, he made the people refuse tribute to Caesar, then Rome would make short shift of him, as a rebel and a traitor.

An object-teacher and a picture-teacher to the last, Jesus asked his questioners to show him a denarius. They procured the familiar small coin, worth about sixteen cents. Again Jesus spoke: "Whose is this image and superscription?"

"Caesar's."

Worry, like hate, anger, envy and all other depressing emotions, is a poison. It is a short circuit which burns out the mental batteries and destroys the power for useful activity. It is of little use, however, to tell the neuroathetic not to worry. He suffers from worry just as he suffers from headache and cold hands and feet and other miseries. The neuroathetic worries not because he wishes to but because his mind operates in this disordered fashion in spite of his desire to the contrary. He can no more help worrying by voluntary effort than he can stop the smarting of a burn or the itching of a mosquito bite by a mental effort. Nevertheless, the patient can do much to help himself out of the worry habit, by an effort to cultivate an optimistic view of life in general and in each particular situation that presents itself.

Worry, like "the blues" is generally due to chronic poisoning, the cure of which changes the color of the Mental sky, and lifts the patient into a sunny and peaceful atmosphere.—The Battle Creek Idea.
