War Time in Britain

By REV. WILLIAM B. COOKE

We are spending the summer in Scotland. The drum beat of war is across the North Sea. Defended by the British fleet, we feel quite safe in this old world village, twelve miles west of Edinburgh. And now that the Atlantic lanes of travel are said to be open it seems quite certain that we can sail from Liverpool September 2 on scheduled line.

Outwardly we see few signs of the titanic struggle. The country life moves on as usual—no flags, no troops, no guns. The lovely rolling landscape with its burns and braes, covered with an abundant harvest now being garnered, is wounded only by industry where the shale mines have thrown out vast hills of refuse. The weather, with the mercury in the fifties and sixties, is most inviting. During the frequent showers and drizzles, the great cities of London, Paris and the first week of the war there were crowds marching, cheering and singing, along the streets, at the railway stations as the troops mobilized, and in front of Buckingham palace. But that has quieted into a silent and grim determination. Our butcher expressed the feeling the other day when he pronounced, "The British will see this thing through."

The difference from times of peace is in the thought of the people, the quiet but prompt and effective gathering of the navy and army and the upheaval of commerce. The war is on every one's mind and tongue, and the expression is in every conversation. The first question is for news. The people are a unit for the honor and defense of the nation. The deep popular distrust of Germany need only a clear presentation of the wrongs of Belgium and the jeopardy of Britain to be turned into a conviction which rests on conscience and self-preservation. From the man in the street to the diplomat, all feel the force of these three motives in varying degree—the hatred of Prussian aggression, the treaty obligation to guarantee Belgium's neutrality, and the ultimate danger to the prosperity and even life of the British empire. The German invasion of Belgium and East Grey's resolution in the House of Commons solidified sentiment. Practically all agree on the necessity and righteousness of opposing sword to sword. The Commons voted £100,000,000 and 500,000 men. We see no light-heartedness or boasting or counting of eggs before they are hatched, as the "Zar" seems to be doing in the case of Poland. The "Boer" war was a warning. Everywhere there is a sense of the tragedy and cost of it all. "It is very depressing," remarked a gentleman after he had spoken of the great movement of the British public in many special trains from Edinburgh to join the expeditionary army. Crystal Palace is to be used as a hospital. Houses are being offered for public purposes. A school teacher near Dublin received notice that she need not return from her holidays as the schoolhouse would be turned into a hospital, but that she was asked to come as a nurse. The women are organizing into bands of aid to gather clothing, knit woollen socks, canvass for funds, and what not, at a neighboring school the teachers are giving outdoor lessons in knitting, the local nobleman donating the wool. A large sum, now a million and a half sterling is coming in for the Red Cross and other funds are rising. Even a fund for the relief of Belgians is being gathered.

The Irish question is dropped; industrial disputes are patched up; the dominions overseas send their help, men, money, ships, provisions from the Cape, the British Columbia, Bengal, New Zealand. There is something thrilling in the quick sympathy and swift accord of a mighty empire. It is like seeing a giant crouch to spring. We know little of the movements of fleet or army save that the army is in France and the fleet is on guard. The newspapers with loyal self-restraining print nothing to aid the enemy. But never has Britain been better prepared. Statesmen foresaw the inevitable two years ago when Germany tried to make trouble between France and England. A year ago the authorities in this region listed the horses. The review of the fleet in July was really a mobilization. When war came so sudden all was ready. Plans were put into effect as by the turning on of a switch in a power plant. The fleet was ready in a day and within ten days the army was in France. The people have quiet confidence in both arms of the service and think it quite certain that the allies will break the power of Prussia and postpone indefinitely the schemes of the superman and the conquest of the world.

Last Saturday, walking through a strange village, I stopped a miner and asked him the name and population of the hamlet and the use of a new building. Returning in a few minutes past a group on the corner this miner caught my eye and remarked quizzically: "Are you a German spy? Many spies have been taken in and many wild tales are afloat, such as pressing a concealed button and dropping the Firth of Forth bridge on the Germans if they pass under. London is said to be a little nervous from fear of airships and bombs. Commerce has had a heavy blow already. As England is a nation of shopkeepers," she feels it. Those who trade with the continent are hit the hardest. During the first week the panic was general. The bank rate rose to 10 per cent and our neighbor, the farmer's wife, put up her eggs from 32 cents a dozen to 44 cents; but they are now down to 40 cents and the bank rate to 5 per cent. Housewives bought up grocers' stocks and for a few days sugar was scarce in the neighborhood. But the slogan is being raised, "Business as usual," and the exporters and importers hope to capture the German foreign trade. They hope to see a silver lining. It is dreadful work, but no one can tell the end. The great wish now is that it may be swift and sure.

Editor's Note.—The foregoing letter to the Telegraph is from the Rev. William B. Cooke, former pastor of the Steelton Presbyterian Church, who writes from Scotland under date of August 21. Mr. Cooke has been in the Philippines for four years and says in a note to the editor: "My sister and I were in London with great interest to our return to Central Pennsylvania after four years' absence in Manila. Mr. Cooke will arrive in this country early in September and will supply the Market Square Presbyterian pulpit for four months."

Band Member Is Fatally Hurt While on Excursion

Waynesboro, Pa., Aug. 31.—On Saturday the second excursion over the Western Maryland railroad from Connellsville was run to Gettysburg and Pen-Mar. There were two sections and over 1,100 excursionists. They spent several hours going over the battlefield at Gettysburg and then came to Pen-Mar, where they remained until 11 o'clock at night. The Connellsville band, which accompanied the excursionists, while on the train from Gettysburg to Pen-Mar and near Fairfield John A. Dowling, 16 years old, a member of the Connellsville band, was struck on the head by a mail arm and it is believed was fatally injured. He sustained concussion of the brain and was hurt internally.

European War Affects Work at Dillsburg Shirt Factory

Dillsburg, Pa., Aug. 31.—As the indirect result of the war of Europe, Morrett Coover, proprietor of the Dillsburg shirt factory, has been compelled to lay off a number of his employes on account of not being able to secure materials owing to a scarcity of dyes imported from the countries now involved in war.

To Look Young Quickly For Special Occasion

How often have you fussed and puffed with your face on the eve of some important social event when you wanted to look your prettiest, and try what you would just couldn't get the desired result? Next time your face becomes unruddy, exhibiting a careworn and saggy appearance, and crisscrossed with fine lines, here's something that will quickly transform it into one of youthful freshness. Just get an ounce of powdered saxeite at your druggist's, mix this with about a half pint of witch hazel, and bathe your face in the solution for two or three minutes. Immediately after you feel a "firming up" of the skin and underlying tissue, which naturally iron out the little wrinkles, worry marks and flabbiness. The contour and general appearance of your face are so improved, you will be glad you heard of this simple and harmless method.—Advertisement.
