

Women and Their Interests
Summertime Fables

By DOBOTHY DIX
Once upon a Time there was a Captain of Industry who by dint of doing Others before they got a chance to do Him amassed a Large Bank Roll. Unfortunately Grand Larceny even when conducted on the most approved basis of High Finance, is a somewhat slow process, and by the time a man gets Millions he has also got the Gout and a Bay Window.

"Some half-truths in that," answered Westerling. "One axiom, that must hold good through all time, is that the aggressive which keeps at it always wins. We take the aggressive. In the space where Napoleon deployed a division, we deploy a battalion today. The precision and power of modern arms require this. With such immense forces and present-day tactics, the line of battle will practically cover the length of the frontier. Along their range the Browns have a series of fortresses commanding natural openings for our attack. These are almost impregnable. But there are pregnable points between them. Here, our method will be the same that the Japanese followed and that they learned from European armies. We shall concentrate in masses and throw in wave after wave of attack until we have gained the positions we desire. Once we have a tenable foothold on the crest of the range the Brown army must fall back and the rest will be a matter of skillful pursuit."

HOW I CURED MY EYES

THIS FREE PRESCRIPTION DID IT
"My eyes were in a terrible state; I could hardly stand it. They were red and inflamed; felt as though they had sand in them; and every time they burned dreadfully and caused incessant headaches. I could hardly read at all. After wearing glasses for some time, they became strained and overworked. By chance met a man whose eyes had bothered him the same way. He gave me the following prescription which he said had cured him and since had enabled him to discard his glasses."

COATS IN CAPE EFFECT ARE AUTUMN FEATURES

A Boon to the Home Dressmaker
By MAY MANTON
Partow was a great brain set on an enormous body. Partow's eyes had the fire of youth at sixty-five, but the pendulous flesh of his cheeks was pensive. Jealousy and faction had endeavored for years to remove him from his position at the head of the army on account of age. New governments decided as they came in that he must go, and they went out with him still in the saddle.
Let officers apply themselves with conspicuous energy and they heard from a general Partow; let officers only keep step and free of courts martial, and they heard from a merciless taskmaster. Peculiarly human, peculiarly diabolical, dynamic, and inscrutable was Partow, who never asked any one under him to work harder than himself.
Lanstron appeared in the presence of Jove shortly after eight o'clock the next morning after he left La Tir. Jove rolled his big head on his short neck in a nod and said:
"Late!"
"The train was late, sir," Lanstron replied, "and I have some news about our thousandth chance."
"Hm! What is it?" asked Partow. When Lanstron had told his story, Partow worked his lips in a way he had if he were struck by a passing reflection which might or might not have a connection with the subject in hand. "Strange about her when you consider who her parents were!" he said. "But you never know. Hm! Why don't you sit down, young man?"
"The way that the Grays gave out our dispatch convinces me of their intentions," Partow said. "Their people are rising to it and ours are rising in answer. The Grays have been transferring regiments from distant provinces to their frontier because they will fight better in an invasion. We are transferring home regiments to our frontier because they will fight for their own property. By Thursday you will find that open mobilization on both sides has begun."
"My department is ready," said Lanstron, "all except your decision about press censorship."
"A troublesome point," responded Partow. "I have procrastinated because two definite plans were fully worked out. It is a matter of choice between them: either publicity or complete secrecy. You know I am no leaver in riding two horses at once. My mind is again made up; but let me hear your side again. Sometimes I get conviction by probing another man's."
Lanstron was at his best, for his own conviction was intense.
"Of course they will go in for secrecy; but our case is different," he began.
Partow settled himself to listen with the gift of the organizer who draws from his informant the brevity of essentials.

FORMER FOOTBALL STAR HANGS OUT A SHINGLE

M. Edward Richards, for three years left end on the Central High school eleven, has opened a dental establishment at 1233 Derry street. "Cy" Richards had a reputation while on the blue and gray squadron for knocking the teeth out of his opponent's mouth whenever opportunity offered; now he is pulling them in a scientific manner.
"Cy" is a graduate of the University of Pennsylvania dental school.

PERFUMES WITH THE ANCIENTS AND THE MODERNS—Part I.

In the history of civilization perfumes have played an important part and their use has seemed to mark epochs of ultra refinement and cultivation. Centuries before the Christian Era we have records of the use of perfumes in the religious ceremonies of the disciples of Jesus. In the history of the perfume industry, the perfume of the ancients was not so much a luxury as it is today. It was a necessity. The perfume of the ancients was not so much a luxury as it is today.
