

WORLD READY TO STUDY DEEP TRUTHS

Dramatic Farewell Admonition of Jesus Is the Sunday Lesson

ARE WE READY FOR GOD?

Story Touches Upon Our Preparation For Both Life and Death

READY FOR THE CRISIS The International Sunday School Lesson For September 13 Is "The Ten Virgins."—Matt. 25:1-13.

(By William T. Ellis) Amid the crash of empires we are called upon to consider one of the most dramatic of the farewell admonitions of Jesus. The pertinency of the present parable is in the mind of every member of the Sunday School that uses the International Lessons. Sobered, chastened, awed men and women to-day are ready to study the deeper truths of life; and to lead an attentive ear to hear what the Master of us all has to say concerning ultimate things.

The closing utterances of Jesus had to do with the Kingdom of Heaven—that kingdom which has outlasted all empires and still moves forward in its beneficent way through all the shocks to human institutions. Here we face a subject that is vaster than this overwhelming war, that is to-day engrossing the world's thought.

Myriads of Christians are asking themselves whether the present world upheaval pretends the consummation foretold by Jesus. All of us are solemnized by an international catastrophe without parallel in human history. Whatever one's views of the judgment, it is certain that this war is the end of all things earthly for myriads of men. Small wonder, therefore, that it is a profound spiritual experience for still larger hosts of the living.

The Sufficient Preparation When we are ready for God, we are ready for anything. That is the inclusive truth of the great parable of the Wise and Foolish Virgins. They who go to meet the bridegroom joyous and unashamed, bring nothing else but peace with Him, they are at peace with all the world. Here the lesson truth strikes down deep into every man's philosophy of life. There is absolutely no satisfaction possible to human nature equal to the surpassing peace of preparedness for the presence of God.

Every crisis teaches the supremacy of things spiritual. When the reality of unexemplary war broke over Europe, it drove the nations to their knees. Even irreligious France turned to prayer. Kings and councils called their people to supplicate before the throne of Heaven. Inevitably the war has set people to thinking of the God who was before all, and is over all, and will be after all. When right with Him, men are right with all the world. There is no other disaster equal to the disaster of the Infinite.

The Ten Maidens Because the greatest truths may be mirrored in the humblest happenings, Jesus set forth His wonderful teaching of the last days of the familiar story of an Oriental wedding, and of the ten maidens who were to help give joyous welcome to the wedding party. Of these ten, five were wise and five were foolish; for only five had laid by any store of the oil needed to make the wedding illumination. The parable is one of preparation. There is no need to point out any analogy to present world events; every one must do that for himself.

The story touches upon our preparation for life, as well as our preparation for death; it is a truth for every day, as well as for the last great day; it serves to make character for youth, to give full consolation for age; it makes vivid the Master's oft-repeated exhortation, "Be ye also ready." That is the most practical motto for the boy or girl starting out in life; and it is the most spiritual counsel for the aged person waiting death's summons.

"Too Late, Too Late" Somewhere we have seen a painting that merely showed a shut door, that was all; but the artist conveyed to the imagination the impression that that door stood for separation and finality. History is full of the regrets of those who have arrived too late at their opportunity. We see even such an empire-builder as Queen Rhodes crying on his death-bed, "So much to do, so little time!" Queen Elizabeth's shrieks offers of a regal bounty for only a minute of time as she stared into the pitiless eyes of death as it drew nigh. Let us not seemly burn brightly throughout, than that ten should shine for but a little while, leaving the feast in untimely darkness. Be it remembered that the whole episode was for the honor of the bridegroom, rather than for the pleasure of the guests.

Preparation is always individual. One cannot lay by any store for many. The mother cannot go to school for the child; the father cannot exercise prudence and industry and faithfulness for his son; all spiritual experiences are one by one, each for himself. The great transactions of the soul are enacted in the vast loneliness of the apartness of one soul with its Maker, quite as if no others had ever shared the same experience in the past. Only by an attitude of alertness may the spirit be kept quick and sensitive. Spiritual is so sweet? Ah, let us in, though late, to kiss his feet!" "Oh, no! too late! ye cannot enter now."

The Things Which Cannot Be Shared The five wise virgins who had to use their own store of oil, even as every one of us is steward of his own gifts, have often been criticized for not sharing what they had with their heedless sisters. There are some things which cannot be shared. In this case it was better for the honor of the wedding party that five maidens should burn brightly throughout, than that ten should shine for but a little while, leaving the feast in untimely darkness. Be it remembered that the whole episode was for the honor of the bridegroom, rather than for the pleasure of the guests.

Only by an attitude of alertness may the spirit be kept quick and sensitive. Spiritual

"Late, late, so late! and dark the night, and chill! Late, late, so late! but we can enter still! Too late, too late! ye cannot enter now."

"No light had we; for that we do repent; And, learning that, the bridegroom will relent!" "Too late, too late! ye cannot enter now."

"No light! so late! and dark and chill the night! Oh, let us in, that we may find the light!" "Too late, too late! ye cannot enter now."

"Have we not heard the bridegroom say, 'I will not open the door?'"

Much Work Needed to Get Trade of South America

Special to The Telegraph. Philadelphia, Sept. 11.—The establishment of an export trade in South America with Philadelphia manufacturers depends, according to Wilfred H. Schoff, secretary of the Philadelphia Commercial Museum, on an aggressive sales campaign conducted by American buyers into the markets of the South American republics; an increased consumption by the United States of South American products and by direct banking relations between this and South American countries, which will admit of a general handling of credits.

It was also pointed out that if the development of the South American trade diverted by the European war be pursued on the threefold basis of sales, purchase and credits it will endure. But if on one basis only, sales, it will revert again to Europe on the conclusion of peace.

tary Schoff noted, the establishment of German banks in all of the Argentine cities has brought a great extension of German sales in that country. This, he pointed out, is the immediate factor in our trade relations.

Secretary Schoff spoke glowingly of the great advantage the opening of the Panama Canal gave this country for trade with the west coast ports of South America over Europe. He pointed out that Bolivia, Peru, Ecuador and Colombia, all "wonderfully rich in mineral resources," are awaiting development by investment of capital in railways from the mines to the sea coast. Also in the actual development of their mines.

"The establishment of American branch banks in Latin America," he asserted, "as now made possible under the Federal reserve law, is really the first step toward a steady increase of trade."
