DON'T SQUEEZE BLACK-HEADS—DISSOLVE THEM

Squeezing and pinching out blackheads make the pores large and cause irritation—then, too, after they have become hard you cannot get all of them out. Blackheads are caused by accumulations of dust and dirt and secretions from the skin and there is only one safe and sure way and one that never fails to get rid of them—a simple way, too—that is to dissolve them. Just get from any drug store about two ounces of powdered norexin—sprinkle a little on a hot, wet sponge—rub over the blackheads and in a few seconds—wash off and you'll be surprised to see that every blackhead has disappeared and the skin is left soft and the pores in their natural condition—anyone troubled with these filthy blemishes should try this simple method.—Advertisement.

Shower of Kitchenware For an October Bride

Mrs. Charles Shaffer, of Riverside, gave a kitchen shower last evening to Miss Edna Cartwright, who will be an October bride. The gifts were in attractively arranged parcels and after they had been examined the guests enjoyed music and refreshments. The table appointments were of pink, with dahlias prevailing in the flowers.

ORAL HYGIENE

The human mouth is the most important organ of the body from the standpoint of prevention of disease, although through ignorance of this fact it is the most neglected. The mouth is a breeding place for harmful bacteria of many kinds. Statistics show that over 90 per cent. of humanity have conditions obtaining in their mouths which are harmful and dangerous to the health of their internal organs.

Health organizations have spent millions to free food, water and air from bacteria which would produce disease within the bodies of the consumers. But they have neglected the mouths of these harmful bacteria. Inhabit the neglected mouths of such a great proportion of the human race. If you are afflicted with any disease of the internal organs, first of all have your mouth put in a sanitary condition and keep it clean. Do not eliminate the condition of the mouth and teeth as a probable cause. Organisms taken into your stomach do not destroy the bacteria growing in and about your diseased teeth and gums.—Written by Dr. E. Behney, 202 Locust street.—Advertisement.

White Hair Now Red.

A well-known chronicler of Paris fashions writes that a certain lady who "wore her hair white last season has now adopted the fashionable red shade and appeared to great advantage recently with her heavy red locks wrapped about a bright green comb, the color of the latter being emphasized by a green tulle scarf." This would seem to be "to laugh" as the French say, but, no, it is written in all seriousness. Not only is artificial red hair worn in Paris now, but there are women who are painting their locks with colored powders. In doing so they are following or rather leading the latest whim of fashion which is that of extreme artificiality.

To a certain extent this is consistent; with the slinky walk, the outspread hands and the Egyptian tunic, the painted hair and headpiece follow as a matter of course. It is doubtful if American women ever become enthusiastic devotees of so extreme a fashion and one so out of keeping with the American type, but it must be admitted that more "make-up" is used than was the custom a year or so ago and that it is used in a more obvious way. The excuse for make-up among refined women has been to correct only to correct ravages of time or illness. Premature gray hair was simply brought back to its original color, a rough skin was made normal with fresh powder and a touch of rouge on cheek and lips only suggested a healthy bloom, pleasant and natural. Women have been modestly reticent about the use of make-up. It was put on discreetly and if used in the daytime, under the protection of a veil or drooping hat. Make-up that proclaimed itself as such has been regarded as distinctly vulgar. Make-Up Worn Frankly Like a Hat or Veil. Such ideas, however, are already reckoned as out of date, and today the fashionable woman wears make-up as she wears a hat or wrap, simply to be effective. The fashion, or the fact, is not for the natural type of beauty, or as near as we can get to it, but for the exotic, the odd and even the unnatural. Faces are made unnaturally white, lips feverishly red and eyebrow and lashes darkened out of accord with nature. Veils are commonly discarded and we cannot imagine an up-to-date modaine the least bit disturbed if a discreet whisper should reach her to the effect that her paint and powder could be recognized as such. That it should be artifice and not nature is now the fashion.

PICKNICKERS ROAST CORN AND POTATOES

Pupils of Miss Grove's School Spend Happy Day in Mountains

Forty-one pupils of the school taught by Miss LaVene Grove, Camp Curtin building, participated in the picnic and baked potato roast at the base of the mountain near Rockville—and that's the reason the relative merits of roast sweet potato, well buttered, over roast ear of sweet potato, is still a matter of topic of conversation as the chances for getting out the day's lessons. In addition to roasting and eating corn and sweet potatoes the students gathered a lot of spice wood, autumn leaves, and so on. Among those in the party were:

The Misses Alvida Burris, Beatrice Gray, Elsie Gray, Mildred Rhoads, Ulla Maugans, Edith Hookley, Mary Minnich, Mary Platt, Sara Monohan, Elizabeth Holohan, Edith Garland, Esther Steiner, Esther Marzoff, Harriet Daniels, Olive Shipman, Veta Clymer, Esther Ross, Kathryn Lutz, Mabel Dettling, Mary Sheibley, Agnes Rudy, Helen Grace Perre and Mrs. Wynn; Carl Kitzmiller, William Dunkel, Raymond Kirk, Charles Fetterhoff, Edward Taylor, Albert Taylor, Charles Banne-Futrell, George Masell, John Wert, Ralph Melchior, Andrew Zarker, John Minnich, Benny Foltz and Miss LaVene Grove.

At the conclusion of the meeting there will be an informal reception to which an invitation is extended to all the congregations.

Consul Bardel at Rheims Occupies Wine Cellar

News from Paris says that the American Consul at Rheims, William Bardell, with his wife, their daughter, Miss Henrietta Bardell, and their son, Augustus Bardell, are the only Americans left in the French city. They have occupied a wine cellar 100 feet underground for the past fortnight, with an opening within half a block of their dwelling. Consul Bardell is well known to Harrisburgers, where he has frequently visited his cousin, Mrs. Carrie Sees, at 21 Chestnut street, as well as other relatives here. He has been abroad as consul since the first McKinley administration, and has resided in Rheims for about five years. This is the first word received concerning his whereabouts by American relatives since the outbreak of the war. In a recent article by Richard Harding Davis, he spoke of sending a messenger to invite Mr. Bardell to dine with him, but that the consul could not be located. He was probably then in the wine cellar apartments.

Madame Ise'bell Talks of The Ancient Art of Make-up—The Slinky Walk and Other Beauty Fads Called From the Egyptians and Others AN ANCIENT ART. The name of cold cream in the pharmacopoeia today is that of its inventor Galen, a Roman physician and writer on medicine that lived in the second century. Pliny who wrote about the year 50 A. D. speaks of the extravagant use of cosmetics among the Greeks, carmine for the cheeks, dye for the hair and so on. But long before the time in the height of civilization in Egypt not only the women, but the men made the most extravagant use of cosmetics of all sorts including unguents and oil for perfuming and massaging the body. Lip Rouge the Fashion Before the Christian Era. In the rude form of art left us from that time we are often introduced into the private life of an Egyptian family. We see the woman of the household sitting before a mirror of polished, burnished metal which is held by a slave while a second kneeling presents a tray full of cosmetic jars and boxes. Mildred is painting her lips with a long stick that looks curiously like the batons of lip rouge that ladies carry today in their vanity bag and apply the stick to their lips. The Egyptian lady also makes up her eyebrows and lashes; judging by the pictures we have of her she makes them up so that the eyes stand out beyond any other feature of the face. Origin of the New French Complexion Powder. The ancient lady of the Nile believed also in the effectiveness of colored cosmetics for the face being especially partial to green about the eyes, believing, undoubtedly, that it throws out the color of the dusky orbs. In this she is but the prototype of the modern Paris mondaine who is today using tinted powders on her face and painting her hair any color that she thinks will go well with her costume. The Egyptian women tattooed birds and reptiles on the arms and forehead; the morning paper brings us an account of a famous beauty parading the streets of New York with a bird of paradise painted on her cheek. We can hardly say "Other times, other manners" when we have such instances as this not only of how close the East is to the West, but how the vanity of woman can bridge over the space of two thousand years and break out in much the same manner. To Walk Like Cleopatra. No thoughtful person can fail to be unfavorably impressed both from the point of view of beauty and health by the new method of locomotion which I have heard some school girls name the "slinky walk," and which suggests the attitude of the figures on an Egyptian vase. The growing girl for some reason—perhaps mostly mothers term it—seems to enjoy standing and walking in a pose that throws out the stomach and rests the weight of the body back of the hip bone. To correct this immature carriage mothers have pleaded, cajoled, commanded; they have poked their offspring
