Soft, Fluffy Hair Always Aids Beauty and Charm

Girls and women of all ages want to be charming, beautiful and attractive—it's their birthright—but stringy, thin and lifeless hair destroys half the beauty of a pretty face.

If your hair is not beautiful, is falling out, streaky, full of dandruff, too dry, or if the scalp itches and burns, use Parisian Sage. Rub it well into the scalp. It will go right to the hair roots, nourish them, and stimulate the hair to grow strong and luxuriant. Parisian Sage removes dandruff with one application and cleanses the hair of dirt, dust and excess oil. It will cool and invigorate the scalp and make the hair doubly beautiful.

Parisian Sage is a scientifically made preparation that gives the hair just what is needed to make it soft, fluffy, thick and gloriously radiant. It is delicately perfumed, is inexpensive, and can be had at all drug and toilet counters or from H. C. Kennedy.—Advertisement.

"TODAY" PRESENTED BY EXCELLENT CAST

Modern Play of Weak Plot Presented Before Fair-sized Audience

"To-day," the drama from the Tid-dish by George Broadhurst and Abraham Schomer, presented last night at the Majestic, was in all probability written with the idea in mind of presenting a phase of life which could be well worked into one of the popular so-called "problem plays." The main theme of the play, apparently, was to show woman's ability to fool her husband, but in the play that wasn't sufficient; the man had to catch the woman, and thereby make the drama, and the climax.

"To-day" unfolds a story of married life; the wife happy so long as the husband supplied those luxuries she had grown to crave. Those gone with business reverses, one of her "friends" (married) shows her how easy it is to have all of the pretty things to which she had become accustomed and leave her husband in ignorance. The mother-in-law, who suspected, had nothing to do with forcing the denouement; that came as the result of the husband being the agent for the apartment in which he was to meet his wife; he knowing whom he would meet, she in ignorance. Being in full possession of the truth (gained by supposition rather than evidence), he takes her life and then calls the police.

"To-day" as a play is weak in plot and slow in action. Several vital truths concerning our daily life are pointed out, but they are not driven home with the force which goes to make the really successful stage sermon. The interest of the audience is not held on those truths which are made to play such a prominent part in the first two acts.

The company which presented the drama could not have given a better presentation to the drama. Every one of them showed themselves thoroughly capable of doing justice to the part which had been allotted to them—in fact, they could have acquitted themselves more creditably if the play had afforded the opportunity. Especially capable was Arleen Hackett as Lily Wagner, the wife who attempted to fool her husband. As the husband Anton Ascher was splendid. He was especially careful in the little details which one so frequently finds disregarded on the stage. Marie Reichardt and Hallett Thompson as the mother and father supplied not a little comedy with their broken English and their witticisms. One might say that it was a pity that a better opportunity was not afforded all of the cast to show their real ability.

"MY BEST GIRL"
One of the brightest spots of the local theatrical season is to be expected in the appearance at the Majestic Theater to-morrow afternoon and evening of "My Best Girl" with Victor Morley. The show comes here after a successful season in the Park Theater, New York and a tour of the principal cities of the country, meeting everywhere with the highest approval and generally conceded to be the best work that has yet been done by Channing Pollock and Rennold Wolf who wrote the book and lyrics of this place as well as "The Show."

"The Beauty Shop," and a number of other musical comedy successes. The music is by Clifton Crawford and Augustus Barratt, and for bright, liting tunefulness has not been a better score written in several seasons.—Advertisement.

"EVERYWOMAN"
It would seem a difficult task to devise a theatrical and musical performance to please all classes of people; the hardened theater-goer, the tired business man, the young girl, the man of much learning and the man who cannot read and write, the person who reads light and color and the glint of rounded limbs, and the staid individual who seeks instruction and inspiration in his entertainment. Perhaps the person who has come nearest to satisfying all these varied phases of humanity was Walter Browne, the lamented author of the dramatic spectacle, "Everywoman," which will be disclosed by Henry W. Savage at the Majestic Theater Monday afternoon and evening.—Advertisement.

"THE TRAFFIC"
"The Traffic," a four-act play by Rachel Marshall, will be presented at the Majestic Theater next Tuesday and Wednesday, with matinee on Wednesday by a competent company of well-known players, headed by Bess Sankey. Those who have witnessed this play agree that it is the most shocking and daring dramatic composition that has ever been offered to the American playgoer. It deals with the industrial truths that die at the bottom of the big sociological problems of the day. Miss Marshall's play has the dignity of literary and dramatic excellence and the added quality of literary and dramatic excellence and the added quality of sincerity. To these have been added the advantage of a first-class presentation of lavish stage investiture and of wholly adequate acting.—Advertisement.

ORPHEUM
Notwithstanding the fact that Irene Franklin and Milton and the DeLons Sisters occupy probably the most important places on this week's bill at the Orpheum, there is also a team known as Toney and Norman. In a mighty clever comedy offering that is certainly worthy of special mention also. Toney and Norman are the names of an attractive young woman and very slim comedian, who is as funny as he is slim. We Now Present The Overcoats of the Season THE KLAVICLE And the BALMACAAN

With the approach of the skirmish line of winter, in self defense men's thoughts are turning overcoatward.

For those who prefer a loose, draping garment, a garment that is a distinction as well as a necessity, there can be but two answers this season to this overcoat question, THE KLAVICLE or THE BALMACAAN.

In all the years of our clothing experience it has never been our privilege to see anything that even approached it as a fashion achievement. In fact, we doubt whether there is another overcoat that can seriously dispute this Kuppenheimer production's title to absolute superiority, in point of style, comfort, and service.

Cut with all the drape and swing of a soldier's cape. Full military back and sleeves, all from one piece of cloth but without a seam. Padless shoulders, some with wide velvet collar. Full soft roll lapel. Genuine natural buffalo horn or leather buttons.

Within the impregnable defense of this sturdy-fabricked, brilliantly styled garment the wearer may face a long Winter's siege with an even and tranquil mind.

To-morrow and all next week we will make a special showing of the Klavicle and the Balmacaan coats in the Foreign, as well as in the most favored American weaves at

of the team appears in a dress suit, so tight that it would seem he slipped into it via the shoe horn route, and he lands many an original laugh over his own leanness. However, he sings a little ditty about his pity for the fat man, cause "nobody loves a fat man," and he seems otherwise perfectly satisfied that he is lean, and therefore attractive to the ladies. The female half of the team is pretty and she wears several changes of interesting gowns, although I can't refrain from placing special emphasis on that cute troubadour sort of costume that she wears for their little final dance. This is a black and white creation consisting of a black velvet coat and black and white striped satin ankle length bloomers. The comedy of the team is original and cleverly handled and they are scoring a solid hit on the current offering. Miss Franklin continues to attract as the week's unusual headliner. The bill throughout deserves capacity audiences for each performance.—Advertisement.

COLONIAL
While not pretentious in the number of players embraced, yet the new offering that came to the Colonial yesterday is rich in talent. In fact far superior to attractions usually seen in theaters where the prices are as cheap as those in vogue at the Colonial. There is a pleasing comedy skit, a pair of sidewalk comedians, and a dainty singing comedienne and the roster pleased yesterday's audience immensely. A program of first run licensed films shown in the city, with a complete daily change in the program, will be the moving picture entertainment to be provided for the remainder of the week.—Advertisement.

Antitrust Bill Passed in House by 244 to 54
Washington, D. C., Oct. 9.—The House of Representatives yesterday by a vote of 244 to 54 adopted the conference committee agreement on the Clayton antitrust bill, which materially supplements the Sherman antitrust act. The Senate has already adopted the agreement and the measure will now be presented to President Wilson for his approval, which will place the bill on the statute books.

Just before the House finally adopted the conference report Representative James R. Mann, of Illinois, the Republican leader, made a speech, in which he pleaded for a cessation of legislation and threats of legislation aimed at big business and urged that the business interests and capital be permitted to devote themselves to the task of developing the country's domestic commerce and extending its exports.

BUSINESS COMES to those who go after it. "Let a man make a better mouse trap, paint a better picture, and the world will beat a treaden path to his door, even though his house be in the woods." This philosophy is good of its kind, but in this day and age the man who has a good mouse trap doesn't wait for the world to come to him. With the aid of the printing press he describes its advantages to the world and goes after the business. Our facilities for good printing and illustrating are unsurpassed. ANNVILLE'S FISHING CONTEST
Special to The Telegraph
Anville, Pa., Oct. 9.—The fishing contest being conducted by Eugene Herr, of this place, is attracting attention among the members of this county's fishing club. Yesterday a party of Anville fishermen reported that they had the best luck of the past season on the Swatara creek. The fish included the largest bass ever caught in this section, two large carp and three smaller bass. The party consisted of John Boyer, Harry Shepler, David Sattazan and George Long.

MOTORMAN EXONERATED
Waynesboro, Pa., Oct. 9.—A coroner's jury at Chambersburg yesterday morning investigated the cause of William Miller's death, and returned a verdict exonerating Raymond Heneberger, the motorman of the Chambersburg and Shippensburg car, holding that he was in no way responsible for the accident, and that he could not control the car because of the condition of the rails.

Mrs. Sophia Tapke's Condition Three Weeks Ago and Her Condition To-day Shows a Complete and Remarkable Transformation

The public at large will be interested in the following case, which has just come to light. Mrs. Sophia Tapke is 63 years old and has now joined the enthusiastic army of Quaker supporters. Why? Read the following and the reason will be known:

As She Was Three Weeks Ago
She would wake up every morning feeling more miserable than when she went to bed the night before; her breath was foul and her tongue coated, she had almost a continuous dull headache; she was nervous, irritable and despondent and melancholy; constipation, bloating, belching and dizziness tormented her; she was losing in weight and her color was becoming a deadly sallow. She happened to read about Quaker Extract and the Health Teacher in the papers and she sent for a treatment of Quaker Extract unbelieved to anybody. After taking it a few days she noticed an improvement. She grew better from day to day.

As She Is To-day
She now sleeps and rests well, wakes up refreshed, has no more coating on her tongue. Her breath is pure, her color fresh, appetite good; she has gained 3 1/2 pounds and she is now happy to inform her friends that it was Quaker Extract and nothing else that really cured her. This testimonial is published with her entire permission.
