

Pelvic Catarrh Tongue Cannot Express How I Suffered I Would Not Do Without Peruna. I Thank You.

Miss Emmette K. Haberkorn, 2252 Gravois Ave., St. Louis, Mo., writes: "For over two years I was troubled with catarrh of the pelvic organs. I heard of Dr. Hartman's book, 'The Pelvic Life,' I read it and wrote to the doctor, who answered my letter promptly. I began taking treatment as soon as possible. Tongue cannot express how I suffered with my stomach, and I also was troubled with catarrh of the head. I didn't feel like myself for long time. So, I began taking Peruna. I have taken four bottles, and now I cannot praise it enough. Any one who has chronic catarrh should write to Dr. Hartman. He will help any one. I feel grateful for what the doctor has done for me, and would not do without Peruna. I now enjoy as good health as ever. I find it has improved my health so much that I will recommend it to any one cheerfully. I thank the doctor very much for his kindness."

HOW TO PREVENT ACID STOMACHS AND FOOD FERMENTATION

By a Stomach Specialist. As a specialist who has spent many years in the study and treatment of stomach troubles, I have been forced to the conclusion that most people who complain of stomach trouble possess stomachs that are abnormal in structure and normal. The real trouble, that which causes all the pain and difficulty, is the excess of acid and fermentation, aggravated by food fermentation. Hyper-acidity irritates the delicate lining of the stomach and food fermentation causes wind which distends the stomach abnormally, causing that full, bloated feeling. This both acid and fermentation interfere with and retard the process of digestion. The stomach is usually healthy and strong, but is usually almost base endurance by these foreign elements—acid and wind. In all such cases—and they comprise 90 per cent. of all stomach difficulties—the first and only step necessary is to neutralize the acid and stop the fermentation by taking in a little warm or cold water immediately after eating, from one to two teaspoonsful of baking soda, or a few grains of bicarbonate of soda, and only really effective antacid and food corrective known. The acid will be neutralized and the fermentation stopped almost instantly, and your stomach will at once proceed to digest the food in a healthy, normal manner. Be sure to ask your druggist for the bisurate magnesia, as I have found other forms of magnesia to be irregularly valuable properties.—P. J. G.—Advertisement.

There's a Reason For Baldness— But No Excuse For It

How To Prevent Grayness: What To Do If Already Bald. Neglect of the hair and scalp is the primary reason for baldness in nearly all cases. But any excuse for the neglect is necessarily a poor excuse. A little systematic attention and the use of a really good hair tonic will destroy and prevent the return of dandruff. That, in turn, prevents premature grayness and baldness. The best way is to mix your own hair tonic at home, or have a reliable druggist mix it for you, according to this formula: Dissolve one-half dram of Menthol Crystals in six ounces Bay Rum; then add two ounces Lavona de Compose. Mix thoroughly. Rub into the scalp with fingers or stiff brush night and morning. This is the best-known formula for dandruff, to stop falling hair and to beautify the hair, and to stimulate the growth of new hair. One of the ingredients not only stimulates the hair-growing follicles, but tends to revive the activity of the pigment-forming cells, so as to restore the natural color of the hair. The ingredients of this hair tonic can be purchased at any drug store. Try this tonic night and morning for 30 days, even if totally bald; it has accomplished wonders for others.—Advertisement.

To Put on Flesh And Increase Weight

A Physician's Advice. Most thin people eat from four to six pounds of good solid, fat-making food every day and still do not increase in weight one ounce, while on the other hand many of the plump, chunky folks eat very lightly and keep gaining all the time. It's all both to say that this is the nature of the individual. It isn't Nature's way at all. Thin folks stay thin because their powers of assimilating food are defective. They absorb just enough of the food they eat to maintain life and a semblance of health and strength. Staying won't help them. A dozen meals a day won't make them gain a single "stay there" pound. All the fat-producing elements of their food just stay in the intestines until they pass from the body as waste. What such people need is something that will prepare these fatty food elements so that their blood can absorb them and deposit them all about the body—something, too, that will multiply their red blood corpuscles and increase their blood's carrying power. For such a condition I always recommend eating a Sargol tablet with every meal. Sargol is not, as some believe, a patented drug, but is a scientific compound of iron, phosphorus, calcium, and powerful flesh building elements known to chemistry. It is absolutely harmless, yet wonderfully effective and a single tablet eaten with each meal often has the effect of increasing the weight of a thin man or woman from three to five pounds a week. Sargol is sold by Geo. A. Gorges and other good druggists everywhere, and a positive guarantee of weight increase or money back.—Advertisement.

How to Eradicate All Superfluous Hair

Advice by a Skin Specialist. The best means I have ever found for removing all signs of disfiguring growths of hair on the face, neck, arms, or hands is a new preparation called Mrs. Osgood's Wonder. I have recommended it in thousands of cases and I know personally of its ability to banish every hair forever. It cannot injure the skin or complexion and is quite inexpensive. You can get Mrs. Osgood's Wonder from Kennedy's Drug Store or any up-to-date druggist. Signed Money-Back Guarantee with every package. Do not apply this treatment except where total destruction of hair is desired.—Advertisement.

THE LAST SHOT

By FREDERICK PALMER

Copyright, 1914, by Charles Scribner's Sons.

"One position... the Twin Boulder Redoubt, it is called," he announced at last. "We shall not press hard in front. We shall drive in masses on either side and storm the flanks."

This she was telephoning to Lanstron a few minutes later and having, in return, all the news of the Browns. The sheer fascination of knowing what both sides were doing exerted its spell in keeping her to her part.

"They've lost four hundred thousand men now, Lanny," she said.

"And we only a hundred thousand. We're whittling them down," answered Lanstron.

"Whittling them down! What a ghastly expression!" she gasped. "You are as bad as Westerling and I am worse than either of you! I—I announced the four hundred thousand as if they were a score—a score in a game in our favor. I am helping, Lanny? All my sacrifice isn't for nothing?" she asked for the hundredth time.

"Immeasurably. You have saved my many lives!" he replied.

"And cost them many?" she asked.

"Yes, Marta, no doubt," he admitted; "but no more than they would have lost in the end. It is only the mounting up of their casualties that can end the war. Thus the lesson must be taught."

"And I can be of most help when the attack on the main defense is begun?"

"Yes."

"And when Westerling finds that my information is false about Engadrin—"

"Yes."

"She had never put the question to him in this way before. What would Westerling do if he found her out?"

"My God, Marta!" he exclaimed. "If I'd had any sense I would have thought of that in the beginning and torn out the phone! I've been mad, mad with the one thought of the nation—inhuman in my greedy patriotism. I will not let you go any further!"

It was a new thing for her to be rallying him; yet this she did as the strange effect of his protest on the abnormal sensibilities that her acting had developed.

"Thinking of me—little me!" she called back. "Of one person's comfort when hundreds of thousands of other women are in terror; when the destiny of millions is at stake! Lanny, you are in a blue funk!" and she was laughing loudly and hysterically. "I'm going on—going on like one in a trance who can't stop if he would. It's all right, Lanny. I undertook the task myself. I must see it through!"

After she had hung up the receiver her buoyancy vanished. She leaned against the wall of the tunnel weakly. Yes, what if she were found out? She was thinking of the possibility seriously for the first time. Yet, for only a moment did she dwell upon it before she dismissed it in sudden reaction.

"No matter what they do to me or what becomes of me!" she thought, "I'm a lost soul, anyway. The thing is to serve as long as I can—and then I don't care!"

CHAPTER XVII.

Thumbs Down for Bouchard.

Haggard and at bay, Bouchard faced the circle of frowns around the polished expanse of that precious herring, the dining-room table of the Gallands. The dreaded reckoning of the apprehensions which kept him restlessly awake at night had come at the next staff council after the fall of the Twin Boulder Redoubt. With the last approach to the main line of defense cleared, one chapter of the war was finished. But the officers did not manifest the elation that the occasion called for, which is not saying that they were discouraged. They had no doubt that eventually the Grays would dictate peace in the Browns' capital. Exactly stated, their mood was one of repressed professional irritation. Not until the third attempt was Twin Boulder Redoubt taken. As far as results were concerned, the nicely planned first assault might have been a stroke of strategy by the Browns to drive the Grays into an impassable fire zone.

"The trouble is we are not in formed!" exclaimed Turcas, opening his thin lips even less than usual, but twisting them in a significant manner as he gave his words a rasping emphasis. The others hastened to follow his lead with equal candor.

"Exactly. We have no reports of their artillery strength, which we had greatly underestimated," said the chief of artillery.

"Our maps of their forts could not be less correct if revealed to us for purposes of deceit. Again and again we have thought that we had them surprised, only to be surprised ourselves. In short, they know what we are doing and we don't know what they are doing!" said the tactical expert.

"There the chief of the aerostatic division took the defensive.

"They certainly don't learn our plans with their planes and dirigibles!" he declared energetically.

"Hardly, when we never see them over our lines."

"The Browns are acting on the defensive in the air as well as on the earth!"

"But our own planes and dirigibles bring little news," said Turcas. "I mean, those that return," he added pungently.

"And few do return. My men are not wanting in courage!" replied the chief aerostatic officer. "Immediately we get over the Brown lines the Browns, who keep cruising to and fro, are on us like hawks. They risk anything to bring us down. When we descend low we strike the fire of their high-angle guns, which are distributed the length of the line. I believe both their aerial fleet and their high-angle artillery were greatly underestimated. Finally, I cannot reduce my force too much in scouting or they might take the offensive."

"Another case of not being in formed!" concluded Turcas, returning grimly to his point.

He looked at Bouchard, and every one began looking at Bouchard. If the Gray tacticians had been outplayed by their opponents, if their losses for the ground gained exceeded calculations, then it was good to have a scapegoat for their professional mistakes. Bouchard was Westerling's choice for chief of intelligence. His blind loyalty was pleasing to his superior, who, hitherto, had promptly silenced any suggestion of criticism by repeating that the defensive always appeared to the offensive to be better informed than itself. But this time Westerling let the conversation run on without a word of excuse for his favorite.

Each fresh reproach from the staff, whose opinion was the only one he knew, was a dagger thrust to Bouchard. At night he had lain awake worrying about the leak; by day he had sought to trace it, only to find every clue leading back to the staff. Now he was as confused in his shame as a sensitive schoolboy. Vaguely, in his distress, he heard Westerling asking a question, while he saw all these eyes staring at him.

"What information have we about Engadrin?"

"I believe it to be strongly fortified!" stammered Bouchard.

"You believe? You have no information?" pursued Westerling.

"No, sir," replied Bouchard. "Nothing—nothing new!"

"We do seem to get little information," said Westerling, looking hard at Bouchard in silence—the combined silence of the whole staff.

This public reproach could have one meaning. He should soon receive a note which would thank him politely for his services, in the stereotyped phrases always used for the purpose, before announcing his transfer to a less responsible post.

"Very little, sir!" Bouchard replied doggedly.

"There is that we had from one of our aviators whose machine came down in a smash just as he got over our infantry positions on his return," said the chief aerostatic officer. "He was in a dying condition when we picked him up, and, as he was speaking with the last breaths in his body, naturally his account of what he had seen was somewhat incoherent. It would be of use, however, if we had plans of the forts that would enable us to check off his report intelligently."

"Yet, what evidence have we that Partow or Lanstron has done more than to make a fortunate guess or show military insight?" Westerling asked. "There is the case of my own belief that Bordir was weak, which proved correct."

"Last night we got a written telegraphic staff message from the body of a dead officer of the Browns found in the Twin Boulder Redoubt," said the vice-chief, "which showed that in an hour after our plans were transmitted to our own troops for the first attack they were known to the enemy."

"That looks like a leak!" exclaimed Westerling. "A leak, Bouchard, do you hear?" He was frowning and his lips were drawn and his cheeks mottled with red in a way not pleasant to see. Stiffening in his chair, a flash of desperation in his eye, Bouchard's bony, long hand gripped the table edge. Every one felt that a sensation was coming.

"Yes, I have known that there was a leak!" he said with hoarse, painful deliberation. "I have sent out every possible tracer. I have followed up every sort of clue. I have transferred a dozen men. I have left nothing undone!"

"With no result?" persisted Westerling impatiently.

"Yes, always the same result: That the leak is here in this house—here in the grand headquarters of the army under our very noses. I know it is not the telegraphers or the clerks. It is a member of the staff!"

"Have you gone out of your head?" demanded Westerling. "What staff officer? How does he get the information to the enemy? Name the persons you suspect here and now! Explain, if you want to be considered sane!"

Here was the blackest accusation that could be made against an officer! The chosen men of the staff, tested through many grades before they reached the inner circle of cabinet secrecy, lost the composure of a council all were leaning forward toward Bouchard breathlessly for his answer.

"There are three women on the grounds," said Bouchard. "I have been against their staying from the first."

He got no further. His words were drowned by the outburst of one of the younger members of the staff, who had either to laugh or choke at the picture of this deep-eyed, spectral sort of man, known as a woman-hater, in his revelation of the farcical source of his suspicions.

"Why not include Clarissa Eileen?" some one asked, starting a chorus of satirical exclamations.

"How do they get through the line?" "Yes, past a wall of bayonets!"

"When not even a soldier in uniform is allowed to move away from his command without a pass?"

"By wireless?"

"Perhaps by telegraph!"

GREAT DISPLAY AT HAGERSTOWN FAIR

Hundreds of Race Horses on List; Parade of Livestock Splendid Spectacle

Special to The Telegraph. Hagerstown, Md., Oct. 13.—To-day the fifty-ninth annual exhibition of the Hagerstown Fair Association opened with a record-breaking crowd in attendance and all departments overflowing with exhibits. President T. A. Poffenberger estimates that from 100,000 to 125,000 persons will attend the fair during the four days, providing the weather continues favorable. In the household department alone there are 10,000 entries. Between 1,000 and 1,500 head of horses, cattle, sheep and swine have been entered and are housed in the new concrete livestock building erected this summer at a cost of $10,000. A feature of the fair is the daily parade of livestock in the horse show ring.

There are 2,000 more fowls in the poultry show than last year. This department of the fair has a country-wide reputation and is one of the biggest features of the fair. Exhibits of poultry are shown from all over the East, North and South and as far West as Illinois, some coming from Canada. The floral, horticultural and agricultural halls are crowded with exhibits. Owing to the bumper crop of fruit this year the exhibit of apples, peaches and other varieties of fruit is the finest ever seen at the fair.

Many of the best horses in the East have been entered in the races, including 125 harness horses and 100 runners. The purses aggregate $7,200. Entries in seven classes of the horse show have been made. Hundreds of persons from the Cumberland Valley as far as Harrisburg are here to attend the fair.

THE EASIEST WAY TO END DANDRUFF

Stop Falling Hair and Itching Scalp

There is one sure way that never fails to remove dandruff completely and that is to dissolve it. This destroys it entirely. To do this, just get about four ounces of plain, ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips. By morning most, if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have. You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop instantly, and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better. If you want to keep your hair looking rich, do by all means get rid of dandruff, for nothing destroys the hair so quickly. It not only starves the hair and makes it fall out, but it makes it stringy, straggly, dull, dry, brittle and lifeless, and everybody notices it. You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. It is inexpensive, and four ounces is all you will need. This simple remedy has never been known to fail.—Advertisement.
