MADE SCHOOLS FOR THE PORTO RICANS

Governor Allen Tells What Dr. Brumbaugh Did For the People of the Island

The ability for organization and administration shown by Dr. Martin G. Brumbaugh, now Republican gubernatorial candidate, when he served as Commissioner of Education for Porto Rico immediately after the military government was supplanted by the civil government, under the Foraker act, are told by Charles H. Allen, first Governor, now living in New York. In a letter received yesterday at headquarters of the Brumbaugh citizens' committee here says:

"On Dr. Brumbaugh's arrival there was not a public schoolhouse in the island. It was said about that time that Guatemala was the only country in the region for which statistics were obtainable, where the proportion of illiterates was higher than in Porto Rico. The census of November, 1899, put the number of children within the scholastic age in Porto Rico at 322,393. Of these only 25,738, or about 8 per cent, attended the schools, leaving the enormous number of nearly 300,000 unprovided for. It was most fortunate for the American administration of the island, as well as for the people themselves, that a man with such a talent for organization and enrollment as Dr. Brumbaugh, was selected for the work."
