HOW MARTIN MADE GOOD IN HIS YOUTH

Judge Orady Speaks About the Struggles of the Republican Candidate to Get Along

PAID OFF FATHER'S DEBTS

Intimate Story of the Early Years From a Man Who Knows Dr. Brumbaugh's Life

Judge George B. Orady, of the Superior Court, who was district attorney of Huntingdon county when he was only thirty, and who is known all over the State, has a profound admiration for Martin G. Brumbaugh, the Republican candidate for Governor of Pennsylvania. Judge Orady in talking about the candidate's younger days said: "One day a long-legged country boy came into my office and said that he would like to be the Huntingdon county superintendent of schools. He asked me if I were in favor of his election and what I thought his chances would be. "I wished him good luck but said that I did not think he had much chance because he was so young, had no political influence and nothing but his sturdiness to depend upon. That young man was Martin G. Brumbaugh, the Republican candidate for Governor. After he left me he walked all over that county visiting every district and soliciting support. "And strangely enough that brings me to another story that illustrates another point in Dr. Brumbaugh's character. When he was a youngster, his father bought 2,000 acres of timber land from J. Simpson Africa, for the purpose of giving the men who owed him for the supplies that they had bought in his store a chance to work it out at the sawmill, in the lumber camps, and, of course, like those things usually work out, instead of paying their debts, these men bought more than they were earning.

Went to Father's Aid

"When Dr. Brumbaugh was 18 years of age an dteaching in Juniata College and just graduating there, his uncle Henry, a farmer, went to him one day and said: "Your father's property has been collected and the members of the congregation and it is due to the fact that he would not collect his accounts, and the people owe him more than he owes, but his accounts cannot be collected and the property will have to be sold. The church had a conference at James' Creek over this matter, and they decided that, if you would take charge of your father's business as soon as you become of age, and pay back the money, the congregation would get together, each one put in what he could, and give the money to me, and I am to buy your father's property at sheriff's sale. I will give him notes, and the members of the congregation and I will hold the property as my protection until you pay off these notes, and when you pay off these notes, I will deed the property back to you and your father. You are under age; you cannot do more than give me your word. Will you do it?"

"That was a staggering load to put on a young man, but Dr. Brumbaugh never wavered and said he would assume his father's debts. The members of the church gave such sums as they had and took his Uncle Henry's notes and went to the sheriff's sale and got the sheriff's deed for the property. When Dr. Brumbaugh became of age the first business he undertook was to pay that debt.

Chopped Trees

"This business was a contract to furnish telegraph poles to the Pennsylvania Railroad. After school on Saturdays and on holidays and all through the summer young Brumbaugh worked to get out the poles. Finally, after the poles were all out they were worked down the river to a boom at Ardenheim, where they were to be delivered f. o. b. It was in July, and young Brumbaugh worked all day and by the light of the moon at night to get these logs over the shoals, because the river was low. Suddenly there came a heavy rain which resulted in a freshet that carried the poles down into the boom, smashed the boom and sent those poles all the way down the Juniata to Harrisburg. There was nothing for young Brumbaugh to do but to take a cant hook and, with his father, they worked down the river, rolled the logs in and floated them to the nearest railroad station, where they were loaded. The two slept in barns, lived on milk and what they bought from farmers, and followed those poles all the way to Newport. It was of the mishap, Dr. Brumbaugh has since told that he cleared $2,100 on that contract.

A Vote He Needed

"In his trips over the country while seeking the office of county superintendent, one of the last places that young Brumbaugh went was to Auckwick, and late one evening he got to the house of the late James Harper, a fine, sturdy, Scotch-Irish farmer, and asked him whether he would vote for him. He said no, he would have to support Mr. Burnett, who was one of Brumbaugh's opponents. He said to the young man: "Come in anyhow and get something to eat. If you have no other place to go, I will keep you over night." During their talk in the course of the evening he said: "Are you any relative to that boy who helped his father down with the telegraph poles last summer?" The answer was: "Mr. Harper, I happen to be that boy." He said: "If that is the case I will support you, and I will tell the other man I cannot support him." Dr. Brumbaugh was elected by a majority of one vote over two opponents."

PUBLIC SERVICE GIVES DECISIONS

Refuses to Give York Water People Right to Have Attorney General Sue City

The Public Service Commission has decided that the Lehigh Valley Light and Power Company is required to charge the Good Shepherd Home, located in Allentown, the rates set forth in its tariffs and schedules filed and posted, in the absence of any evidence that these rates are unjust and unreasonable. The complainant alleged that representatives of the company had estimated that the power necessary to operate the laundry at the home could be furnished for $50 a year, and on the basis of this estimate the installation of the service was ordered. The bills rendered by the company, however, exceeded the estimate and the complainant refused to pay. In the matter of the petition of the Phoenixville, Valley Forge and Stratford Railway Company for the approval of an ordinance contract, granting to the company the right to construct and operate a line on certain streets in the borough of Phoenixville, the commission decided that the approval was necessary for the service, accommodation, safety or convenience of the public. The petition was objected to by a rival company. The York Water Company petitioned the commission to request the Attorney General to proceed in the name of the Commonwealth, by junction or other proper remedy, to restrain the city of York from enforcing the provisions of an ordinance passed by the city, requiring the Water Company to conform to certain regulations in regard to meters. The commission held, in this case, that there is no such violation of the public remedy as the Attorney General could be asked to restrain, and that if the ordinance of the city is in conflict with the law, the remedy of the complainants is in the courts.

She Will Now Join the Others on Their Vacation

A Happy Change in the Arrangements and Mrs. Hugo Kotte Will Take the Trip She Never Expected to Be in Condition to Take

For many months Mrs. Hugo Kotte and her son daughter have been talking about, arranging for and anticipating the pleasant vacation they intended to take this year. Many weeks back they decided to leave Harrisburg. But all their bright hopes and pleasant anticipations were blasted a few months ago when Mrs. Kotte became afflicted with rheumatism. First she had pains across her back, then in her shoulders, arms, elbows, and hands, and finally her knees and ankles became affected and also her heels and toes. She was obliged to use a cane to hobble around. That settled all thoughts of a vacation for her. She began to doctor, use medicine and oil, but all to no purpose. She called at Kennedy's drug store, and while there decided to try a treatment of Quaker. After taking this treatment a week she reported a slight improvement, the second week she felt still better and yesterday she felt so well that she has decided to take the vacation with her children after all. So thus another family was made happy by Quaker Extract and Oil of Balm.

If you suffer from rheumatism, catarrh, kidney, liver, stomach or blood trouble, try Quaker Herb Extract, $1.00 a bottle, $ for $5.00. Oil of Balm, 25c. At H. C. Kennedy's, 20 South Third street.—Advertisement.
