

Eye Talks

By J. S. Belsinger

NO. 2

COULD you, do you think, place a cash value on your sight? Would you, for any price, be willing to live the rest of your days deprived of the use of your eyes?

Ridiculous questions, you say.

Not at all.

With all of our boasted practicability; more people are suffering to-day from eye discomforts than would care to admit it. And why? Because in the majority of cases they are not willing to have their eyes examined for fear of having to wear glasses.

An oculist—a physician—whom you should consult if your eyes are giving you any trouble—will not give you glasses. Neither will he prescribe them unless you need them.

But if he does prescribe them: it's your part of the work that will make for your perfect comfort to see that his prescription is taken to a practical optician, where efficient, capable, and thorough service enter into the making of the glasses that the oculist prescribes.

WHAT THE SHOPS ARE SHOWING. The smartest of smart boots is a new model shown at the Walk-Over Boot Shop, 226 Market street. It is of black patent leather with white kid gaiter tops, making a stunning model which sells for $6.00. It has a heavy sole and Cuban heel, making it a very appropriate, as well as attractive model for walking and street wear.

New Fashions. Would you like a new dress? After seeing the charming new fashions shown at the Central Book Store, 229 Market street, every well-dressed woman will want at least one of these attractive creations. This store shows the new December Ladies' Home Journal patterns, with pattern card and full instructions, which make dressing-making so easy that the most inexperienced person can make most attractive clothes. They are also showing all the new fashion magazines, both French and American, and one can always find at this store the latest word in fashions.

For Motoring. For motoring warm clothes are very necessary just now when the wind begins to have the penetrating chill of winter, and most comfortable for motor garments are the pretty knitted sweaters and caps shown at the Woman's Exchange, Third street at Herr. A new design in an automobile hood is on display there which may easily be copied with the assistance of Miss McCleary in charge of the Columbia yarn demonstration which has been so successful that it will be continued all next week. Free instructions are given to anyone who purchases the yarn for the articles which she wishes to make, and the jackets and sweater coats, so useful in this weather, may be made at very small expense.

Menn Helps. In buying groceries it is important to deal regularly with a reliable store so that orders given by telephone are promptly and satisfactorily filled. It is a satisfaction to know that when one asks, "Is the fruit nice to-day," or a similar question one will receive an absolutely truthful answer, and the Studebaker Grocery Store, State and Second streets, has built a reputation on just this kind of service—prompt deliveries, fair dealing, and efficient service. Then, too, whatever one buys there is the best that can be offered for the price, and at this store quality comes first, last and always. Painted Walls. For perfect cleanliness in such rooms as the kitchen, pantry or bath, painted walls have many advantages, but good housekeepers often object to them because the little cracks which are bound to appear from time to time are so unsightly and disgusting. The A. B. Tack Wall Paper Shop, 1216 N. Third street, is showing a canvas specially designed to remove this objection to painted walls, for this covering is first placed on the walls and then painted, making a permanently substantial background. This may also be had in the lighterest muslin or heavier burlap, according to one's taste.
