VICTIM'S WIFE KILLS LOUISVILLE GUNMAN

Former Saloon Keeper Fatally Shot by Gangster in Toledo

THREE OTHERS IN HIDING

"We Have Message for You," Said Quartet as They Opened Fire

By Associated Press

Toledo, Ohio, Dec. 4.—One Louisville gunman is dead, three others are hiding in the underworld section of the city, a Toledo man is in a hospital with perhaps fatal wounds and his wife is held by the police as a coroner's witness as the result of the shooting which took place in the residence section last night.

The wounded man is Harry C. Plummer, until about a year ago a saloon keeper at Louisville, Ky. His wife is said to have fired the shot which killed the unidentified man.

The shooting occurred at Plummer's home when two men rang the door bell and said "We have a message for you from Louisville, Harry." Plummer opened the door and the men opened fire. Plummer fell to the floor with two bullet wounds. His wife, in her room upstairs, heard the shooting and seized a revolver from beneath a pillow on her bed. Hurriedly descending the stairs, she fired at one of the intruders. They made their exit through a kitchen window. The dead man was found by the police in the rear yard. A dragnet was thrown out. The men were traced to the tenderloin, where they were swallowed up.

FATE OF DEWET IS YET TO BE DECIDED

Death Penalty for Treason Threatened; His Capture Ends Rebellion

By Associated Press

London, Dec. 4, 2:50 A. M.—The question as to what punishment should be inflicted on General Christian De Wet, the rebel leader in South Africa, recently captured, is recognized in England as one of great importance. Martial law is in operation in the Union of South Africa and the death penalty for treason would be within the possibilities. The government proclamation calling upon rebels to lay down their arms offered amnesty except to those who had taken a prominent part in the rebellion.

Cape Town messages say that the capture of De Wet relieves the government of great anxiety. The rising in the Orange Free State at one time threatened to be formidable because of General De Wet's military prestige, but his capture is believed to have ended it.

The happenings at one town give an illustration of the lengths to which the rebellion might have gone. Five hundred farmers were commandeered to defend the town, but a majority of them went over to the rebels and looted the place they had been called upon to defend.

Checks for amounts anywhere from $12 to $70 will be mailed to thousands of people throughout Central Pennsylvania between December 10 and December 15, and as a result local merchants expect business to boom as it never has in the history of the city.

Merchants are making special provision to take care of vast Christmas trade which will come as a direct result of the receipt of the thousands of dollars by the club members. PRINCE OF WALES GALLANT SOLDIER

Among the Keenest and Hardest Working Men in Army; on Firing Line

By Associated Press

London, Dec. 4, 4:25 A. M.—"The Prince of Wales has at last obtained the dearest wish of his heart and is present with the army. He has won golden opinions," says the military expert of the Times in a description of the life at General French's headquarters.

The personality of this slight and almost fragile-looking prince was but little known to the army until he joined it. He walks six miles before breakfast every morning, drives his own car and spends every moment of his working hours in the trenches with the army.

The writer says that while it is necessary for the commander of an army to work in the quiet headquarters behind the army, the prince's presence cannot be prevented from dashing along the road under heavy fire to visit distant troops and going into the trenches to get a close view of the infantry positions.

Famous Old Hotel and Restaurant, Once Big Money Maker, Fails

New York, Dec. 4.—Smith and McNeill's restaurant and hotel, a landmark for sixty years in Washington and Greenview streets and known by thousands of travelers when the only entrance to New York was by ferry, made an assignment yesterday and may be compelled to close its doors forever.

The restaurant was started by Henry Smith and Thomas B. McNeill in 1849 in a basement room, emerging above the surface of the street several years later in a part of the present quarters. Smith died in 1881, but McNeill continued daily at the place until three years ago, when he retired, at the age of 82, to his ranch at Ventura, Cal. He was more than once a millionaire, and to the end he continued the same homely methods of business that had marked the partnership. For years under that organization the services had been paid nightly and when the share of the house had been set aside the partners themselves divided what remained.

ALLIES TAKE OFFENSIVE IF ENEMY FAILS

Kaiser's Forces Again Hurl Themselves Toward Coast; New English Army Prepared to Advance to Attack if New Effort of Opposing Soldiers Is Repulsed; Hot Fighting in Poland With No Decision There

Should the new German assault meet with the same fate as have previous attempts to reach the coast of the channel, observers in London expect that it will be followed by a general advance on the part of the allies. There are signs of approaching activities in Alsace, where the French recently have been improving their positions. At the same time the Germans are said to have been heavily reinforced in this section. General Joffre's recent declaration to the Alsacians that "we are back here to stay" may soon be put to test.

The almost complete stoppage of the war to-day from official sources raised the question whether a censorship of unusual severity had been put in force. The cables brought practically no information notwithstanding the fact that surely in the east and possibly in the west there are now in progress battles of the highest importance. On several occasions earlier in the war there were similar interruptions of news dispatches, which proved later to have been due to rigid censorship during the progress of vital events.

For several days it has been intimated unofficially that another great battle in Belgium and Northwestern France was pending. The forces of the allies in that region have been strengthened and the assumption of supreme command there by the English general, Sir John French, was believed to indicate that the new English army recently sent to the continent had been scattered along the Yser in Belgium and in Northern France, perhaps in preparation for a great attack. It has been assumed by some military critics that the allies on this occasion would take the offensive, since the Germans, presumably, were weakened by the withdrawal of troops for use in the campaign against Russia. Others have stated, however, that Germany had determined to make a "last effort" to push through to the English channel.

Germany has resumed the offensive in the East and is striking another blow at Russia. Although authentic reports pictured the situation only in vaguest outline, it was apparent that the Germans, who only a few days ago were fighting desperately to avert a calamitous defeat, are now renewing their efforts to sweep back the enemy. A new battle has developed southwest of Lodz, where the Germans have formed another line and are again attempting to pierce the Russian center. The forces of Emperor William thus are operating at a comparative advantage with the beginning of their third assault. Their first invasion of Poland, which took them almost to Warsaw, was followed by a retreat to German territory. The second movement was checked near Lodz, but on this occasion they succeeded in holding their main positions, so that now the attempt at a forward movement is initiated by forces already fixed on Russian soil.

Allies May Have Begun The first official word to indicate that the predicted assault of the allies on the German lines in Belgium may have begun came to-day. The German War Office statement says that the French have made repeated attacks in Flanders, which were repulsed.

This brief reference does not make it clear how extensive the movement is. For several days it had been reported unofficially that the allies had determined on an assault which would lead to one of the greatest struggles of the war with the object on their part of breaking the German line in the northwest, and, if possible, forcing a general retreat.

In Alsace, too, the French apparently have made a new attack. The German statement reports that an attempted advance northwest of Altkirch, Upper Alsace, was beaten back with considerable losses for the French.

Paris and London are curiously reserved concerning these reported developments. So far as was related in dispatches from those cities, no events of great importance are under way. In the campaign against the Russians, Germany asserts that she has won a victory in East Prussia, inflicting heavy losses in checking a Russian advance. [Continued on Page 9]
