NEW REPORTS ARE
NOW DEMANDED

State's Accident Reports Must Be Made According to the State's Regulations
 Pennsylvania to-day puts into use the new uniform accident report for governmental use which has been agreed upon by departments of the United States government and by officials of a score of States. These reports were drafted by committees representing various States, railroads and other corporations and labor organizations and provide for information which can be interchanged. Thousands of the new blanks have been sent out by the State Bureau of Statistics, a branch of the Department of Labor and Industry, and will be required on all accidents occurring today and thereafter.
 The Pennsylvania state government has also arranged to put into use today the new code of causes of accidents, which is a list of ten general causes of accidents, each subdivided, which will be used in the study of accidents and means of prevention which has been undertaken by the State. Over a dozen States have adopted this code.
 The annual New Year's entertainment to be held to-night in Falmesock Hall for the members and friends of the Young Men's Christian Association, will crowd the auditorium to its capacity, if the records of previous years are maintained. Two tickets have been issued to each member. DeWitt Paxton, humorist and impersonator, of New York City, will be the entertainer.
 Open house and public reception, with refreshments for old and young, will be held to-day between 11 and 5 o'clock, when hundreds of people were welcomed. Visitors were met in the lobby by a reception committee made up of the executive committee of the association and twelve young men, who conducted strangers through the building.
 Ice cream, sandwiches, and coffee were served in the social room, on the second floor, by a committee of twelve ladies. Decorations of laurel and holly were hung about the rooms.
 Physical drills and class exhibits in the gymnasium were conducted at 3 o'clock by Directors Edward B. Roth and Frank G. Roth, Jr. The business men's, young men's and junior sections each played a basketball contest.

DEEP SNOWS COVER STATE WATERSHED
Interesting Summary of Conditions Issued by the State Water Supply Commission
 Streams of the State are generally ice bound and the Susquehanna and Allegheny watersheds are covered with snow from one to twelve inches in depth, according to a survey of the stream conditions of the State at the end of October, just issued by the State Water Supply Commission. It is stated that the streams became ice bound at a much earlier date than usual and while they were at extremely low stages.
 Regarding the streams the report says: "Except in its lower reaches, the main Susquehanna is frozen, while the tributaries in this basin are covered with ice varying from six to sixteen inches in thickness. This watershed is under snow cover ranging from one to twelve inches in depth and the low temperature has furnished exceptionally fine sleighing in some localities. The Allegheny and Monongahela watersheds are covered with snow ranging from one to eleven inches in depth, while the Allegheny and Youghiogheny rivers are frozen at nearly all points, with the other western streams generally ice bound.
 The navigation pools of the Schuylkill and Lehigh rivers are frozen to the reaches of the Delaware are ice covered, although the amount of accumulated snow in the eastern part of the State is generally small, with none in the southeastern districts. It is expected that the storm and thaw conditions now prevailing over the State will raise the present low condition of the streams."

STUDY LIFE HISTORY
OF JUDGES
Second-hand Religion Caused the Downfall of Jews; Forgot Fathers in Heathendom

The International Sunday School Lesson for January 3 is "God's Patience With Israel," Judges 2:7-19.
 By William T. Ellis
 If, just for this one New Year Sunday, Mr. Average Man could discard his shallow sophistication and his American "smallness" and acquire, for a few hours the spirit of sound wisdom, he would surely go apart for a time and take counsel with his grandfathers and with the grand old men of the past.
 This is a critical time; the most critical in all the history of the world. There never has been a New Year's season so solemnizing as the present. To meet the call of an emergency successfully we must look backward and forward; listen to the past and to the future; weigh our responsibilities to those who have gone before and to those who will come after us.
 Opportunely, the millions who base their serious thinking largely on the International Sunday School Lessons will find a stimulus for the present occasion in the new course of lessons in Old Testament History which begin to-day. The opening study is of a people who had come back on their grandfathers. They were the third generation. Direct contact with the great personalities of the earlier day had been lost.
 Like the rest of us, they were so built that they needed great leadership. But these Hebrews had to face fresh and difficult problems alone. They could not stand on the shoulders of their own feet, and to prove by themselves their fidelity to their past and to their future. A searching question concerning them as concerning us, were they the sort to whom grandfathers could look back in pride?
 The answer is tersely told by the Scriptures: "And all the generation were gathered unto their fathers; and there arose another generation after them, that knew not Jehovah, nor yet the work which he had wrought for Israel in the days of Israel did that which was evil in the sight of Jehovah, and served the Baalim; and they forsook Jehovah, the God of their fathers, who had brought them out of the land of Egypt, and followed other gods, gods of the peoples that were round about them, and bowed themselves down unto them; and they provoked Jehovah to anger."
 After Joshua, What?
 The city of Philadelphia has of recent days come under the spell of a powerful personality. "Billy" Sunday begins on the day of this lesson an evangelistic campaign in this city of a people who have been brought into it by the most significant religious enterprise attempted in an American municipality within the memory of the present generation.
 A thrill of hope and a thrill of exaltation has been in the hearts of anxious observers as they have beheld the way in which the conservative old Quaker city has received the approach of this religious leader. Hundreds of thousands of men and women have gathered in biweekly preparatory prayer meetings. The ministers have assembled from time to time in the largest clerical gatherings the city has known for a generation. Tens of thousands of men have already been added to the classes of the city. The newspapers are full of news of every phase of preparation for the campaign. The churches are a thrill with expectation, so that observers say "The revival had already begun."
 All of which is a modern commentary on the need for Joshua. The Church's cry to-day is for great leadership. Can any rally her forces for conquest commensurate with her might and her obligations?
 The momentum of Joshua and his associates had carried the Israelites to the third generation of life in Canaan. The pioneers had set them going, and they had continued under this impetus. Joshua and Caleb alone of all who entered the Promised Land had carried with them the personal memories of marvelous providences that had accompanied the deliverance from Egypt. After the death of Joshua the Israelites forgot the lessons of the past. They forgot the mighty works of God in the first overcoming of the land. These men had possessed a first-hand, experimental knowledge of what Jehovah could do.
 When the New Generation Forgets
 Now the third generation was trying the dangerous experiment of living on second-hand religion. They had failed to acquire a personal, personal knowledge of the ways of God. The pressure of the peoples and the customs about them had steadily and insidiously corrupted the force of heredity. The tug and pull of heathendom at times proved greater than the personality and memory of the fathers. There had been failure to root out the idolatry and the evils of the past, a failure which is a temptation that always besets good people. In consequence, the Children of Israel were denounced by a seductive philosophy of creed and conduct which threatened the very existence of their religion and mission. There came a great slump in the life of the Jews.
 A prevalent American notion is that when on Broadway one should follow Broadway's fashions. The bright lights of the "Great White Way" of the metropolis are as the light of life to multitudes of thousands of persons. Standards which are almost wholly sensual, and which place outward seeming above inward being, are accepted as prevalent and mandatory. Most of the men and women who parade Broadway in the neighborhood of Forty-second street would be ashamed to be seen walking there with their old-fashioned parents. Never mind what the parents would think; that is another story.
 The biography of a myriad of young people to-day is written in the words of the lesson: "They forsook the Lord God of their fathers . . . and followed the gods of the people that were round about them, and bowed themselves unto them and provoked the Lord to anger."
 The lure of immorality
 In passing the fact should be recalled that the reason the Jews fell back so easily into idolatry was because of the appeal which the practices associated with idolatry have always made to the senses. The Bible speaks in general terms of the immorality associated with idol worship. Those of us who have traveled in idol-worshipping lands know that this characteristic of the gods is a bridled license to indulge all imaginable and unimaginable sensual excesses in literally a part of the idolatry of the whole world.
 The monothelism laid down by Abraham and Moses required a strict moral life; and every generation that has ever lived has found it a strain to adhere to a high code of morality. Especially great was the temptation to abandon this in the case of the Children of Israel, because on every hand were seductive lures of fashionable idolatrous immorality.
 War News from an Old Book
 The old proverb, "Like priest, like people," has many illustrations in this book of the Judges. When they had strong leadership the Jews did well; but there seemed to be little staying power in the mass of the people themselves.

 This is called the Book of the Judges, but that word "Judges" does not mean administrators of the law. The judges were the deliverers, the defenders, the champions, the rules, the heroes. There was little of the judicial quality; for instance, in Samson, yet he was one of the judges. These rugged pioneers were history-making men.
 The time they covered between the death of Joshua and the crowning of Saul is still a question of discussion among scholars, for it is not easy to tell how many of the events described were simultaneously and how many were successive. The period of time is given as from one hundred and fifty to three hundred years by various authorities.
 This old Book, concerning whose writer or compiler we know nothing, links up vividly to the present day because of the war in the near East. Familiarity with the Book of the Judges gives a better understanding of the present conflict along the eastern coast of the Mediterranean than the cablegrams in the daily newspapers. Here we find Jerusalem and Hebron and the old holy city of every day's need of a strong man. They hold aloft the banner, "Wanted—A Man."
 In the coming year's lessons from the formative history of the ancient people who are newly attracting the world's attention, followers of the International series should find great messages for present-day living, both as individuals and as a nation.
Wanted—A Man
 Because it is so crowded with tales of personality, the Book of Judges is one of the world's storied masterpieces. Here are dramatic episodes heaped up with lavish hand—stories, alas, they are mostly unfamiliar to the average company. Every one of them preaches the old old homily of every day's need of a strong man. They hold aloft the banner, "Wanted—A Man."
 In the coming year's lessons from the formative history of the ancient people who are newly attracting the world's attention, followers of the International series should find great messages for present-day living, both as individuals and as a nation.

 was 450 feet long and carried a complement of 750 men. She was heavily armored, and carried four 12-inch guns, twelve 6-inch guns and sixteen 12 pounders. She was provided also with four submerged torpedo tubes.
 The Formidable was launched in 1898, and was a sister ship to the Irresistible and Implacable.
 The Formidable had assigned to her, according to the British navy list for December, various officers, and consequently she undoubtedly was acting as a flagship at the time of her destruction. Her captain was Arthur N. Loxley and her commander Charles F. Ballard. Captain John C. Reed was in command of the marines on board, while the fleet surgeon was Geoffrey Taylor and the fleet paymaster P. J. Ling. The chaplain is given as the Rev. George E. Robinson. On board the Formidable were also sixteen midshipmen.

 able reception in Italy. Italy contemplates a similar situation in the matter of her own commerce, and she is hopeful that the steps taken by Washington will result in clearing up the contraband question for herself and other neutrals as well as for the United States.
 London, Jan. 1, 2:45 P. M.—The Germans found another British victim this morning and robbed the British navy of the sixteen-year-old but still useful battleship Formidable, of the same class as the battleship Bulwark which was blown up a few weeks ago off Sherness.
 Loss of Life Heavy
 Apparently the loss of life on board the Formidable has been very very heavy, as only 71 members of her crew are known to have been saved. The officials, however, hold out hope that others may have been picked up. The exact locality of this disaster has not been revealed, but the fact that it occurred in the British Channel recalls the circumstance that British ships have been engaged in bombardment of the German positions on the Belgian coast and that German submarines on several occasions in the past have attempted to torpedo them.
 As in previous disasters to British ships, the casualty list in this case includes many midshipmen, no fewer than 16 having been on board the Formidable.

DIVORCEE TO APPEAL DECREE

Appeal to the higher courts, it is understood, is to be taken by counsel for Mrs. Louisa Snyder, against whom a decree in a divorce was formally handed down yesterday by the Dauphin county court. Jacob Snyder, the husband, sued on the grounds of desertion. Mrs. Snyder admitted that she didn't love her husband but married him on condition that a certain marriage settlement be made upon her.

COSTS PAID IN KUNKLE-STRUP CASE

Costs totaling $1,034 were paid to Prothonotary Harry F. Holler yesterday by Attorney Paul A. Kunkle, who was directed by a court opinion to square his account for witness bills, etc., growing out of the contest by made three years ago to the election of District Attorney M. E. Stroup.
