THE MASTER KEY

By John Fleming Wilson

By special arrangement for this paper a photo-drama corresponding to the installments of "The Master Key" may now be seen at the leading moving picture theaters.

COPYRIGHT, 1914, BY JOHN FLEMING WILSON

"Yes," she proceeded. "We are after a Hindu and his idol."

At this point John laughingly came to the rescue and briefly explained the object of their quest.

Sir Donald listened quietly, occasionally glancing at Ruth, whose beauty was enhanced by pretty excitement.

At the conclusion of the tale he nursed the end of his stick awhile in very apparent perplexity.

"You know, my dear fellow," he said, addressing John, "that India is a large country filled with millions of different races."

"That is just where you can help us!" said Ruth impulsively.

For the instant Sir Donald actually blushed with embarrassment.

Then he gathered himself together and went into details of what they must expect and the difficulties they must encounter.

"If you could only go along!" Ruth said plaintively when he had got them thoroughly discouraged.

"By Jove," said the baronet, smiling, "that's not a half bad idea! I have nothing to do, and I might as well see the chaps in India again as stay here."

"You know, Sir Donald was in the army there," Ruth explained to Everett.

"Brought up there," Faversham added. "Know India pretty well. I really believe I'll go with you if you'll accept of my company. What a lark!"

Neither John nor Everett received this proposal with undue warmth, but Ruth found it delightful, and before any of them realized the seriousness of the conversation everything had been arranged.

Outside Faversham spoke to Dorr as man to man.

"I don't want to thrust myself on you in any way," he said briefly. "I happen to know India and to be sure that I can be of service to you. In fact, I should think it a jolly trip. But if you think I took advantage of the little lady's courtesy say so."

Entirely disarmed, John Dorr had to confess that Sir Donald's offer relieved him of a responsibility too heavy for him.

The two parted the best of friends, though John could not refrain from an expression of jealousy to himself.

But he knew that Ruth's interests were now doubly safeguarded and tried to restrain his unruly heart.

As the steamer sailed the next day they had little time for their preparations, but John made sure that the Hindu was on board before the last line was cast off and the big liner backed into the stream and headed slowly round for the channel to the open sea.

CHAPTER XXIV. "He is a Prisoner!"

URING the long voyage to Hongkong the three were thrown much together, and Sir Donald learned in full the history of the "Master Key" mine and the present search for the plans of the site of the mother lode.

At first he could hardly believe that such things could happen, but slowly he came to understand that the tremendous passions that were fighting to be satisfied would stop at nothing.

"I fear you will find it different in India," he told John many times. "The country is immense, it is inhabited by races of different speech and habits and religions, and yet over it all there is the vague spell of the east which is so foreign to your western America that I fear you will not easily recover what you seek."

"But I must get the papers back," said John quietly. "There is no question about it."

"Many a man has refused to acknowledge that a thing is impossible," Faversham warned him, "and the east has driven him mad. However, I am much interested myself, not only for the sake of Miss Ruth, but from a sporting standpoint, and I promise you I'll do my best to help you."

They considered the suggested plan of taking the idol away from the Hindu during the voyage, but Faversham vetoed this after a somewhat extensive investigation.

"You see," he told Ruth, "I know the fellow's language, and he comes from a tribe far in the north of India. Most of those chaps are looked upon as rather sacred, and this man in special, I see, is much respected by the other natives in the steamer. To desecrate his image would simply mean an uproar that we could never explain to the satisfaction of the captain and his officers. In fact, we should all get into the most serious trouble."

"Then your advice is to wait?" she murmured.

"Most decidedly," said the baronet. "And the waiting isn't so bad, is it?"

The steamer was slipping easily along across a moonlit sea that night, and Ruth and Sir Donald were far in the bow watching the waves foam softly away from the cutter.

The girl had awakened during the past few weeks to the dim happiness of being always the center of men's thoughts.

She was not in love, but she was ready to be. The experienced man beside her surmised this. His own heart was beating a new tune. He had loved much, and women had not been aloof from his life.

But this fair, proud, inexperienced, yet self contained girl awakened in him a deeper feeling than he cared to confess.

To be sure, he had John Dorr to contend with. Faversham did not underestimate him as a possible rival when he allowed himself to go so far as contemplating marriage with Ruth.

He liked the young American, and none knew better than he the effect that constant association with Dorr must have upon a young and very impressionable girl. John's own sentiments were unmistakable—he was deeply in love.

From Hongkong they transhipped to a P. and O. steamer for Bombay, and under Sir Donald's expert guidance they shortly found themselves in India and installed in a very good hotel.

"We must wait here till I discover through natives just where that fellow is bound for."

"Why not simply trace him?" demanded Dorr, impatient to be about his errand.

"That would be out of the question," Faversham explained. "In the first place, you don't understand any native tongue, and in the second place the British government doesn't look with favor on strange and unattached Europeans stumbling about among the natives."

"If you leave it to me I think I not only can ascertain the exact place where this fellow comes from, but the temple where the idol belongs."

Several days passed, during which Sir Donald was busy among old acquaintances, leaving John and Ruth to their own devices.

They occupied their time in sight-seeing. At last Faversham came into dinner one evening with a smile on his face.

"I've found your man and learned something of the history of the image," he said.

"And we can get it back?" Ruth inquired promptly.

Sir Donald shook his head gently. "Not so fast, young lady!"

"But that is what we came for," she went on.

"The fact of the matter is this," said the baronet—"that image was stolen several years ago—a great many, in truth. It is the tutelary deity of a small city on the river Bhalra, and it is about as sacred an article as you could pick up. The people of that city think that since they have lost their image the god is angry with them, and for some years they have quietly conducted a search for it."

"And this man will take it to Bhalra?" demanded Ruth.

"He has already started, I understand from some of the natives I know."

"Then what are we to do?" demanded John.

"Bhalra is some hundreds of miles up country," Sir Donald continued. "Part of the way we can go by rail, but part of the road we must travel either on foot or by litter—if we go."

"Of course we are going!" said Ruth. "I most earnestly beg of you to stop here," said the baronet. "You don't know your India as I do, and even if we accomplished our purpose we should run double risk in getting back."

BELIEVE KAISER IS TO BECOME MOSLEM

(the only one we could secure in the village) when the door opened and a very gorgeously dressed young man entered, and at once expressed his pleasure that he had found us alone and the hope that we would never tell others what he had to say.

He informed us that he was engaged to a young girl by the usual arrangement with the parents of the girl; and that he had already spent several hundred tomans on his fiance; but that alas, she had taken a great dislike to him and refused absolutely to marry him.

He had been torn all the while and had had charms from all his sacred books written, in order to win her affection, many of which he had buried underneath the door of her house, etc. but none of them had done any good, and he had lost faith in the worth of his Koran.

Now could we give him some charms from our Bible that would do the work? A much disappointed young fellow he was, I assure you, when we informed him that our Scriptures were not given to us for such purposes; and in spite of what we told him about the real value of God's Word, I fear that he went away feeling that our Bible was as good for nothing as his Koran.

Soaked to the Skin We entered a large village on foot for the roads had been too dreadful for horseback riding, and as it was raining we were wet to the skin. We were wondering where we could get place to dry ourselves and our bed-clothes before night, when a man leaped out of a window and insisted upon our coming in.

He soon had a blazing fire started for us on the hearth and a fine warm dinner brought to us, and very soon our troubles were all in the past. Or again, the day that we were in the town of Heroy, a terrific thunder storm caught us just before we arrived, and with water pouring off of us no Moslem in that fanatical town would have received us into his house, so that we had to go to the Armenian saloonkeeper of the place for refuge.

It was as mean a hovel and as vile a smelling room hole as I was ever in; but we were glad enough for that refuge from the storm; and the Armenian who as a small boy had been in our school did us all the courtesy he could.

Germany's inexorable One thing which would have amused you immensely if you had been with us was the war news that we got on our journey. All the Persians did intensely with the Germans and will believe no stories that do not proclaim them the winners of every battle.

Geography, history, present political conditions, never troubled the news mongers and the gossip sales. In one place I was asked from what country I came. I replied somewhat proudly that I was an American. "I am very sorry to inform you," said my new acquaintance, "that your country has been utterly destroyed by the Germans; nor could I persuade him that that was utterly impossible. Another told me of the capture of Paris, that it had been decreed that the city should be given over to eight hours of indiscriminate slaughter, but that at the earnest intercession of the Persian Minister the time of bloodshed was reduced to four hours. How helpless one felt, when an intelligent man (for Persia) insisted that up to the present no one German had been killed in the streets, or any other devices for self protection; or another declared that the German emperor had announced that he would become a Moslem as soon as the war was over.

CATARRH GERMS EASILY KILLED

Only Way To Cure This Disease Is To Destroy Its Cause.

By A Specialist

If you have catarrh and want to get rid of it you must kill the germs which cause catarrh. Stomach dosing, ointments, sprays, creams, douches, etc., fail because they cover up this fact. They all help by giving temporary relief but they do not reach the germ life that has found lodgement in your head, nose, throat, and could not destroy it if they did.

The best known way of destroying the dangerous germs of Catarrh and consequently ending the disease itself, is to breathe into the air passages of your nose and throat the pleasant, penetrating air of Hyomel (pronounced Hye-o-mel). Hyomel is made from purest oil of Eucalyptus combined with other powerful, healing, antiseptic and germicidal ingredients. You breathe it through a little pocket inhaler which H. C. Kennedy and other leading druggists in Harrisburg and vicinity are furnishing with every complete treatment.

Every time you inhale the sweet, fragrant air of Hyomel through this little device you are drawing into your swollen, inflamed, and germ-laden membranes a medicated air which will not only reduce all the swelling and inflammation and open your clogged nose and stop up air passages, but will absolutely and positively destroy every trace of Catarrh germ life it touches. Every time you breathe the blessed, lasting relief that Hyomel brings to catarrh sufferers that they sell so cheaply on the positive guarantee that money paid will be refunded if successful results are not secured from its use, you are drawing out from your druggist to-day and begin at once to drive this dangerous and disgusting disease from your system forever.

GLASS OF SALTS CLEANS KIDNEYS

If Your Back Hurts or Bladder Bothers You, Drink Lots of Water

When your kidneys hurt and your back feels sore, don't get scared and proceed to load your stomach with a lot of drugs that excite the kidneys and irritate the entire urinary tract. Keep your kidneys clean like you keep your bowels clean, by flushing them with a few days of your kidneys will act fine. This famous salt is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean and stimulate clogged kidneys; also to neutralize the acids in urine so it no longer is a source of irritation, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everyone should take now and then to keep their kidneys clean and active. Try this, also keep up the water drinking, and no doubt you will wonder what became of your kidney trouble and backache.—Advertisement.

Joyful Anticipation of Motherhood

There is apt to be a latent apprehension of distress to mar the complete joy of expectation. But this is quite overcome by the advice of so many women to use "Mother's Friend." This is an external application designed to soothe the muscles and to thus relieve the pressure reacting on the nerves, that the natural strain under the cords and ligaments is not accompanied by those severe pains said to cause nausea, morning sickness and many local distresses. This splendid embrocation is known to a multitude of mothers.

Many people believe that those remedies which have stood the test of time, that have been put to every trial under the varying conditions of age, weight, general health, etc., may be safely relied upon. And judging by the fact that "Mother's Friend" has been in continual use since our grandmother's earlier years and is known throughout the United States it may be easily inferred that it is something that women talk about and gladly recommend to prospective mothers.

"Mother's Friend" is prepared only in our own laboratory and is sold by druggists everywhere. Ask for a bottle to-day and write for a special book for expectant mothers. Address: Bradford Regulator Co., 407 Lamar Bldg., Atlanta, Ga.
