Helen was waiting for Louise. They were going to lunch out and then to a matinee. Louise had told her she would be there at 12, which would give them time to get down town. Helen waited, restlessly turning the pages of a magazine. It irritated her to have other people late, and Louise was scarcely ever on time. The doorbell rang. It was Louise. She ran into the living room.

“Oh, Helen,” she cried breathlessly. “Would you mind very much if I don't go to the play with you? I have the ticket right here. You can get some one probably.”

“You see, dear,” she continued. “Bob has just telephoned saying that some friends of his want us to go out to Long Island for over Sunday. It is quite unexpected. Bob wants to go so much. I did not think you'd mind.”

Helen was disappointed. She had long wanted to go to the play, and, too, she hadn't seen Louise for two weeks. She had looked forward to the afternoon with her. However, she might as well smother that feeling.

“Of course, I don't mind Louise,” Louise got up. “I must go, Helen.”

“I have to pack our things and meet Bob at the Pennsylvania station at 3. You're a dear not to mind. Good-by; give my love to Warren.”

After she left, Helen wondered what she would do. She was just in the mood for a play. Saturday was such a bad day to find any one who did not have an engagement. She thought of Carrie. The last time she had seen her, she had been fairly agreeable, almost human to Helen. It was a long time since she had asked Warren's sister to do anything or go anywhere with her. On his account she thought she had better ask her.

She accordingly telephoned her. Yes, Carrie would be delighted to go. She would stop for Helen in her motor at 2 o'clock.

The drive to the theater passed quickly. Helen studiously kept the conversation on impersonal subjects. Carrie was graciously agreeable.

With a sigh of relief, Helen settled herself in her seat just as the curtain fell. She rose, Carrie rustled and fidgeted. She dropped her hat, then her program. It annoyed Helen, who wanted to absorb the opening lines.

As the act progressed, she was in-

Discuss Municipal Band Concert Association Plans

Plans for the organization of a Municipal Band Concert Association were discussed last night at a meeting held at 225 Market street.

It is proposed to give concerts at Reservoir Park at least once each week during the summer, and at intervals at various points in River Park. The co-operation of the Harrisburg

Chamber of Commerce and other local organizations will be asked. Frank M. Blumenstein, V. Grant Forrer and M. Harvey Taylor were appointed a committee to solicit aid.

UNION EPISCOPAL SERVICE

Episcopal churches of this city will hold a union meeting to-morrow evening at 8 o'clock in the St. Stephen's Church. Bishop Talbot of South Bethlehem, will preach the sermon.

ADDITIONAL HOTEL FACILITIES ASSURED

Old United States to Be Remodeled; Modern Building to Be Erected in Market Street

With the remodeling of two Market street properties, one of which work has already started, Harrisburg is promised additional hotel facilities in the very near future.

The old United States Hotel building at Market street and the Pennsylvania railroad is now in the hands of a contractor and force of workmen, and will be made into an up-to-date rooming hostelry.

As the result of a real estate deal completed to-day, A. H. George, one of the proprietors of the Victoria Theater, secures a lease on the building at 418 Market street from William F. Paul the shoe man. This building will be enlarged and made into a modern hotel. Mr. George will spend $15,000 on improvements. His lease runs twelve years.

An addition will be erected in the rear, four stories in height. The entire front will be changed to an attractive hotel design. The interior will be equipped in modern style with fifty-six rooms, the majority of which will have a bath. There will also be a parlor on the second floor.

Volunteer Firemen Will Complete Organization

Men who have been members of the local fire department for five years or longer, have been invited to attend a meeting at the City firehouse Friday night. The purpose is to complete the organization of a Volunteer Firemen's Association.

Officers will be elected at this meeting and a constitution and by-laws adopted. Members of companies that have not been in the department five years will be given an opportunity to join at this meeting. The new association will start with a membership of 100.

FOR GOOD RICH SOUP Thompson's Soup Flours

Thompsons' Soup Flours are the meat of the pea or the bean properly sterilized in powdered form.

THOMPSON'S SOUP FLOURS ARE PURE— because they are wholly the pure meat of the vegetable.

THOMPSON'S SOUP FLOURS ARE WHOLESOME because the indigestible hulls and a large percentage of the starch have been removed—leaving only the rich, nutritive food elements.

THOMPSON'S SOUP FLOURS ARE ECONOMICAL because a 10 cent can will make a gallon of rich puree (or a 25c can, 3 gallons) in small or large quantities as occasions demand.

THOMPSON'S SOUP FLOURS SAVE WORK— because there is no soaking, no preliminary preparation—they are ready for instant use.

Two varieties—Pea and Bean in cans of Two sizes—10c and 25c at first class grocers
