Chambersburg Girl Will Be Married Here Tonight

WILLIAM V. TOMLINSON—MISS MAUDE YOH

Miss Margaret Yoh, daughter of Mrs. Margaret Yoh of Chambersburg, and William V. Tomlinson, son of Mrs. Anna Tomlinson, of this city, will take place this evening at half past seven o'clock at the home of the bridegroom, 1619 Regina street, with the Rev. T. A. Abspach, pastor of St. John's Reformed Church, of Chambersburg, officiating, in the presence of the immediate families and a few personal friends.

Plants and flowers will decorate the house and Mrs. Ira F. Engle will play the Lohengrin "Bridal Chorus" as a professional. The bride will wear a costume of creamy white silk, lace trimmed and carry a shower of bride roses. She will be attended by Miss Helen Yoh as maid of honor, who will wear pale blue silk and carry a sheaf of carnations. Miss Rebecca Tomlinson will be flower girl, wearing a dainty white frock and carrying a basket of Spring blossoms. The ushers will be Ralph Sweker, Stuart Morrow, Charles Yoh and George Tomlinson.

A reception and supper will follow the service. Mr. and Mrs. Tomlinson will be "at home" to their friends after April 1, at 505 East Catherine street, Chambersburg. Mr. Tomlinson is a clerk in the general freight department of the Cumberland Valley Railroad at Chambersburg. Among the out-of-town guests will be Mrs. Margaret Yoh, Mr. and Mrs. Eber Heefner, Miss Helen Yoh and Charles Yoh, Jr., of Chambersburg.

WARNS VIOLATORS OF STATE PACKAGE LAWS

any commodity unless it is plainly marked on the outside with the net weight of the contents, and the dealer, whether he be from this city or whether he attends market, must see that his goods are marked to comply with the law, which says: "If in package form the quantity of the contents shall be plainly and conspicuously marked on the outside of the package in terms of weight, measure or numerical count.

Penalties

"The penalty for the first offense is not more than $25, for the second offense not less than $25 nor more than $100, and for the third and each subsequent offense not less than $100 nor more than $250. "The words 'if in package form' mean that if an article or commodity of any kind is placed in a box, basket or container of any kind and sold by the box, basket or container it becomes a package and must have the quantity of the contents marked as provided by the law of 1913. "Some of our local dealers have and are yet selling goods by the box or basket without any regard to the marking of the same and are laying themselves open to prosecution by doing so, and my advice to those dealers is to see that their goods are properly marked and thus save themselves arrest. "It seems to me that dealers should not find this a hard law to comply with, as there is nothing but the honest dealer, and the consumer has a right to know, in all fairness, how much of anything they are buying. "It is my purpose to bring suit against those who refuse to mark their goods and the merchants or dealers who may be arrested must blame no one but themselves, as I feel that sufficient notices have already been given."

Bruce McCamant has returned to Enlowood, N. J., after attending the funeral of his aunt, Miss Frances Rollins, in this city.

we first married," softly cried Mrs. Keys as she told her story. "The Happiness of 12 Years Ago "I met his just 12 years ago last summer. There was scarcely an evening passed but that 'Whip' called or took me out to some place of amusement. A short time after we met, 'Whip' declared he loved me and asked me to marry him. "I was so happy then," sighed Mrs. Keys as she pined in reminiscence of those former days. "A few months later, it was in October, just 10 years ago—we were married. After a few weeks we went to our own little home in the lower end of the city. "One So Much Like 'Whip.' "In those days 'Whip' and I were happy. He seldom left home in the evenings and always took me with him when he did. "Years went by rapidly and we had a son. He was so much like 'Whip,' and we both loved him. After he was born 'Whip' always tried to get home from his work early so he could sit in his big rocker and romp with baby. "Oh, if only those days had never changed," murmured the young widow as the light of pleasure faded from her eyes and her face sobered in thought of the recent tragedy. "It seems now that we were too happy then," quietly continued Mrs. Keys.

The Shadow "Just two years ago the first sorrow entered our home. Our baby boy—we still called him 'baby' although we then had another son, Elmer—was playing along the banks of Spring creek, beyond the Cambridge parkway. He ventured too near the top of the old canal lock and toppled, screaming into the water. "After we buried him 'Whip' was melancholy for a long time. He seemed to take our loss so much harder than even I did—and I loved 'baby' so! After awhile 'Whip' began to go out evenings in an effort to shake off his sorrow. "It was then that I first noticed a change in him. He became more and more distant and cold towards me. He declined to take me to the amusement places. "From Neglect to Blows "But I never doubted him. I thought he was only trying to forget his sorrow and did all I could to make home pleasant for him. "My efforts, however, were useless. He grew still more neglectful and after awhile began to treat me cruelly. "I don't like to tell you of all the troubles we had. He lost his job for some cause or other after we had moved to 117 East Second street. He had difficulty in managing things. "Elmer is growing and needs so many things. He was four on his last birthday and I urged 'Whip' to treat us with more kindness for Elmer's sake. "The Other Woman and the Result "But it was no use. The climax of all my troubles came three weeks ago when 'Whip' came home in a rage and told me to get the furniture dusted off for he intended to sell it all. "Fearfully I begged him not to sell the things we had toiled so hard to obtain, but he insisted. After many threats I finally signed a release to the furniture. "Oh, that I would have refused those demands," remorsefully mused the pretty young widow. "If I would have had the strength to resist him then and inquired what he wanted to do with the money, I might have discovered the other woman, who was leading him away from me. "Where Hate Steps In "Oh, the wretch, that she would step in and win the affections of my husband away from me. I could—Oh! I could stand over her and see—but I mustn't say those things, it's wrong. And I fear her people, too, they have threatened me. I fear them. I am poor and defenseless—and I have little Elmer to look after. But I know the police will protect me. They won't let her people hurt me because I say she was wicked for taking my husband and ruining our home, will they?" appealed Mrs. Keys as her emotions ran the gamut from hate to fear and then to a desire for protection. "No, no one will dare harm you for thinking about the woman who robbed you," the widow was assured, "but you mustn't say slanderous things about her." "Yes, that's it," continued the widow, "there is no law to reach her for breaking up my home, yet the law says I must not say anything against her—Oh! the law!" "What 'Whip' Left Her "But that's all apart from the tragedy that took 'Whip' from me," declared the widow. "I allowed 'Whip' to sell all our furniture for $30. Even the 'runner' in our stairway was ripped from the floor and sold along with our parlor furniture and carpets and all. He only left me two chairs to the parlor, a couch and stand in the other room and a stove, table and garbage can in the kitchen. All this went when he might get money—for what I did not then know. "On that frightful Wednesday that the tragedy occurred, 'Whip' came in the house and obtained his revolver. I wondered what he intended to do, yet I feared to ask him. "A few hours later, I knew," and Mrs. Keys cried softly again. "The Love Never Doubts "A relative came to our home and broke the news to me that my husband's body was at a downtown undertaking establishment. He didn't tell me of that other woman whom he had shot. "Of her I knew nothing until some one spoke of her while I was on my way to claim my husband's body. "I never doubted 'Whip.' I loved him and I always ascribed his long absence from home to his work. "But Oh! what I have learned since. "Friends have told me how he and that other woman were often seen together, of how he accompanied her to amusement places and of many other things that preceded that dreadful day when she and 'Whip' walked down Wyeth avenue, arm in arm, until 'Whip' drew his revolver and fired the shots that took him from me."

MORROW TO ANSWER FOR DEATH OF CHILD

Charged With Involuntary Manslaughter Growing Out of Fatal Auto Crash

Samuel C. Morrow, painter, 1951 Briggs street, charged with involuntary manslaughter, was called for trial this morning before Judge S. J. M. McCarrell in courtroom No. 2. Morrow was driving an automobile which collided with that of Edward E. Miller at Seventeenth and North streets on the night of November 6. Ralph Witmer, aged 9, one of the occupants of the Miller car, was injured. He died two days later. The lad was a son of Mr. and Mrs. George E. Witmer, 905 South Twenty-and-a-half street. A coroner's jury placed the responsibility for the boy's death on Morrow, claiming that he was driving his car at a reckless speed.

Mollere Is Held on Two Charges by Court

Charles Mollere was to-day found guilty on two charges, felonious assault with intent to kill his wife, and wantonly pointing firearms at Mrs. Annie Krebs, 903 North Third street. Mollere was called for sentence late this afternoon. The case took an unexpected turn when it reached court yesterday. Mollere, who, with his wife, rooms at the Krebs home, had a quarrel Saturday night. Roy Krebs heard Mrs. Mollere call for help and when he went to the Mollere rooms the husband threatened to shoot him if he interfered. A shot was fired through the door at Krebs. At the police station Mrs. Mollere refused to testify against her husband. Krebs told his story, during which he referred to other quarrels and threats made by Mollere. In court Mrs. Mollere told of an attempt made by her husband to cut her with a knife.

ABOUT CHORUS GIRLS

"It is a peculiar fact, too, that usually the really talented, ambitious girl does not make a good chorus girl," says Sallie Fisher, in the April Green Book Magazine. "(Far be it from me to be thinking of myself!) They are usually too individual, and the managers don't want individuality in the chorus; they want unity. But if a girl hopes to have success in musical comedy, it is almost imperative that she serve her term in the chorus. She has to get the atmosphere and the swing, she has to learn to sing—in a manner and in wearing gowns. The chorus holds the same relation to musical productions that stock companies hold to the legitimate drama. It is the big training school."

BUILDING A LILLIPUTIAN CITY A Builder. Broddingnag and Lilliput. Houses of Brass. Coloring Transparencies. "When the complimentary card came from San Francisco for our Commonwealth to demonstrate to the civilized world what she has accomplished in preventive medicine and her methods to overcome tuberculosis and to build up a stronger race of mankind by proper hygiene, and combat typhoid fever, we lost no time in accepting the invitation. "Pennsylvania's State exhibit will give a materialistic demonstration so as to make an ocular impression upon the lay people, that every visitor may go away with a graphic impression of what can be done to improve health conditions, upon which all industries and happiness of mankind largely depends." Dr. Samuel G. Dixon, commissioner of health, was asked by the Pennsylvania Panama-Pacific Commission, to undertake the problem of visualizing the various activities of the Department of Health. For several months past workmen have been busily engaged in reproducing in miniature the three great sanitary sanatoria. Typographical maps showing the cause of typhoid epidemics, miniature schoolrooms and other models to display the advanced methods of securing hygienic conditions in our schools and a score of other maps, models and charts to show physicians, sanitarians, sociological workers and thousands of laymen, who are interested in the general advancement of public health work, what has been accomplished in this State. The reduction of 75 per cent. in typhoid fever and the saving of more than seventy thousand lives in the ten years since the creation of the Department of Health, all go to make up one of the most interesting and instructive exhibits of the kind which has ever been gotten together.
