Regulation of Jitney Bus Comes With Growth of Idea

Situation in Many Cities Reviewed by Sunset Magazine; Bill in Legislature Gives Cities Right to Pass Legal Restraints; Drastic Measures in Some Places; Heavy Indemnity Premiums; Dime Jitney's Salvation

With the increasing jitney business in Harrisburg there is a most insistent demand that these automobiles be regulated in the interest of safety. Already there have been several narrow escapes from serious accident and public sentiment demands that some definite regulation be provided. There is now pending in the Legislature a bill giving councils of cities power to regulate the jitney business. The Sunset Magazine prints the following interesting article on the operation of the jitneys in the West:

"Though no statistics of reliable data on the subject are available, according to all indications the number of jitney buses has decreased materially in the last two months. In part this decrease was due to an over-supply with the consequent reduction of average earnings. Other bus owners dropped out because they found the business unprofitable, but the heaviest percentage of the decline is due to the regulative measures adopted by the authorities. In Oakland, California, in Los Angeles, in Portland, throughout the State of Washington, the diminutive carriers were obliged to take out accident insurance in amounts ranging from $1,500 to $10,000 per car; several cities, notably Oakland, Portland, Reno, Phoenix and Boise, placed heavy special taxes on the jitneys. Perhaps the most drastic of the ordinances is Boise's. The minimum tax is $75 a year, payable in advance, plus indemnity insurance to the amount of $10,000 per car. The operator must obtain a permit from the city council, must file a map of the route and a schedule of operation which must be maintained rigidly if the permit is not to be withdrawn. In addition the driver must be at least twenty-one years old and must be able to "carry on an intelligent conversation" in the English language, probably for the benefit of female passenger. The ordinance has the support of the Boise public, especially of the suburbanites who believe that they find themselves without trolley service if the jitneys are allowed to skim the cream of the short-haul business.

"The financial status of the average jitney owner is glaringly illuminated by the events in Phoenix where the city council imposed a license fee of sixty dollars per annum, payable in advance. Out of a large fleet of jitneys operating before the passage of the ordinance only two or three survived the payable-in-advance clause. The others retired.

"Despite the decrease in the number of vehicles operated, the jitney bus has come to stay. But regulation has come to stay, likewise. Jitney owners everywhere may as well face the fact that they will have to pay special licenses, indemnity premiums, will have to keep passengers off the running boards and light the enclosed tonneau. It will cost more in the future to operate a jitney bus than it did in the beginning. And the improved service which the trolley companies of the larger cities must give to meet the competition will reduce the number of fares. Yet the jitney is performing a real, substantial service, especially during the rush hours when the electric cars must inevitably be overcrowded. But a nickel is not adequate compensation for the quality of service rendered. Jitney owners will have to demand a ten-cent fare in order to meet the cost of regulation and depreciation. They are already charging this amount for the short ride to the exhibition grounds in San Francisco.

"Ten cents for an automobile ride of two or three miles is not an exorbitant price."

It is stated that E. M. Snively, who introduced the jitney business at Middletown, has already concluded that there is not sufficient travel to warrant continuing the schedule service. It is also stated that he has increased his price to ten cents.

BIG CIRCUS MERELY MEMORY ONCE AGAIN

Small Boy Plodded to School Today With More Than Ordinary Reluctance

Here and there a freshly raised pile of earth, some old boxes and barrels, a heap of straw, someone's old cap, any amount of newspaper and other rubbish, a bit of bridle, some sawdust, and the memory of the dash and clatter and roar of great canvas interiors of only a few hours before—that's all that the Sixth and Mahantongo streets "show grounds" left this morning to solace the small boy.

For the circus has come—and gone. Shucks, and the dreary monotony of just one school day after another with scarcely the excitement of even a wild west show announcement on the billboards to relieve the grayness of it.

During mystic hours this morning the long, hostly trains of canvas-covered wagons, sleep-filled coaches, and murmuring animal cars, crept out of Harrisburg toward Williamsport after a big day in the city's circus history.

At two performances yesterday thousands of people, from baby to gray-headed granddad saw the Barnum and Bailey shows and "ohed" and "ahed" for hours. In the menagerie however the popular gathering point was the cage of the tigress and her several very fluffy, wrinkle-faced cubs. As for the "big top" itself—oh, what's the use! Why didn't you go?
