Once in a Lifetime a Trip Like This

There are two wonderful Expositions in California this year and railroad rates will be much reduced. You can get the most out of your trip to California by including the marvelous ride through Colorado and Utah on the way out. There are several ways of taking it all in, but only one best way, without extra expense and inconvenience. Everybody knows that the Burlington Route (C. B. & Q. R. R.) is the standard, highly equipped "On Time" railroad to Denver; but I want to tell you in particular about our through service to California, passing in daylight through Colorado Springs, Pike's Peak, Pueblo, the marvelous Royal Gorge and Salt Lake City.

And then I can tell you about coming home by way of either Glacier National Park or Yellowstone Park.

In fact I will gladly help you plan your trip and suggest the most comfortable, interesting and economical way of going and returning. That is my business and my pleasure. Will you allow me to be of use, and furnish you without charge, such pictures, maps and train schedules as will enable you to determine just what to do. Will call on you at any time, or shall be glad to see you at my office. Write, telephone or call.

MILLIONS STUDYING OF OBSCURE KINGDOM

Incidents While World War Rages, Characters and Petty Battles Engaging Attention

SAUL IS UNFIT FOR THRONE

The International Sunday School Lesson For June 27 Is "Review—David the Shepherd of Israel"

By William T. Ellis

When we pause to think of it, the fact is remarkable that more than twenty-five millions of persons in the Sunday schools of the world have for the past three months, been studying a series of lessons that have to do with men and women who lived three thousand years ago. Even while a world war rages, the incidents, the characters, and the petty battles of a little nation of an obscure corner of the earth have been engaging the attention of a group of people who are practically continuous with civilization. Not only thrones and crowns and empires are now tottering in the balance, but also an entire order of social life. Nevertheless, we find time to think about the primitive struggle for the crown of the loosely organized kingdom of Israel. Saul and David have been figures of contemporaneous interest around the whole world.

Saul had been proved unfit for his throne. He had not developed a kingly character in his kindly office. Egotism and jealousy had uncrowned him, as they have uncrowned many another man since.

Mr. Fleming H. Revell told me a story, a few weeks ago, of how Moody dealt with the temptation to jealousy, or the accusation of it. When the great evangelist was conducting a series of meetings in Chicago, the Rev. Sam Jones was preaching in Cincinnati, and attracted great attention. One day Mr. Moody asked Mr. Sam Jones for a week or two of sermons at the Moody meetings. After four days of effort Mr. Revell succeeded, and Sam Jones returned to his place for about ten days, Moody sitting by and listening, and giving the visitor all possible aid and support.

"It was months later," Mr. Revell told me, "that I learned from Moody the reason for his invitation to Jones. There had been a popular desire on the part of Chicago folk to hear the brilliant and attractive Southern preacher, and even a whisper that Moody was unwilling to let him appear. One day, perhaps six months after Jones' return to Chicago, Moody said to me, 'I heard that folks were saying that I was jealous of Sam Jones, and so would not invite him to my meetings. Now I don't think that was so. But I decided to take my chances. Perhaps I did not know myself. Anyway, I said, "Old devil, I'll spike that gun for you," and so I sent you down to Cincinnati to line Sam Jones to preach from my pulpit.'"

It is a wonder that Henry Drummond called Moody "the biggest human I have ever met."

That is the way to deal with potential jealousy: stifle it by magnanimity. Saul harbored his mean passion until it came to have dominion over him. David treated David with royal friendliness and generosity his own life would have been saved from misery and disaster.

Wearing the Crown and Deserving It

This old picture of an unfit man on the throne, and a fit man in exile, is true to life. Merit does not always win. The prizes of life do not invariably go to the fittest. In the mighty of earth would be men of noble character. Frequently the scepter is in the hands of a Saul. That is one of the factors which makes our present social order so fatal to our hero.

Still, the old story has a present message, in that David, persecuted and exiled, still played the part of a king. He never accepted a throne, even as Saul could be ignoble and mean on a throne. Kingliness is in character and conduct, and not in position. Any of us may have a royal soul, if not a royal seat. It is the prerogative to be a David in flight than a Saul in fury.

Since the wheel of life is ever turning, Saul and David came to their rightful destiny. We cannot determine success or failure until the last act of life is over—and it may even be necessary to go behind the stage, in the great anteroom of eternity, to know who have greatly played their parts.

A Man Among Men

Like Barrie's "Sentimental Tommy," this David "had a way" with him. Men were drawn to him. He won the friendship of the noblest. In a profound sense, a man is known by his friends. We scarcely need to know more about David than that he was Jonathan's bosom companion. That means more than the slaying of Goliath.

As we witness the procession of characters through this quarter's lessons we perceive that the throne for them were friends of David, the personality. He had an allegiance which was denied to Saul, and which mere position never brings. There was old Samuel, who anointed and loved him. To have won the favor of such a good and great man was in itself success. Even the Prophet Nathan was David's friend—so true a friend that he dared rebuke the king's sin.

Those soldiers who fearlessly pierced the Philistine lines and drew David a drink from the well at Bethlehem. Abishai, who went with him into danger, is another witness to the trueheartedness of David. Michel, Abigail and Bathsheba bear testimony to woman's love for this man.

A Nation Finding Itself

Freecarion and fugitive was the central shrine and capital of Israel until David came to the throne. For which his hard and bitter experiences had fitted him. David captured Jerusalem, which, from that day to this, has never ceased to be a capital of human hearts. Only yesterday a great convention of American Jews—shrewd, modern business men—were thrown into a frenzy of fervor by an orator's picture of the return of the Jews to the land and city of David. Przemysl may be captured or recaptured, but that is a mere incident alongside of the fate of Jerusalem, the city which David put on the world's map.

The two triumphs of David's reign were the establishment of a strong capital at Jerusalem and the bearing of the Ark of the Covenant to a central place therein. No nation is safe and strong until the symbol of God's presence and favor has been put at the very center of its national life. The Ark in the midst is as essential as the bulwarks and walls. Religion unites a people as nothing else can do.

A King Who Failed When Successful

A hothouse is a poor place to grow oak trees. Beneath rigors of persecution, David's character had been strengthened. His outlaw life made him a king. Hardship is by no means the worst lot that can befall a youth. Most of the leaders of life in the great cities were inured to toil in boyhood.

King David's failure came in the hour of his success. Victory defeated him. It led him to take his ease and to loiter in his palace when he should have been at the battle front. Ease enervated him. In idleness he yielded to temptation. David's great disaster befell during the hour of regal glory. He sinned by following the path of self-indulgence. When he began to entertain sensual thoughts, he soon gave rein to his worst self, and ended by becoming a murderer and worse.

Poor David—to climb so high and fall so low!

Out of the depths comes David's voice with a message for all mankind. In the crucible of suffering and sin he learned the lesson of forgiveness. His own soul was scared, but he cries aloud for all to hear that there is mercy with Jehovah. David is a fingerboard on the highway of history, pointing men back to God. No life is lived well that is not lived with respect to a loving Father in heaven.

Rheumatism in Joints

Pain Disappears and Swelling Vanishes in a Few Days

That is what happens if you use Rhuema, the wonderful remedy that H. C. Kennedy and all druggists sell on the "money back if not cured" plan. There is a vast amount of rheumatism in this vicinity, and if you know any sufferer, call his attention to this generous offer.

Rhuema is a quick-acting prescription. You will know your rheumatism is leaving twenty-four hours after you take the first dose. It dissolves the uric acid and drives it from its lodging place.

Mrs. Alice A. Brown, Ithaca, N. Y., writes: "For seven years I suffered greatly with rheumatism in my hip; at night I was scarcely able to sleep. One bottle of Rhuema cured me."

That sounds miraculous, but Rhuema does miraculous things. Fifty cents a bottle.—Advertisement.
