LAY CORNERSTONE OF BOYD MEMORIAL

Impressive Services Mark Formal Setting of Key to Foundations of Pine Street Benefactor

The cornerstone of the John Y. Boyd Memorial at South and Myrtle streets was laid with impressive ceremonies last evening.

The Rev. Lewis S. Mudge, pastor of Pine Street Presbyterian Church, conducted the ceremonies, which were largely attended.

The exercises began with a prayer, led by the Rev. John M. Warden, pastor of Bethany Presbyterian Chapel, and the formal laying of the stone was then accomplished by the building committee.

The memorial was made possible by a $50,000 bequest of Mr. Boyd's will and its purpose is to serve as a gathering place for the religious and physical development of men and boys.

The Rev. Dr. Mudge spoke of it as a "manufactory of men" which would be built up not merely of brick and tin and plaster, but of the material of the men and boys of the Pine Street Church and Sunday School.

Into the cornerstone was placed a photograph of Mr. Boyd, a copy of a portion of his will pertaining to the bequest, copies of the program of exercises, the church bulletin and a history of the building committee's work, written by Mr. Weirman.

Work on the proposed memorial was begun May 10 and it is expected to have it ready for occupancy by October 1.

Fall was not there. He questioned the porter.

"When will Fall be in?" "I don't know, Mr. Norris left word he had gone to the beach, but didn't leave no message when he'd be back again."

Ray started, shocked at the advice that Fall had gone to the beach. He said "all right" in a preoccupied voice that seemed even to him not to have emanated from his own throat, and walked unsteadily away.

"I could feel them," he said, "and get an idea of what they were like, but when I first saw them in the streets I asked the doctors what they were."

Mr. Row is a carpenter by trade. He has helped build many of the older structures in this city and several in Philadelphia, and other large places.

During the Civil War he served in the Ninth Corps, 20th Regiment, Pennsylvania Volunteers, in Company F, as a sharpshooter. He once could drive a nail two out of three shots at a hundred yards.

Mr. Row is well known in parts of York and Cumberland counties. He is an old auctioneer, served as chaplain of the Newburg Post for 20 years, and is highly in favor of temperance.

It is believed that the cataracts on his eyes were caused by strain during the war, as Mr. Row was considered a fine shot. He has planned to take part in the parade on July 5, in Newburg and is considering a trip to Washington late in the summer when the National Encampment of the Grand Army is held in that city to celebrate the fiftieth anniversary of the Grand Review.

To Erect 4 Dwellings at Green and Seneca A permit was issued to-day for the erection of four 2 1/2-story dwellings on the corner of Green and Seneca streets by F. M. Frittle and James F. McCullough.

The houses were designed by Architect C. Harry Kain and were planned with a view of combining utility and artistic effect with moderate cost.

The walls will be of hollow tile with tapestry brick veneer for the first floor and stucco for the second floor and gables and roofs of slate. They will be built in pairs and set back from the property line with large concrete porches in front and rear.

The first floor will contain a spacious livingroom with open stairway and a bookcase brick fireplace, in addition to the diningroom and kitchen. The kitchen has been planned for efficiency and will be modern in every respect, containing built-in refrigerator, sink, range and floor will contain three bedrooms and tiled bath. The interior finish will be chestnut and yellow pine with hardwood floors. Work will be started by the contractor, F. A. Fleisher, next week and rushed to an early completion.

LONG BLIND, VETERAN REGAINS SIGHT

months the old man was finally persuaded to undergo further treatment. The hope of once more seeing on the Fourth of July kept up the spirits of the old veteran more than any other one thing.

Sees Light of Day Again Coming to this city two months ago, Mr. Row had the cataract on his right eye removed at the Polyclinic Hospital in a delicate operation performed by Dr. Samuel Z. Shope.

For more than twenty years he had been blind, and when these were removed, the old soldier saw for the first time in eight years. Attendees at the hospital said that he preached a sermon to the whole ward about the operation.

Several weeks later his eyes were tested for glasses for seeing objects at a distance. On the right eye he was given reading glasses. Mr. Row at a distance of several hundred feet can see the numbers on moving cars and automobiles. He can see many objects at great distances.

Wanted to See 1915 Models One thing that Mr. Row remarked about was that he did not know just what the 1915 models were like. Blind for eight years and sight dimmed for some time before, he did not know what an auto was.

"I could feel them," he said, "and get an idea of what they were like, but when I first saw them in the streets I asked the doctors what they were."

WEATHER FORECAST Harrisburg Was the Hottest City, But Icebergs and Blizzards Are Predicted Icebergs are coming to town, so why should the spirit of mortal be hot? You can't sweeter while icebergs are floating, so don't miss the swim during the first half of next week. Seriously, however, Maxwell's celebrated Antarctic Moving Pictures, the identical ones that were at the Majestic theater last season at advanced prices, will be exhibited at the Colonial on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday of next week at popular prices. When these pictures appeared at the Majestic they received glowing articles of praise in each of Harrisburg's daily newspapers and they were also strongly endorsed by the local Historical Society. At the Colonial Theater they will be presented without the slightest change from what they were at the Majestic Theater and a very interesting lecturer will explain the exhibit.—Advertisement

Popular Penna. R. R. Train Restored June 27, 1915 The Pennsylvania Railroad 8.00 o'clock morning train from Harrisburg, arriving Philadelphia 10.30 A. M., with Philadelphia parlor car, was restored June 27th. This is the train that left Harrisburg at 7.30 under the old schedule. The new 8.00 o'clock leaving time will appeal to patrons of the Pennsylvania Railroad, particularly as it enables the business man to reach New York at 1.00 o'clock, just as early as was possible with the former 7.30 leaving time.—Advertisement
