

Stomach Trouble Solved

Most stomach troubles are not diseases. The stomach is simply weak. Tired out. The right kind of a tonic is what is needed. A few meals, well digested, will furnish natural strength. That is what a tonic will do for you. It will start the stomach going right. Then the stomach will take care of itself.

PE-RU-NA

Good the Year 'Round

Always Ready-to-Take There is no use of writing a new prescription every time a remedy is needed for a weak stomach. No use whatever. The old, well-tried remedies, put up on purpose for such cases, are a great deal better than an off-hand prescription. Pe-Ru-Na is the remedy that people have relied upon for a great many years. It is ready to take, composed of pure drugs, of uniform strength and composition. Not an experiment. Pe-Ru-Na is a substantial, household remedy, with forty years of splendid history behind it. In buying Pe-Ru-Na you take no risk. You know what you are getting.

Wooley, of Madison, Wis., will address both gatherings on "The Spirit of the Road." Bishop Wilson will open one meeting while Bishop G. M. Matthews, of Dayton, Ohio, will preside at the other.

Glad to Recommend Fruitola and Traxo

Mrs. Norforth Says She Suffered with Gall-stones for Several Years Without Relief

MRS. ROSA NORFORTH

In a letter to the Pinus laboratories, Mrs. Rosa Norforth, Monticello, Ill., says: "I cannot praise Fruitola and Traxo too highly as I consider it saved my life. I suffered with gall-stones for several years and could not get any relief until your preparation was recommended to me. It has been six months since I took the last bottle and I feel that I am entirely well. Have anyone doubting the merit of your preparation write me as I will be only too glad to recommend Fruitola and Traxo to anyone suffering from gall-stones."

Fruitola and Traxo are the names used to identify two preparations that are taken in combination. Fruitola acts on the intestinal organs as a powerful lubricant, softening congested masses and disintegrating the hardened particles that cause so much suffering, and expelling the accumulation with almost instant relief. Traxo is a splendid tonic, acting on the liver and stomach with most beneficial results and is recommended in connection with Fruitola to build up and restore the system that has become run down and weakened through the suffering incident to the derangement of the digestive organs.

SIX KILLED WHEN EXPRESS HITS TEAM

later. Of more than an hour the head of Miss Elizabeth Cassel could not be found. The incomplete corpse lent additional horror to the scene. The two mules were carried on the pilot of the locomotive until the train stopped then they fell off to the track. While it is not definitely known just how the accident occurred, it is believed the driver of the wagon attempted to cross the tracks ahead of the train. Robert Sherk, night operator at Hummelstown, said the train was speeding at about 45 miles an hour as it passed the depot. He said it was fifteen minutes late. He also claims the engine sounded its whistle about thirty yards east of the crossing. Traveling at that rate of speed, some say, the team had but little chance to pull across the tracks. The coroner's report on the scene of the accident preparing for the inquest which will probably be held to-morrow morning. The bodies last night were placed in the freight house and the Hummelstown station which is within twenty-five yards of the crossing. This morning they were taken to the chapel of Karmar and Son, where they will be until Thursday afternoon at 1 o'clock when funeral services will be held in the Lutheran church. The Rev. Mr. Forst, of Hoerstown and the Rev. G. C. Garnea, of Hummelstown will officiate.

Survivors of Mr. and Mrs. George Cassel are the following sons and daughters: Mrs. Anna Snyder, of Hoerstown; Mrs. Harriet Shenk, Lemoyne; Harrison, of Philadelphia; Hoerner, of Hoerstown; Mrs. Anna Engst, of Penick; and Mrs. William Cassel, of Penick.

John P. Dohney, investigator of accidents for the Public Service Commission, was working on the case today. He will probably present a formal report to the commission to-night.

One block below the crossing where the accident occurred a sawway runs beneath the tracks. On the rails above is an electric bell which rings when a train gets within a fixed distance. At the grade crossing there is no signal of any kind. The warning bell rings during the day goes off at 7 o'clock in the evening.

Engine Red With Blood
News of the accident reached this city ahead of the delayed train, and as a result a good many persons were at the Reading station when it pulled in. They said the front of the engine was coated with blood and that pieces of the debris was sticking in the pilot. Engineer Swavely was in the cab.

Engineer Red With Blood
The Queen of the Valley, which struck the Cassel family, was traveling last night, was traveling at thirty-nine miles an hour when the accident occurred, said R. J. Stackhouse, of the Philadelphia and Reading Railway, this morning.

LIFE AT STAKE
Somewhere in the world life is at stake every minute of the day. Right at our own doors, perhaps, is going on a struggle as grim and fierce as any fight or flight on record. You hear the hollow bearing cough; see the ooze of blood which tells of the wounded lungs; mark the enaciated body and hectic cheek, and know a life is at stake.

Oil City, Pa.—Ten years ago my husband was so far gone with a 'hanging-on' hacking cough and catarrh that he had to give up his work and started to go to a doctor, three miles away. He only got two miles away when he had to give up and rest at the general store there. He could go no further. A neighbor made him take a bottle of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery; opened it and gave him a dose then and there. He was soon able to return home. He finished the bottle and gained strength rapidly. He then bought a second bottle and it completely cured him so he was able to do a hard summer's work without complaint. This was ten years ago, and today he is working unloading lumber at the west end of the city.

Mrs. George Bradley, 302 E. Third Street, Oil City, Pa.
The use of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery has saved many a life in just such a crisis. It cures obstinate, deep-seated coughs, stops the hemorrhage, strengthens "weak" lungs, and restores the emaciated body to its normal weight and strength. Made from native medicinal herbs by using glycerine—no alcohol. Sold in liquid or tablet form. Send to Dr. Pierce, Invalids' Hotel, Buffalo, N. Y., for free book on Blood or Lungs.

WHO PAYS?

Blue Blood and Yellow

By EDWIN BLISS

"Well, young star-gazer, is it comin' to an end?"
"Not tonight, father—it all looks pretty steady."
"I can't seem to understand it an' I guess I never will. The only people I ever hern on as looked at stars always had somethin' excitin' 't report. Here you been alookin' an' alookin' night after night goin' on five year now, an' the best I ever hear your report was one night two year ago when y'come in an' the moon had gone to y'head an' shouts, "Night—'night—'night—'an' I see 'WOT 'night, an' you see 'the comet o'course," just like y' 'sprised at my not knowin'! Then I goes an' looks at the moon an' I goes an' o' my back all that day layin' 'brick faster'n Donohue o'd slap on the plaster, an' the danged old comet don't show up, 'n' doan' believe in 'em—they're unreliable, an' no way o'holdin' to agreements."
The young man laughed, an indulgent, affectionate laugh.

Paul Accepts an Invitation for His Bricklayer Father.

Paul loved and respected his old father with that tender devotion and consideration that only fine natures are capable of, and he thought with a pang of regret as he paced gravely the ill-appointed room that his recent acceptance of the post as astronomer at the great mountain observatory would separate him from his kindly, genial, illiterate old father—this dear old chum, as he had come to consider him. The thought of leaving his father was not, however, the only thing that would make his leaving so hard, as he paced and gazed, his mind traveled forward to a grey, high-towered observatory on a lonely peak in the mountains. He thought that he would be to him doubly lonely without Anita Logan. Then, traveling back from the gloomy picture his youthful morbidness made tragic, his mind jumped back to that night almost a year ago when first he met Anita Logan at a University dance; and that same face that a moment ago was grave with the graveness of doubt, became suffused with an embarrassed blush, as he remembered how she had looked when he came when, after the evening had worn away she declared that he danced "a million times better" than the others. Then they had sat out a dance—that it out on the lovely veranda of the club-house, under the myriad stars of a pregnant sky—sat it out, and spoke never a word, feeling in harmony with the soft-voiced wind as they coughed through the willows—feeling in harmony with the chirp of each absurdly self-important cricket, and the momentary spark of each busy flashing fire-fly—feeling in harmony with the whole universe and with infinite time, as the presence of that gracious beautiful girl made him understand more clearly than all the text-books that ever were printed, the meaning of all natural and spiritual things.

He remembered how he had walked home that night, his feet on the ground, and his soul in the stars. He thought her often after that, and he would make his way through the night, he was permitted to have his soul in the light of her radiant presence, he felt more and more that all his study, all his aspirations, all his LIFE had merged with her, and for her. They had come to be great friends, this bricklayer's son and the heiress to a fortune. They had gone on and on in their mutual, enthusiastic intimacy, until there had come to be such a bond between them, that Paul looked longingly, hopefully, fearfully to the day when he would receive his appointment and ask her to be his wife. His wife! With those words burning on his mind, his pacing became feverish and fast, his eyes sparkled and grew dull and pain-contracted as he thought, alternately, of his desire and his presumption. He realized the great barrier of "class" that reared itself between them, but his love and hope, his urgent, youthful egoism hurried those gates even as his heart fluttered in nervous apprehension at the necessity for quick, definite action. His resolution was as instant as his courtship—for their close intimacy was really that—was protracted, idle, he went to the phone, desperately, resolute, and called her number.

"Hello, Miss Logan, please. Mr. Reed speaking. Hello, Ann, is that you? This is Paul. You know I've received my appointment today? Yes, thanks. I'm leaving to-morrow. May I come up? Oh, fine!—and may I bring my father? I'd like you to meet him. All right, in half an hour. Good-bye."
"What's this I hear? Bringin' your father, eh? Not me, I tell you."

Paul Accepts an Invitation for His Bricklayer Father.
Paul and learn by the stars what very probably WILL happen. Some day he will learn their secrets—some day! His fine face glowed, lit with the enthusiasm of his youth and aspiration.

Rome, July 5, 11:25 p. m., via Paris, July 6, 1:55 a. m.—Discussing the possible menace to Rome from an Austrian raid, the Giornale d'Italia expresses the belief that the Italian capital may consider itself virtually safe because it is 235 miles from Pola and 213 miles from the island of Iza, the Austrian bases.
