A DAINY BLOUSE

A New Model with Straight Edges Adapted to Embroidery.

By MAY MANTON

8609 Fancy Blouse, 34 to 42 bust.

Here is a dainty blouse that means very little labor for the maker. The edges of the fronts, of the collar and cuffs are straight, consequently embroidery and lace suit them to perfection. In the picture, fine batiste is used for the blouse and the embroidery is joined by means of hem-stitching. The finish can of course be varied to suit each need. For the blouse, all sorts of pretty materials are appropriate; crepe de chine, batiste, voile and cotton crepe suggest themselves at once and crepe de chine or other silk materials can be used in combination with lace. If embroidery is not liked, the blouse can be made of material throughout and the edges finished with banding or scallops or treated in any way that may be liked. Whatever the material, whatever the finish, the blouse will be an attractive one and the combination of the V-shaped neck and long sleeves is especially smart.

For the medium size will be required 2 1/2 yds. of material 27 in. wide, 1 1/2 yds. 36, 1 1/2 yds. 44 in. wide; or 2 1/2 yds. of embroidery 5 1/2 in. wide; or 3 1/4 yds. of material 27 in. wide, 2 yds. 36, 1 1/2 yds. 44 in. wide, for the entire blouse.

The pattern 8609 is cut in sizes from 34 to 42 in. bust measure. It will be mailed to you free by the Fashion Department of this paper, on receipt of ten cents.

MOVIE FANS TURN EYES ON OPENING OF COLONIAL

Will Be Biggest Motion Picture House in City With Largest Pipe

The opening of the Colonial Theater Monday morning at 11 o'clock as a moving picture theater will mark the start of what promises to be a busy theatrical season for the Wilmer and Vincent people operating the Orpheum, Majestic and Colonial in Harrisburg.

The Colonial has been completely refurnished and renovated for the opening Monday and the installation of the big three manual Moiler pipe organ was completed to-day. Special electrical equipment has been provided to insure perfect projection of the pictures on the screen and the lobbies of the theater have been made over into spots of ease and beauty. The big screen is surrounded by a Japanese pagoda setting, making the setting exceedingly beautiful. The floors have been completely recarpeted and the interior and exterior boast new coats of paint.

Changes of program will be made at the Colonial every Monday, Wednesday and Friday. High class film features, Pathé news pictures and the best comedy films will be shown at the new moving picture house, the Vitagraph, Lubin, Selig, Essanay group of features being contracted for.

The opening headliner will be Cyrus Townsend Brady's five-reel film story, "The Challenge of Courage" which will feature the Monday and Tuesday program. This film story has its setting in the heart of the Rocky Mountains and the scenic effects produced through cinematography in the dead of winter are most picturesque. The tale revolves around a recluse and an eastern girl, both of whom are immured in a mountain hut over winter because of the impassable snow. When the Spring comes then comes happiness for both and suicide for the man who stood between their love. The story grips from start to finish and is considered one of the very best Vitagraph features ever produced.

Wednesday and Thursday, "The Climbers" will be shown; Friday and Saturday, the headliner will be "Crooky" with Frank Daniels, the well-known comedian, in the principal role.

Much interest is being evinced throughout the city's theatergoers in

Reconstructing a Store And Its Methods

HERE yet lies in the path of able, willing earnest workers, a task far greater than hoisting giant girders or placing huge beams to support a substantial building, before the tedious work of reconstruction is finished. We've already stated that "Ideals will be adjusted; standards remounted on a higher base."

It is our purpose to adopt most modern methods of business routine—to promote individual betterment among members of our Store Family—and place at the disposal of the public a thoroughly reliable store where shopping may be done in an easy and comfortable manner.

All are but students in the art of serving human desires; but with the aid of a proficient instructor, we're all steadily climbing to a higher state of Efficiency.

EFFICIENCY is but one of the standards by which this store will be guided.

Women and Their Interests

Why Worry?

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX
"The legs of the stork are long, the legs of the duck are short; you cannot make the legs of the stork short, neither can you make the legs of the duck long. Why worry?" says the Chinese philosopher.
The world is not at all as most of us would have it. In summer we who work in the great cities must face long stretches of hot days when we are through our toll in sweltering discomfort.
But what do we accomplish if when the first hot day of July arrives we begin to worry? Is this the beginning of a "hot spell"? Neither heat nor cold is any the easier to bear because we worry about our ability to bear it.
Do you know why an aching tooth troubles you most at night? During the day your tooth has ached a bit, but you have been busy about your tasks and have had little time to spend in considering the pain, or if you did consider it at all it was to dismiss it with the idea that if it got unbearable you could run in to your dentist's office for a minute and seek relief.
At night how different the case of your tooth versus you! You lie down in fear lest it begin to ache and thus cause you suffering. You worry yourself into a state of weak receptiveness where pain and jangled nerves may have full sway. You imagine how dreadful the pain will be when it comes.
All worry has as poisonous an effect as this. Never was there wiser motto than this one popular a few years ago: "I have had many troubles in my time—and most of them never happened."
Troubles are always worse in anticipation than in fact. Sorrow, suffering, poverty, shame—any evil that befalls you—can be endured when the time comes for facing it. Strength is found for facing reality — or else one goes under and is finished! But for the waste and wear and tear and silly foolishness of tilting at shadows, there is no remedy—except just to STOP.

Worry brings trouble nearer, makes it happen sooner, clouds hours that might well have been sun filled, weakens the power of enduring when real trouble arrives. Worry nets you no gain, gets you no power. There is never an antidote for worry in action of a useless sort. It never sanely works out methods of avoiding evil. It is just flustered fright that cannot take proper precautions to prevent harmful happenings.
Why worry? There are many things in life that cannot be changed and that must be endured. Winter is bound to have blizzards; summer is sure to have scorching sunshine, but against facts of climate and natural phenomena, against strong physical reactions and fatigue and pain and hunger and thirst, worry will not avail you.
Suppose you have not been sleeping well; suppose you have an uncomfortable habit of blushing, suppose you are tongue-tied in company; none of these things (or others even more annoying) will work you any great harm. Men have lived to be eighty, and have been sound and active in spite of not sleeping four hours a night on an average for thirty years.
People who blush or are tongue-tied and awkward in company often win friends through their very simplicity and shy sweetness.
I know a man who for ten years was a "merchant prince." During all that time he made himself miserable worrying about the possibility that he "might starve in garret" some day. Recently he met with financial ruin. His worrying had not impelled him to take precautions or save for "a rainy day." But his worrying had clouded the ten years that might have been happy.

Why worry? There is no force for good in worry; no impulse to ward off evil; no strength to combat danger. Worry weakens nerves and wrinkles; it is the traitor who opens the citadel of your personality to evil; it wears you out anticipating suffering, so that you are not strong to combat it if it should come; it creates an atmosphere in which calamity flourishes.
Worry, might not marriage be a concern, might not marriage be a net when you have trouble that can be met by action or warded off by foresight, by all means act and plan. When you suspect or imagine an unpleasant possibility why brood over it until you have manufactured your own little "old man of the sea" to carry as a burden?
When you face facts of nature, of society, of your own personality, why worry about the way they are going to work out?
If you come ever to some swift current over which there is no bridge perhaps you can turn and go some other way! If not there may be a ferry to carry you over—or perhaps you will find you can swim or even ford the waters. The will you can imagine—the way out you may be able to conceive. Why worry?
The legs of the stork are long; the legs of the duck are short. You cannot make the legs of the stork short; neither can you make the legs of the duck long. Why worry?"

PAXTANG NEXT WEEK

This week's vaudeville show at the Paxtang Park theater is one that any one who enjoys vaudeville should take the opportunity of seeing this evening if they have not already done so. It is without doubt the best park bill we have had this season. In fact the bill compares favorably with any of the shows presented at the leading theaters of the town.

Next week's program will be announced on Monday and some surprises in the way of headliners seldom seen outside the dollar admission theaters are promised.
Another big fireworks display will be given at the park on Thursday evening. The public has become so well acquainted with the quality of the fireworks shown at Paxtang that a first class pyrotechnical entertainment may be looked for on that date.
