HERE MEN IS REAL FOOD FOR THOUGHT

Small Girl Students at Reservoir Cooking School Serve Dinner to Councilmen

MISS KATHERINE SMITH, Who Showed Them How to Do It.

Some two dozen mere husbands of the not very distant future needn't worry about the high cost of living, nor the high quality of the living—if they seriously keep that many pretty little pupils of the Reservoir cooking school in mind for a few years.

The two dozen girls were a representative section of the 150 youngsters who comprise the Reservoir cooking school. The section under the tutelage of Miss Katherine Smith the instructor, served dinner last evening to City Commissioners William H. Lynch, Harry F. Bowman, M. Harvey Taylor, Assistant Park Superintendent J. R. Hoffert, Playground Supervisor George W. Hill and the councilmanic reporters. Mayor Royal and Mr. Gorgas had been invited also. They'll learn when they look at the menu to-day, just what they missed.

Such a Menu
 Such a menu, oh my! Listen: cream of tomato soup with crostons, pickles, celery, veal cutlet, mashed potatoes, scalloped corn, muffins, Smith-Waldorf salad, cheese straws, bread, peach preserves, "devil's food" chocolate mints and coffee. And—now get this: Everything was served up into the bread and peach preserves cheese straws and mints—represented the work of more or less anxious-eyed, frilly capped and aproned cooks of from twelve to fifteen years of age.

Sound pretty good to you folks who are accustomed to hustling up to the marble bar and bellowing "beans-with," yes?

For 29½ Cents, Too!
 But that's not all. Figured on a liberal estimate and allowance, that meal prepared for ten people, cost per plate, well, what do you think? Wrong. Just twenty-nine and a half cents!

Here are the girls who did it: Misses Beulah Wardell, Marjolei Stewart, Helen Augst, Frances Booser, Pauline Fritz, Grace Mentzer, Jessie Good, Louise Boyd, Lillian Macy, Ruth Macy, Theima White, Frances Fisher, Mary Good, Mary Herbert, Florence Potts, Miriam Bomgardner, Mary Bright, Frances Linden, Mildred Williams, Marie Karle, Elizabeth Yahn, Frances Gaton, Margaret Scott and Talitha Shope.
