

HARRISBURG TO BE PLACED ON "FEEDER ROUTE" OF GREAT NEW LINCOLN HIGHWAY

Head of Association Advises the Telegraph as to How It May Be Done WILL GIVE THIS CITY LINK OF NATIONAL ROAD Markers For Feeders Will Tell Motorists How to Visit Penna. Capital

With a view to having Harrisburg placed upon the Lincoln Highway route, either directly or through an official feeder detour, the Telegraph has been in correspondence with those responsible for establishing the great New York-to-San Francisco automobile route. The matter was first taken up with Robert N. Harper, of Washington, D. C., in a letter calling attention to the omission of Harrisburg from the Lincoln Highway and expressing regret that the capital of the State had been sidetracked in the original survey of the route. Mr. Harper, a prominent banker, replied to the Telegraph's letter as follows: "Your letter of the 7th instant came to hand this morning, in connection with the Lincoln Highway, and in reply will say that I am not much informed as to the inception of this proposition, but interested myself considerably after its organization, when my attention was called to the fact that, although called 'The Lincoln Highway,' as a memorial to Lincoln, it did not come in contact with the national capital. I therefore construed it as simply being a roadway, and not a memorial, unless it did attempt to unite the North and South, in some way, and come to the nation's capital, where Lincoln ruled from almost obscurity as a citizen to a national or world thinker; where the

JOHN H. FOW, FORMER LEGISLATOR, DIES

Prominent Philadelphia Lawyer, Well Known Here, Passes Away at Summer Home

WAS SIXTY-FOUR YEARS OLD

Served as Special Correspondent For Philadelphia Newspapers in This City

Philadelphia, Pa., Aug. 31.—John H. Fow, a prominent lawyer of this city, former member of the Pennsylvania Legislature and widely known in Pennsylvania political circles, died to-day at his summer home in Spring Lake, N. J. Mr. Fow was taken ill in his office here last Friday and his condition became critical yesterday. Death is believed to have been due to a general breakdown complicated with stomach trouble. Mr. Fow, who was 64 years old, was born in Philadelphia and educated in the public schools. He took an active part in political affairs and soon became prominent figure in municipal and State politics, being a member of the Democratic State Committee in 1882 and 1883. He was the first president of the State League of Democratic Clubs, and for three years vice president. In 1888 he was elected to the State House of Representatives. He was re-elected in 1890, 1892 and 1894; again elected in 1898, serving the term in 1899-1900 and afterwards to the extraordinary session of 1906, being elected as an independent over both the Republican and Democratic candidates. He was chairman of the Quay senatorial investigating committee in 1899 and was also chairman of the Democratic caucus in 1892 and 1898. Special Correspondent Mr. Fow was special correspondent at Harrisburg, for Philadelphia newspapers for a number of years. He was a delegate to national conventions of his party on several occasions, and nominee for Congress in the district wherein he resides. He was the author of the act that does away with kissing the Bible in legal proceedings the Saturday half holiday bill and a large number of acts relating to the practice of law and municipal affairs. Few of the men in public life in Pennsylvania were better known in Harrisburg than Mr. Fow. He was one of the most noted men in Pennsylvania and his quickness in turning a point, Mr. Fow first came here late in the evening of the 1st of August and interested in politics. In his eighties he became a member of the House and was the wit of the legislature even in days when the House contained some of the most noted men in Pennsylvania. In addition to his legislative service Mr. Fow often came here to speak before committees of the general assembly and was frequently attorney before the appellate courts and the Board of Pardons. He was often engaged in election cases before the Dauphin county court and his constitutional questions were problems. No Democratic gatherings were complete without Mr. Fow. He was a delegate numerous times and always managed to keep good friends with all factions. Once in a while he decided to be a candidate, but it was generally for fun. Mr. Fow was a type of the man active in politics who is passing. He was shrewd in his plans and lightning quick in carrying them out, full of good natured fun, kind hearted and won and kept friends.

SCORES AND SCORES OF PETITIONS ARE FILED

Prospective Candidates Make Last Hour Rush to Commissioner's Office

LENTZ HAS 3,000 NAMES

Stamm, Keene and Enders Put in School Director Papers

With the time limit for filing Fall primary petitions only a few hours away, prospective candidates made the usual, but nevertheless heartaching rush to the county commissioners to-day to get in their party papers. Up until 6 o'clock to-night the commissioners' office will be open and the clerks will be mighty busy men every minute of the time. They got on the job extra early this morning in order to be in time for early filers. Just how many scores of petitions were filed to-day can't be estimated. That there were hundreds goes without saying. The record petition so far as number of signers is concerned was put in by James E. Lentz, of Elizabethville one of the candidates for recorder of deeds on the Republican ticket. While he filed papers containing only a few hundred names, he withheld scores of papers bearing between 2,000 and 3,000 names. Fry Out For Controller That the city controllership will not be uncontested was indicated early this morning when Ashton D. Peace
