"DADDY LONG LEGS" A CHARMING PLAY

Notable Cast With Renee Kelly
Presents Jean Webster's Story
in Excellent Manner

If a clean, wholesome show presented by a company that is splendidly well rounded, artistic and capable, has any attraction for this city; it is safe to assert that the Orpheum will have two crowded houses to-day at the matinee and evening performances of "Daddy Long Legs," a comedy from the story by Jean Webster. For "Daddy Long Legs" is a play, the purpose of which does not cease with entertainment, but promotes as well a touch of sympathy for the unfortunate whom we know.

The play came first to the public as a story, but was later dramatized by Henry Miller, and presented last year with Ruth Chatterton as Judy Abbott, the role carried in this company by Renee Kelly, a most charming and mischievous "Judy." Of course, the play revolves around "Judy" who for eighteen years has spent all of her time in an orphan asylum, where life to her was solid drudgery. She had dreams of being as other girls, and one day all of her dreams were realized for an unknown benefactor promised to send her to college. This benefactor was her "Daddy Long Legs" who in the play is Jervis Pendleton, who, on many occasions Judy saw and after a while loved. Jervis loved her too, and thereon, with the spice of complicated identities hangs the story of the play.

The play was most admirably presented by a company that was in every way a capable one. One could not wish for more in the acting of Miss Kelly as "Judy," and Mr. Beasley as Jervis Pendleton. Indeed it is unfair to stop there in citing characters, for every one of the company in their respective roles was excellent. And the play is so fresh and wholesome that it is virtually a great privilege to be able to attend its performances. But one thing can be said against it and that is the harsh tune given in several instances by the use of the name of the Diety at times when emphasis for a line or two is sought.

BESSIE KYLE

Of the fetching song and dance skits that elicited praise from Orpheum goers, was the splendid act called "The Club Man," depicting those very capable and pleasing players, Harry Richards and Bessie Kyle. That they are to appear on the Majestic program during the evening of next week will probably sound the most welcome note that vaudeville devotees in Harrisburg have heard this season.

Miss Kyle is a stunning young woman possessing personality and an exquisite voice. Her partner is clever also and knows how to make the most of his bright lines. Kyle and Richards rank with the best known artists in their line in the Keith market, and they bid fair toward establishing a high water mark in the way of popularity at the Majestic this season.

THE GREAT RUBY AT COLONIAL MONDAY AND TUESDAY
Adventure of the sort that makes the blood leap, mystery that keeps one guessing as to how the plot will interest is to be seen in Lubin's big five part feature photodrama, "The Great Ruby" which is the feature photoplay at the ever popular Colonial Monday and Tuesday of this week. How the thieves steal it from a crown head, make their escape good and how they are chased by the greatest detectives furnish many a thrilling and a chill that holds the audience in a grip of excitement from beginning to end.

George Soule Spencer and Octavia Handforth appear in the leads with a big cast of one hundred are seen in strong supporting parts. Wednesday and Thursday, William Fox's film production in six parts, "The Two Orphans" pictured from Kate Chaxton's evergreen success will be the feature of an unusually fine program. Friday and Saturday the feature will be Essanay's latest and most powerful drama, "The Man Trail," a story of the rugged north woods dealing with the hardy people of the great Canadian Northwest. In this feature, the favorite Essanay Play, Richard Travers carries the leading part.

To-day "The Wheels of Justice" the Vitaphone Company's four part melodrama is the headliner of the program on which is also shown Pathe's ever interesting Daily News and a screaming comedy "Just Tramp." Herman Yeager whose excellent musical numbers on the pipe organ have already become the talk of the town has arranged a special program for the coming week. The Colonial show is continuous from eleven until eleven daily.—Advertisement.

"TWIN BEDS" COMING
As the attraction at the Orpheum on Saturday afternoon and evening, Sept. 18th, Selwyn and Company, the firm that gave the stage such notable successes as "Within the Law" and "Under Cover," will offer their last season's big hit, "Twin Beds," Salisbury Field and Margaret Mayo's screamingly funny farce of life among the apartment dwellers, which has proved the laughing sensation of the season in New York where it recently concluded a run of one whole year.—Advertisement.

Men in Public Eye Tell of Municipal Improvements

Further comments by men in the public eye with reference to the municipal improvements and the big celebration commemorative of those improvements will be of interest to all those who have a strong pride in their city and its record of achievement.

George F. Ross, who was secretary of the general committee on improvements in 1901-2, reviews the last decade and a half as follows:

"When I look back over the past thirteen years and realize the great stride this city has made in the way of public improvements, the consummation of which is to be celebrated in the near future, I rejoice that I had a humble part in the initial campaign to better municipal conditions, the campaign of 1902, when the million-dollar loan was ratified so handsomely by the voters of this city.

"Those of us who are old enough to recall those 'good old days' when we had muddy streets in wet weather and dusty ones in dry; when Paxton creek was an open sewer, with its attendant odors; when the water we drank, after a flood, was pumped directly from the river into the reservoir and was almost the consistency of molasses and a few shades lighter in color than ink; when the sewers along the River Front were a serious menace to the health of the city, and when the River Bank was common dumping ground for all the discarded junk after the Spring and Fall housecleanings, find it quite difficult to believe that so much could be accomplished in so short a period as thirteen years. Therefore, I think that every citizen of Harrisburg is justified in feeling proud that so much has been done and the manner in which it has been done, for those upon whom the responsibility devolved of directing the sums of money performed their labor so faithfully and honestly that there never has been room for the faintest suspicion of graft. To those gentlemen I take of much has been done and the manner in which it has been done, for those upon whom the responsibility devolved of directing the sums of money performed their labor so faithfully and honestly that there never has been room for the faintest suspicion of graft. To those gentlemen I take of much has been done and the manner in which it has been done, for those upon whom the responsibility devolved of directing the sums of money performed their labor so faithfully and honestly that there never has been room for the faintest suspicion of graft.

O. P. Beckley, who is head of the Ferryhill Nursery Company and a man of authority on all matters pertaining to "the city beautiful," in an enthusiastic communication says: "Yes, all these fine public improvements in Harrisburg have been going on so steadily and beautifully that even we who have worked on them can scarcely realize what a lot of things have happened and how the city has developed." This is the voluntary and enthusiastic expression of one of the workmen who has been on the job almost since the beginning of the work in 1901. I believe it could be said of every citizen of this city that he has developed under our very eyes. A few weeks ago I walked the length of the promenade fronting the city of Boston along the Charles river. Why, I said to my friend, this is exactly the same kind of a river walk we have in Harrisburg—only our Susquehanna river walk is infinitely more picturesque and a great deal more of it.

"On a recent New England motor trip we passed through five capital cities, all older and bigger than Harrisburg, but not one of them with as good streets generally, none with more picturesque parks, no better drinking water, and none with so few unsightly billboards, back alleys, dumps, etc.

"I trust as we woke up in 1901 to what we needed in Harrisburg we will now wake up to what we have in Harrisburg and about and boast for the best old town in the Union as never before."

Edward Bailey, the banker, said to-day: "In justly congratulating ourselves on the great advances made by Harrisburg in the last fourteen years we must not forget that much remains to be done to achieve our goal. We must also remember that changes or reforms, to be permanent, must be supported by a practically unanimous public opinion. Care, too, is necessary that our taxes be not out of proportion to those of towns of comparative size."

David Kaufman, owner of the big new Kaufman store, says: "It is a constant source of pleasure to me to be an integral part of a progressive community such as this city has grown to be. The spirit of activity and push that has characterized its development during the last fourteen years is well worthy of emulation among cities all over the country. Everybody and everything is benefited by the movement for municipal improvement which has been in progress since 1901 and which will be celebrated in the big celebration the end of this month."

J. W. Bowman, of Bowman & Co., member of the Board of Public Works, believes that the keynote of Harrisburg's prosperity is contentment. Mr. Bowman writes: "Results of fourteen years of earnest endeavor appear at almost every glance throughout the city and I believe that conditions realized by those improvements far exceed in true worth the dreams of those who have labored persistently and strenuously for the fulfillment. "As an industrial town Harrisburg has remained practically free of labor troubles, which can justly be accredited to its splendid natural surroundings providing a diversity of means for healthful recreation, whereby the old adage that "Satan finds mischief for idle hands to do" has not proven applicable. A contentment of mind is the prevailing result. "The money expended on improving these natural advantages has enhanced their value beyond measure, both in beauty and employment, and I am sure will be the means of attracting more and more individuals and families to this city as years pass by. "The coming celebration will not only give unusual publicity, but will serve as an inspiration for the furtherment of local improvements."

PAUL A. KUNKEL Candidate For District Attorney In 1911, the Logical Candidate For District Attorney This Year, 1915 For Republican Nomination

Was he not counted out four years ago by failure to count double-crossed (and therefore emphatic) votes for himself? Did he not carry the People's contest into Court? What became of those ballots? As it was he lacked less than 70. Yes, he paid more than $1200. Court costs in an effort to have every vote cast for him counted. He was determined that no voter's ballot should be ignored and thrown out; that no voter should be disfranchised. He succeeded in showing that more than 70 votes emphatically marked for him had not been counted, and notwithstanding but rather because of that success he was compelled to pay more than $1200. Court costs ($400 his own, voluntarily, and $800 of M. E. Stroup's, when compelled, Dec. 1914, by order of Court only). He was deprived of the office because 65 more such votes were not found in the dilapidated and broken ballot boxes. He now carries this case to the People and asks for a verdict of the People in his favor. Vote for Paul A. Kunkel, your friend and advocate. Primary, Sept. 21, 1915.

He stands for Independence, an Honest Election, Courteous Treatment, a Common-sense Administration of Office, a Square Deal for Everybody.

He declares also for only one term. There are other Members of the Bar capable of filling the office. A monopoly would prevent.
