FACE SHOT OFF, BUT HE GETS A NEW ONE

Soldier Supplied With Nose, Chin, Cheek and Lips by Remarkable Operation

London, Sept. 13.—Some remarkable instances of surgical science have been brought to light during the present war, but the following story, telling how a horribly mutilated soldier was "reconstructed from his own ruins" adds one more miracle to the list. A French newspaper correspondent was admitted to the Rothschild Hospital to see for himself the miracle in question after the surgeons had completed their work. The correspondent was shown a photograph of a man wounded in the French trenches. It was a terrible picture. The face lacked the lower portion of the left cheek, the chin had gone and also the lips and nose. While the correspondent was looking at this appalling picture one of the hospital assistants made a sign to one of the patients who was just going out to spend an afternoon at a picture show. "Here is our man," said the assistant. The correspondent started uncomprehending, but the assistant added with a smile: "Yes, I assure you this is the patient whose photograph you have in your hand; the man who was brought into the hospital without his cheek, jaw, lips, chin and nose." The correspondent at first thought the assistant was fooling him, as the patient bore few signs of the dreadful wounds depicted in the photograph. His right cheek was twin brother of his left cheek; he had an excellent chin; lips that opened in a genial smile and a nose of perfect contour. His face only bore the rapidly vanishing traces of some cuts and a few white marks occasioned by surgical sewing. The patient himself proceeded to confirm the assistant's assertions, talking in the slang of the French infantryman: "Yes, it's myself; 'twasn't any good for the Germans to spoil my portrait; the doctor tricked them after all. As you see, he has manufactured for me a very decent face. For myself, I think he has improved it, and I believe they'll find me more of a knut when I get back into the country." Then he lit a cigaret and went off to see the show. The surgeon had taken a portion of the patient's back and used it to replace the cheek. With the skin of the back he fashioned the lips. Then he took a portion of the man's short ribs to make the nose and the substance of the chin. From the forehead he took the skin for the nose and from the stomach the skin for the chin. Finally, when he man was practically refashioned and could be permitted to look at his new face, the doctor asked him if there was anything to be regretted. The soldier replied: "Yes, my moustache." "Oh, don't worry about that," said the doctor, and without even applying an anesthetic he took from the hairy nape of the neck a small strip of skin and grafted it on the upper lip. "I can't promise you," said the doctor, "that you will have as victorious a moustache as that which you left in the trenches, but in any case you won't be hairless."

FLOTILLA OF MOTORBOATS RECOVERS TORPEDOES

Four stanch motorboats of a seaworthy, fast type form a fleet of torpedo chasers which is being used off Greenport, L. I., where marine projectiles are tested. The flotilla was built especially for this service. Each unit is constructed the same as its sister boats, so that the quartet is well mated for maneuvering in various formations. The work of testing torpedoes consists in firing them at various angles over a determined course. The "chasers" are distributed at different points to recover the missiles as they are shot out through the water, and return them to the firing station. Several views of these interesting craft appear in the October Popular Mechanics Magazine.
