PROTECT GARDEN AGAINST WINTER

Uncle Sam Tells How to Care For Flowers, Plants and Shrubs

Washington, D. C., Oct. 20.—At this season many inquiries come to the United States Department of Agriculture regarding the protection of garden plants and shrubs during the winter. Such flowers as peonies and hollyhocks will come up again the following year if they are properly protected during the winter, while others like cannas and dahlias, which are more accustomed to warm climates, must have their roots or bulbs dug up and stored in a cellar. The department's specialists give the following suggestions for "putting the garden to bed":

Hardy Perennials
Cover hardy perennials, such as peonies, larkspur, hollyhocks, columbines, irises, platycodons, and perennial poppies, with a good coating of manure or other litter to a depth of 3 or 4 inches. In more southern localities this will hold the frost in the ground and keep the plant from alternately freezing and thawing; in more northern regions the manure will protect the plant from freezing to a depth that will cut off its water supply.

Cannas and Dahlias
As soon as the tops of cannas, dahlias, gladioli, caladiums and similar plants are killed by frost, dig up the roots or bulbs and store them in a cellar where the temperature will remain at 55 degrees, and should never go below 50 or above 60 degrees. Do not shake any more earth from the clumps of cannas and dahlias than is necessary to remove them from the ground. Place the plants on racks or in slat boxes so the air may circulate freely through them. No frost must reach the roots nor must they become too dry.

Hydrangeas
Hydrangeas (semi-herbaceous) in the South will last through the winter out of doors, but should be treated as if they were perennials. The tops should be protected with straw or brush. This may be held in place about the bushes with a little manure or stones. The flower buds of the hydrangeas form in the Fall, and this cover will keep them from winter-killing while shielding the bush from winds and sun. In the North, hydrangeas must be taken up, planted in tubs and covered with straw. This is generally true of latitudes north of Philadelphia.

The shrub known as brugmansia, also called "torii apple," should be treated as if they were perennials, but they are not hardy nearly so far North. As a rule shrubs should not be trimmed in the Fall. This process is timely immediately after the blooming period, if this is in the Spring, as in the case of the snowball. If the shrubs bloom in the Fall, as do some hydrangeas, the rose of Sharon, and some others, they should be cut directly after blooming, but in the Spring of the following year. Lilacs, snowballs and mock orange should be left alone during the winter, being neither covered nor covered with straw and manure.

Roses
Almost all kinds of roses are hardy in the vicinity of Washington, D. C., and St. Louis and to the south of a line drawn between these points. From Washington northward local conditions influence the successful cultivation of certain varieties. Some roses, such as the briar and rugosa, need no protection, but other varieties, such as the hybrid perpetuals, teas and hybrid teas need special care, particularly north of the fourth parallel. Teas and hybrid teas hardly succeed in Chicago, although the hybrid perpetuals grow as far North as Canada. All these classes do well on Long Island and in Boston near the sea when proper care is given them. These varieties in the vicinity of Washington need merely a little manure on the ground to prevent alternate freezing and thawing. Further North, however, they should be treated as follows:

Cut the tops to within 30 inches of the ground. The roots should be covered with coarse manure or leaves or similar litter. Hold this in place by evergreen boughs which also acts as a protection. Brush from deciduous trees or shrubs may be substituted for the evergreen boughs except in the most northern regions. Mounds of earth about six or eight inches in height should be drawn about the base of the rose bushes to keep them from mice. As an added protection against mice, permit the ground to freeze slightly before winter protection is applied. In fact, roses should not be protected until after the first light freeze, which may be expected in Washington, D. C., about the first of December, but earlier farther North.

Climbing Roses
In the latitude of Philadelphia and farther South, climbing roses usually need no protection during the winter unless they are a particularly tender variety. Further north, these roses need protection similar to that given to the tea and hybrid tea roses. Where it is possible to do so, remove climbing roses from their supports, and cover the banches with a little dirt. A little Fall trimming might be desirable to lessen the space occupied by the branches on the ground. Such side branches as are not to be needed for next season's blooming may be cut off. Such cutting off and shortening of the ends "It gets better every day," said the doctor, rubbing his hands. "Two weeks ago we had four hundred here—now there are only eighty-six." He glanced meditatively at the sick men, jammed so close together that they almost lay upon one another. "Then we were crowded!"—John Reed, in the Metropolitan.

PATTON HUNTING HOME
Secretary of Agriculture Charles E. Patton is hunting apartments in the city as he expects to make Harrisburg his home during his term of office. Mrs. Patton is visiting him here.

due to his untiring efforts in making preparations. Mr. Sites has been a busy man since his arrival here, receiving registration of the 500 odd postmasters in attendance upon the convention in session here all week, issuing badges and credentials, and making all financial arrangements. In this work he has been ably assisted by George S. McCrone, cashier of the Harrisburg post office, who has been working almost night and day since his arrival here and has had little opportunity to attend the sessions of the convention.

Chamber of Commerce Elects New President

George S. McCrone will leave for home Saturday morning. Charles H. Hoffman, superintendent of mails at Harrisburg, who has been attending the convention left late this afternoon for other Pennsylvania cities are attending the convention.

Election is Postponed

The election of the officers was to be held this morning but was postponed upon receipt of an invitation from Postmaster General Burleson to visit him which was accepted. It is practically assured that at tonight's session the association will decide to meet at Washington again next year because of the great advantages to be gained through close communication with the seats of the department. The convention will probably end tonight after the election of officers, but Postmaster Sites, who is accompanied here by Mrs. Sites will remain over until Monday at least, doing a little sight-seeing.

Mr. Sites has done no campaigning for office, and has in fact told some of his friends that he did not wish re-election owing to the enormous task it involves, but the election will be forced upon him because of the success of the present convention greatly

J. William Bowman, of the firm of Bowman and Company, was last night elected president of the Harrisburg Chamber of Commerce at the first meeting of the new Board of Directors. Mr. Bowman has been identified with the Chamber of Commerce since its organization, has been a member of the Board of Directors and is an active worker. He is also a member of the Harrisburg Board of Public Works. Other officers elected were: First vice-president, Warwick M. Ogelsby, second vice-president, David Kaufman; treasurer, Robert McCormick. E. L. McColegin, the present secretary, was re-elected. His term expires October, 1916.

A TYPHUS HOSPITAL IN LOSNITZA, SERVA

There was a Typhus hospital which we visited. It had once been a school. As the Serbian doctor opened the doors of room after room a sickening stench of dirt, filthy clothing and airlessness came out. The windows were all closed. The sick—mostly soldiers in the wreck of their unclean uniforms—lay packed closely shoulder to shoulder upon foul straw spread on the floor. There was no sign of disinfectant. Some leaned weakly on their elbows, scratching feebly for vermin; others tossed and chattered in delirium, and others lay white still, their eyes half-open, like the dead. "It gets better every day," said the doctor, rubbing his hands. "Two weeks ago we had four hundred here—now there are only eighty-six." He glanced meditatively at the sick men, jammed so close together that they almost lay upon one another. "Then we were crowded!"—John Reed, in the Metropolitan.

Dr. Kramer was named several years ago to the place and has been an active member of the board.

PURE FOOD SHOW IN FULL SWING

Tonight and Tomorrow Are Expected to Break All Records For Attendance

The pure food show enjoyed the usual large crowds last night. Indeed there has not been an evening since the show opened in Chestnut Street Auditorium that the attendance has not been on the increase. Tonight and to-morrow night are expected to break all records for this and other years. The usual number of baskets of groceries will be given away and there will be music and samples for everybody.

To-day a large delegation of representatives of big manufacturing concerns from Philadelphia, Wilkes-Barre, New York and other points are making an inspection. So widely known has the Harrisburg show become that quite frequently the managers of the enterprise are asked to explain its working details to delegations of pure food people from other towns and cities. In this as well as in other respects the Harrisburg idea appears to be gaining ground.

D. JONES GONE TO WAR IN EUROPE?

Detectives Have Tip of Whereabouts of Missing Election Officer

Has Delama Jones, fugitive Sixth Ward officer, gone to the big war in Europe as a cook or "striker" in a Canadian regiment? County Detective James T. Walter and Hyde Speece, another detective, who has been assisting Mr. Walters said to-day that they had heard rumors to that effect but could not run them down and couldn't say whether the story had any basis in fact. That Jones' whereabouts is still a mystery cannot be gainsaid. The man according to the detectives seems to have disappeared from the map.

William Jones, the judge of election board, needs to pay over but forty-one cents of his bill of costs and to find himself a bondsman for $500 to procure his release from jail. His mother, it is said has squared the county's bill of costs in the surety case against him all but forty-one cents. Whether or not a new election board can be appointed for the second precinct of the Sixth ward in view of the board's arrest for alleged election frauds is questionable. Since the members of the board are not yet indicted it is considerable doubtful if a new one can be chosen except in individual cases of vacancies.

Authentic Styles at Horse Show

Dame Fashion has made up her mind regarding the time and place that the public shall have its first public view of "what to wear" this coming winter. Having to dress the four seasons, as it were, is rather a task. There must be morning things, afternoon attire and evening dress—all in readiness, like a Christmas tree, before the season enters. Preparing for winter means having a wardrobe on display quite early in November. But where?

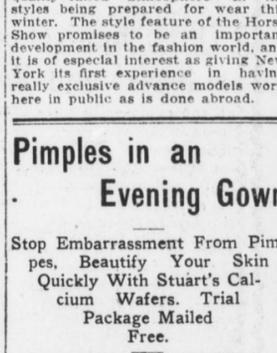

Scanning the calendar of events, Dame Fashion observed that the only smart show in New York, with a lot going on to attract society's mornings, afternoons and evenings, will be the Horse Show at Madison Square Garden, from November 6 to 12. The fashionable dame consulted Beau Brummel and both agreed nothing could be more satisfactory.

So the horse show will be the scene of the first public showing of authentic styles for winter. In other years Paris set the day and cut the cake for each season's feminine feast of fashions. But the lengthening war abroad has made it necessary for the most famous couturiers there to come to America, since fashion's wealthy devotees on this side cannot safely go abroad to revel in the latest dress requirements from the skilled and gifted hands of the fashion makers of the French capital. London, the center for men's fashions, is equally ab-
