State Should Raise More Food at Home

Governor Brumbaugh in the course of his remarks to the chemists and special agents of the Dairy and Food division, who visited him at the Executive Mansion last night, declared that the time had come when Pennsylvania must produce more food for her people and declared that the division of the Department of Agriculture should work closer together.

The Governor pointed out the more intimate joining of the Dairy and Food Department with the Department of Agriculture as the new law provides. Basing his remarks on this point, he expressed the wish and desire to have Pennsylvania produce much more largely the food for her own people; and in the movement to do this it is apparent that the Dairy and Food force will have increasingly important duties to the end that increased food supplies, home produced, at the lowest cost and absolutely pure as the law intends.

BIG NOVEMBER CHARITY WORK

John Y. Yates, general secretary of the Associated Charities, in his report to the board of managers yesterday, reviewed the work done during November. The total number of cases handled was 156, of which number 81 were new; 17 transients, and 95 old. Ninety-six agencies or individuals gave aid to the association during the month. Thirty-three men were placed in jobs and many more places are listed on the association's books. The Children's Aid Bureau placed 26 children in the nursery; 7 in the Industrial Home; 1 to the Home of the Good Shepherd at Reading; 11 in private homes, and 1 returned to its parents.

SHOULD SHE HAVE MARRIED THE MAN?

Answer the Question and Put Yourself in the Way of Winning Prize

"Should she have married him?" The question is being asked where ever the Telegraph's letter contest has been discussed. "The Outcast" will appear at the Orpheum Monday evening and for the best letter on the question suggesting itself from the story of the play received at this office addressed to "The Outcast," letter Contest Department," before Monday noon will be awarded $10, the second best a box for the performance and others in the prize-winning class will receive tickets of admission. The letters and the winners will be announced Monday.

The story of the play is that of a young man, Geoffrey, saved from ruin as the result of unrequited love, by Miriam, a reformed girl of the streets.

As the play ends, Geoffrey asks her to sit down for a few moments, explains to her, as he did to Valentine earlier in the action, that he has made up his mind to go to South America and that he would like her to come with him and be his wife.

Miriam replies: "There was a time when I would have jumped at that. But it is past. No, thank you. I won't marry you, but I will go with you to Buenos Aires or anywhere else if you really want it."

When Geoffrey protests she looks at him searchingly and says: "Did you ever read the marriage service? I never did till the other day. It was after the last time I saw you. One afternoon I was wandering along and I passed a church. I heard singing, so I stood still and listened. Then I thought it could do us no harm if I prayed for both, so I went inside. The priest was how I happened to come across the marriage service. It seemed as if it opened my eyes. It made me see that, whether you think marriage is something religious or only human, it is a solemn business. It's for the protection of good women. It's their reward. I'll cleave to you, Geoffrey, as long as you wish, but I won't marry you."

Now, there's the woman. To her, marriage means more than to the man. It is the reward for a blameless life, and it has greater religious significance than this girl than to him. She feels it would be a desecration of God's word, she cannot turn back. There is nothing left for her in the other direction. She can accept the protection of this man, but it has not yet dawned upon her that their relations would be halowed by a ceremony.

Should she have married him?

to elect two members of the State committee, except where the Senatorial District is composed of more than one county, in which event each county shall be entitled to elect one State committee member. All parties must elect State committee members in 1916.

Stewart Honored by the Guardsmen

Adjutant General Thomas J. Stewart, president of the National Guard Association of the United States and a former president of the National Guard Association of Pennsylvania, was to-day presented with a magnificent basket of flowers with the compliments of the State Guardsmen in a convention at Allentown. The basket was one of the handsomest ever sent to this city.

General Stewart's illness prevented him from attending the convention to his great regret and the convention appreciating what he had always been at such gatherings determined to honor him not only by the flowers but by a formal resolution.

Outcast

The Vital Gripping Play
BY HUBERT HENRY DAVIS, AUTHOR OF "COUSIN KATE," ETC.
The London Company

From N. Y. Herald: "Undoubtedly one of the best seasons' plays, 'Outcast' is worth while — jot this fact away in your memory."

From the N. Y. American: "Outcast" is by long odds the best and most satisfactory work produced this season."

From Richmond Times-Dispatch: "A remarkably fine fabric. The producers have supplied a cast of men and women who breathe into it that which makes it indeed a slice of life, a living thing. An organization of all actors."

Triangle Plays

have been shown in Harrisburg for one week. In that short time Triangle Plays have won nearly 20,000 converts in Harrisburg. Ninety-nine out of every hundred persons who saw the Triangle Plays at the Colonial this week pronounced them far superior to any other motion pictures ever shown in this or any other theater. The beauty of the Triangle Play service is that they have

Consistent Programmes

With Triangle it is not a case of good this week and only fair next week. The Triangle Plays, directed in all cases by Griffith, Ince and Sennett, are good every week. Employing the most desirable of all stars the Triangle Company gives the best that can be had. To have these plays presented, with orchestra accompaniment, at prices of 10 and 15 cents, is to get the biggest bargain in pictures ever presented. The program for Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, at the Colonial, will contain

Dorothy Gish

The most lovable little girl of the screen in a five-act Griffith picture, entitled "Old Heidelberg." This picture is of the customary Griffith perfection with scenes that cause one to wonder at the advance that has been made in motion photography. Coupled with this Griffith feature, there will be another of those laugh-making Keystone-Sennett comedies, featuring in "Fickle Fatty's Fall." This is the story of a beautiful housemaid whose charms prove so attractive that everybody falls in love with her, and everybody who does so manages to come to grief. It is a comedy worthy of the name for there are laughs in every foot of film.

Frank Keenan

comes to the Colonial the latter half of next week in a stirring Ince drama, "The Coward," a story in which honor and patriotism triumph over timidity. In this picture some of the best character work is done. The picture was directed by Thomas Ince. The comedy that goes with this picture is entitled "A Favorite Fool," and features the well-known comedian

Eddie Foy

Directors like these, with stars like those mentioned in next week's program cannot fail to turn out pictures that will live up to the splendid reputation they have attained in Harrisburg during their one week's showing at the
