PLAYS AND PLAYERS
Those who have seen Mae Murphy, the charming young Lasky star, before the camera, all swear that she will be a sensation to those who see her forthcoming production, "To Have and to Hold."

Walter Spencer and a particularly bow-legged bull dog add an immeasurable degree of fun to the American "Beauty" comedy, "Walk This Way," which is to be released January 20.

Cecil B. De Mille, director general of the Lasky Company, will at once begin rehearsals of "The Trail of the Lonesome Pine," the John Fox story, with Charlotte Walker in the stellar role, soon to be released on the Paramount Program.

Following her marvelous performance in the dual title role of the adaptation of "The Prince and the Pauper," which, by the way, is appearing to-day and to-morrow at the Regent, the first of the inimitable Mary Twain's works to be transferred to the screen as a feature, Marguerite Clark appears as the star in the Famous Players Film Company's presentation of the popular theatrical success, "Alice and Men," which was released on the Paramount Program on January 10.

The following startling headlines in one of the well-known photoplay magazines caused a flurry of excitement in many newspaper offices to-day: "Young lady's limbs cause of a mystery—They appear for a moment before crowd—then disappear." We read further: "A strip of film preceding the opening of the Vitaphone Blue Ribbon Fea-

HOW TO PROLONG LIFE

By adopting a simple diet men like Conaro have lived to be 100 years of age, but with our complex diets of to-day, the vitality of the aged is taxed to its utmost endurance. A simple diet, therefore, is conducive to a long life, and if the vitality becomes impaired and weak, it is necessary to resort to our local druggists, George A. Gorgas, druggist, Kennedy's Medicine Store, 321 Market St., C. F. ture, "Green Stockings," is well calculated to arouse interest among the fans. Upon the background of dense black, a pair of feminine limbs, visible to just above the knees, strove to the center of the film and stand, hesitating and bashful. They are dainty limbs—slender and well shaped—tapering down to trim ankles and tiny feet. They stand there for a time, then one limb lifts and gently rubs the other. Then they skip off the screen, and the play begins.

LOCAL THEATERS

"The Princess Pat," an operetta in three acts, music by Victor Herbert, book and lyrics by Henry Blossom, will be the offering at the Orpheum on February 1.

As previously announced, the management at the Regent took great care in selecting the program for Marguerite Clark for her anniversary. The Regent drew large and appreciative audiences to those who see her during the week, and to-day's show is especially well chosen. Marguerite will be seen in a screen version of Mark Twain's "The Prince and the Pauper" to-day and to-morrow.

In the double role of the lowly pauper and the high-spirited but democratic prince, Marguerite Clark does the most artistic work of her career. For those who would refresh their memories—the story relates how a little beggar chap of the streets of London in the time of Henry VIII meets the young heir apparent, a chap of his own age. Each envies the life of the other, and they decide to change costumes. As a result many adventures take place. But neither boy has enjoyed his experience and each is delighted to return to his former and natural mode of existence.

One of the local balers must have lately acquired himself a small confectionery, for a trace of Nazimova's "War Brides" was sent through the mails. The wedding cake was the real thing and was neatly packed in the small white boxes that these favors are usually distributed in. Upon opening the box the recipient found a neat little card bearing the figure of a little girl in her "nightie" attire and carrying a candle and this inscription: "Put this wedding cake under your pillow to-night and you will dream of 'War Brides' and to-morrow your dream will come true." And then 'way at the bottom the expression was finished at the Majestic. Hundreds of the wedding cake samples were distributed about town this morning.

A company of seven players presents "War Brides" at the Majestic the latter half of this week, which is almost a complete show in itself. Nazimova, the celebrated actress, toured the bigger cities in the playlet, getting $2 a seat. For the tour of the smaller cities, where lower prices are charged, an excellent company was put together. Sara Blaha, who plays Nazimova's part, was selected by Nazimova herself as an apt understudy in the difficult role.

The most romantic period in California history revolves about the beginnings of San Francisco. The American Film Company, Inc., with characteristic enterprise, has secured the best literary products of our own country, recently purchased the picture rights in "Chamberlain," "The Other Side of the Door," a graphic narrative of the boisterous life of the Bay City in its making, and the author actually saw it. It is a story of red-blooded men and heroic women, full of stirring incidents, and it is presented in the role of John Montgomery, assisted by an all-star cast, including May Allison.

There is a happy combination of humor and realism in the Triangle comedy called "Pirate." Another Chaplin marriage, "Patrons To Amuse Colonial," which received so many interesting stories in metropolitan newspapers.

WAR BRIDES; MAJESTIC SKETCH, AIMS AT PEACE

Powerful Playlet Denounces Compulsory Marriage in War-Ridden Countries

SCENE FROM "WAR BRIDES"

One of the benefits that comes from living under the Stars and Stripes, and one that has given very little consideration in the past, is the protection that Uncle Sam gives to his girls in the matter of marriage. In this country girls are guided in their march to the altar purely by motives of love, while in many foreign countries, during time of war, girls are ordered to become brides and to become mothers so that the war-ridden countries may be repopulated with fighting men of the future.

"War Brides," the vaudeville headliner to be presented at the Majestic Theater the last three days of the present week, has done a great deal to emphasize in the mind of the American the terrible conditions that exist in countries where governments select husbands for girls, marry them, and send the husbands to war to be shot, in most cases living a widow to bring up a fatherless child. Ministers all over the country have used "War Brides" as a theme for sermons, and have praised the great good the act does to enlighten the people of this country as to one of the worst of all the horrors of war.

and which makes its appearance at the Colonial during the last half of the week.

Syd Chaplin supplies the humor in big doses, but it is owing to the enterprises of the Triangle forces and the permission of the Navy Department, headed by Secretary Daniels, that a real, sure-going submarine and a gunboat were used in the pictures. There is, accordingly, an educational value of seeing an actual submarine in operation. The complicated interior, with all its engines and its torpedo-firing apparatus, and also the means by which its small surface guns are fired, are shown in completeness.

The dramatic feature is the play called "The Edge of the Abyss," with Willard Mack, who will be recalled as the clever star of "Aloha Oe," Mary Boland, the charming actress, who was the former leading woman with John Drew, and Frank Mills, who played the recent Triangle drama, "Matrimony." "The Edge of the Abyss" is a modern society play and it is presented with all the mastery of art of Thomas H. Ince.

Believe Missing Nun Found in Baltimore

Baltimore, Md., Jan. 19.—On a description furnished by the police of Philadelphia, a young woman believed to be Sister Rita E. Vincent, the novice missing from St. Joseph's Villa, Cheltenham, was arrested last night at a girls' home in Charles street. She is now held at the central police station, charged with being a runaway. She will tell nothing of her movements and declares that she is not the girl wanted. When asked to give her name she told the police to take the name in the police telegram from Philadelphia. They did so, and she was entered as Rose Hagerty, her name before she entered the Sisterhood of St. Joseph. The villa at Cheltenham is a sanatorium where members of the sisterhood are attended for tuberculosis.

Civic Federation Declares For Preparedness at Closing

Washington, Jan. 19.—Delegates to the sixteenth annual meeting of the National Civic Federation returned to their homes to-day after a busy two days' session featured by an extended discussion of national preparedness. Adoption of a resolution unanimously favoring adequate preparation for defense and authorizing an investigation of methods by a special committee was one of the final acts of the convention. Seth Low, former mayor of New York, was re-elected president; Samuel Gompers was elected first vice-president.

Col. House Reports British Blockade Plan to Wilson

Washington, Jan. 19.—Reports to President Wilson from Col. House have satisfied the Administration that within a few days a proclamation will be issued announcing that the British orders in Council have been vacated; that an allied fleet will blockade Germany, and that means will be found to cut off the supplies which the neutral countries have clandestinely allowed to be shipped to the Central Governments. Great Britain is determined to shift responsibility in part to her allies, if the opinion held in official circles may be accepted, so that France, Italy, Russia and Belgium shall bear a portion of the censure that is expected to be raised in Congress if the new blockade does not satisfy this government and seriously interferes with American shippers.

Physician With Broken Back Is Able to Walk

Philadelphia, Jan. 19.—Dr. "Jim" Keith, the Jefferson Medical College student whose back was broken two years ago when he fell from a third-story window, was able to walk alone yesterday for the first time. Surgeons and nurses congratulated him as he proceeded 100 feet along a corridor of Jefferson Hospital. Just after the fall his life was despaired of by the surgeons, but his pluck, they say, carried him along. After a time he could sit up, and after that he was wheeled in a chair every day to and from the recitation room. At his graduation last June he was carried to the platform to receive his diploma.

SWEDES PROTEST SEIZING OF SHIPS BY GERMANY

Stockholm, via London, Jan. 19.—The Swedish government has lodged a protest in Berlin against the seizure by Germans of the steamships Capella and Hildur, which were captured two months ago. It is declared that investigations show both vessels to have been taken in Swedish waters. The immediate delivery of the steamships and their cargoes is demanded. When these ships arrived at Stockholm before the prize court met all the crews were sent home and it is said that the special purpose of this was that the captains should have no witnesses.
