gan; Joseph on the witness stand this morning, told the court of the end of that story when he asked for a divorce from his wife, Jennie.

Pownall had attended the funeral of a relative in Lancaster October 23, 1912. So far as he knew Mrs. Pownall always seemed happy and no flaw disturbed the smoothness of the house of Pownall. But on the fateful October 28, Pownall got back from his trip of sorrow—to find a startling note on his wife's bureau. It simply stated that she was going to visit a sister in Chambersburg. To this day he has never heard a word of her. His letters of inquiry have been returned unopened—even the registered letter in which he enclosed a ten dollar bill as a Christmas gift.

The Story of the Blacksmith's Wife
The recital of the dreary tale of Mrs. George Deckert's wedded life was resumed this morning before President Judge Kunkel. The case had been heard several months ago when Mrs. Deckert related some of her hardships as the wife of Deckert. He is a blacksmith and frequently abused her. Many a time she says she hadn't enough to eat. Deckert never bought her clothes; often Mrs. Deckert picked a lot of old clothes from a garbage can, it is alleged.

Deckert finally deserted her but Judge Kunkel wasn't satisfied that he had left the State. District Attorney M. E. Stroup presented evidence this morning to the effect that Deckert had gone to Grafton, Wis. The husband had even written to Mr. Stroup asking for news of "the divorce."

The presentation of this evidence gave the court a chance to remind attorneys of their failure to serve necessary proofs of service in divorce proceedings.

Until these matters are attended to, Judge Kunkel pointedly explained, the decisions will not be forthcoming.

MRS. WOODROW WILSON IS GREETED BY INDIAN PRINCESS
Cleveland, Jan. 31.—Mrs. Wilson, wife of the President, received three Indians in her room, and was given a sweet-grass basket by Princess Gwah-Heah-Doongwa, of the St. Regis reservation in New York.

Chief Thunderingwater and Chief Louis Solomon stolidly shook hands with Mrs. Wilson. They said they wanted to meet her because they had heard she was descended from Pocahontas.

VOTE OR LOCAL OPTION IS PLEA

fer of the license of Fred Ebel, proprietor of the National Hotel, this city, from its present location at Fourth and State streets, to 1902 North Fourth street.

The present site of the hotel is in the territory included in the Capitol Park Extension and some months ago, when Mr. Ebel tried to have his license transferred, there was a big contest from the citizens in the locality to which it was proposed to move the hotel. The Rev. Amos M. Starnes will head the committee appointed to secure the signatures of the citizens of the Eleventh ward on a petition against the transfer, which will be presented to the court along with the remonstrance.

Moore Outlines Plans
State Superintendent Moore and Homer W. Tope, D. D., superintendent of the Philadelphia district, were two of the prominent speakers in the churches yesterday. Dr. Moore addressed the congregations of Market Square Presbyterian Church in the morning and Grace Methodist in the evening; while Dr. Tope was heard in Churches.

Dr. Moore made a very forceful address at Market Square, outlining the plans of the league and its work for this year. He stated that the fight is a clearly defined one between the nationally organized liquor forces and the anti-forces represented by the churches and federated bodies, but that in the final victory the laicals will be placed upon the church, but the people of Judah. And he also referred to the statement of Abraham Lincoln, who on the day of his assassination, while sitting at luncheon, declared that the next great battle would be against the liquor traffic, and that the fight would be waged against an enemy at home, and not from abroad.

Where Pennsylvania Stands
In the course of his remarks Dr. Moore declared that twenty years ago there were three prohibition States, while to-day there are nineteen, and six more will vote in the next twelve months; that during these years, every State in the Union save Pennsylvania has changed its liberal liquor laws to restrictive or prohibitory measures. "It is unfair," said Dr. Moore, "to make the individual judge decide the question."

"On December 22, 1914," said the speaker, "Congress for the first time voted on a Prohibition resolution, submitting the liquor question to the States of this Union. In the count twenty of Pennsylvania's thirty-six congressmen went on record against liquor traffic."

"Pennsylvania is one of the blackest spots on the charted area of wet and dry States, and the fight this year will be directly on the legislature," and the added that Governor Brumbaugh was a leader with whose help it was hoped the potential political forces of the Commonwealth would be arrayed on the side of the anti-saloon forces.

Movement's Progress
Dr. Moore referred to the great fight against the saloon and the victories in Maine and West Virginia; to the important bills now before Congress including prohibition in the District of Columbia, the Philippines and Alaska, and the joint resolution referring to the several States the question of national prohibition through an amendment to the constitution; all these things as indicating the rapid progress of the movement through the country.

Plea For Local Option
Dr. Tope in his two addresses urged the voters to nominate and elect in all political parties, men who stood for local option. He claimed that the people's weakness consisted in divorcing religion from social and civic life. "The addresses all over the city were well received and constituted the main topic of conversation throughout the homes."

The body will be taken to Calais, Maine, for funeral services and burial, which will be in charge of the Red Men of that place.

BITTERLY ASSAILS WILSON FOR HIS FOREIGN POLICY

Col. Roosevelt Compares President's Notes to Those of Dickens' Micawber

Special to the Telegraph
New York, Jan. 31.—More than 3000 persons packed the Brooklyn Academy of Music yesterday afternoon to hear Colonel Theodore Roosevelt deliver an address on "Promises and Performance in International Life," and cheered him for several minutes when he said that if war came to the United States he, himself, and his four sons would go to the front.

"One personal word," said Col. Roosevelt, departing from his typewritten address, which he followed closely, "people speak as if I wanted war. There is not in all this country a man who wants war less than I do, because I have four sons, all of whom would go if we had war, and my daughter's husband would go, too. Do you suppose their mother and I wish to see these boys go? I would go myself. Most emphatically do I dread and abhor war, but I'd rather see all my boys in their graves than have them flinch in their duty when the nation called."

Colonel Roosevelt made many sarcastic references to professional pacifists, "well meaning persons in the government," and to the Wilson administration's diplomatic notes, he said.

"Readers of David Copperfield will remember that Mr. Micawber's speciality was to issue notes. He never honored these notes when they became due. His mind was so constituted that he felt that when a note became due he met it adequately by writing another. His creditors, however, did not do so charitably as to honor his performance. They did not have single track minds. To those acquainted with the United States diplomatic history during the last year or two there will be no necessity of pursuing the analogy further."

Roosevelt High Lights

High lights in his address are: "It is highly most to export munitions which will help Belgium to free herself."

"It is an act of gross infamy on the part of this government and this people to take any step which will help the wrongdoers against the wronged, and such a step would be taken if we imposed an embargo in the interest of Germany against the allies."

"Unfortunately it is evident that many of our public men are afraid of the professional German-American vote and are willing to sacrifice the honor of this country to their fears."

"I believe that the great mass of Americans of German descent are straight-out Americans and nothing else."

"I stand for ample preparedness in order to avert war and in order to avert disgrace and disaster if war should come."

SON PICKS UP DEAD MOTHER

one of the women killed, was the young man's mother.

Funeral services for Mrs. Myers will be held to-morrow afternoon at 2 o'clock. The funeral of Mrs. Cyrus Carbaugh of Chambersburg, another victim, will be held to-morrow afternoon at 3 o'clock, and services for Mrs. Daniel Wingert, also of Chambersburg, the third woman who was killed, will be held Wednesday morning at 9:30 o'clock. The bodies were taken to their homes yesterday.

Dr. J. H. Deardorf, of Mechanicsburg, coroner of Cumberland county, after an investigation examined the train crew Saturday night. The jury returned a verdict that the Philadelphia and Reading railway men were not responsible for the accident, as it would not have occurred had Mr. Wingert not backed his machine on the track after he crossed it.

TO-MORROW IMPORTANT CHANGES IN OPERATION OF CARS

Beginning to-morrow, the following changes in the operation of cars will be put into effect:

North Second Street and Riverside Lines

North-bound cars will start from North Market Square, instead of South Market Square as at present. On the return trip, to the Square, cars will run south on North Second street to Walnut—east on Walnut to Third—south on Third to Market—and west on Market—turning into North Market Square for the resumption of the north-bound trip.

Cross River Car Lines

All out-bound cross-river cars will start from the north side of Market street, instead of South Market Square as at present. In-bound cars will continue to enter North Second street at Walnut, but will run south only to the north side of Market street preparatory to the resumption of the out-bound trip. Passengers will be received and discharged on west side of the Square. The stop at Market Square and Strawberry avenue will be discontinued.

These changes, which will tend to equalize traffic on various tracks in Market Square, it is believed, will greatly facilitate the maintenance of schedules on ALL lines, and thus benefit ALL patrons.

It must be understood, however, that they will not completely overcome all difficulties. Various causes beyond the control of the companies frequently contribute to delays along the various routes of their cars.

But they WILL eliminate the delays now occasioned to various lines by the overburdening of certain tracks in Market Square—and as it is the desire of the companies to improve service to their patrons wherever possible, the above changes in operation have been decided upon.
