KNOCKS OUT "GRIP" IN FORTY-EIGHT HOURS

OR MONEY BACK, SAY G. A. GORGAS' REMEDY "GRIP" IS GUARANTEED BASIS

There seems to be a regular epidemic of Grippe, Cough, Colds, Influenza and Pneumonia this winter and some remarkably successful results in their treatment are being reported of a prescription widely used for years in New England, where disease of throat and lungs are so prevalent. Dr. Eugene Howard's Oxidaze remedy for Grippe, Coughs, Colds and prevention of Pneumonia, is sold by G. A. Gorgas' Drug Store here in Harrisburg on a positive guarantee that it must break up an attack of "grip" in forty-eight hours or money back. This proves the confidence its makers have in it and makes fusing with other unguaranteed medicines unnecessary. The time to fight "grip" is as soon as the first symptom appears and the best way to fight it is with a guaranteed treatment that says "money back if I fail." A single package, taken now may save many doctors' bills in future.—Advertisement.

ONLY POWERFUL MEDICINE WILL END RHEUMATISM

Rheuma speedily relieves rheumatism. It matters not whether you have had agonizing pains for 20 years or distressing twinges for 20 weeks, Rheuma is strong enough and mighty and powerful enough to drive rheumatism poisons from your body and abolish all misery or money back. H. C. Kennedy sells Rheuma on a no-cure-no-pay basis for not more than 50 cents a bottle, and after you take a half teaspoonful once a day for two days you should know that at last you have obtained a remedy that will conquer rheumatism. Even if you are crippled and are of no use to yourself or others, even if you cannot sleep because of cruel torture, Rheuma is the remedy you must have. Begin the treatment to-day. Good druggists everywhere sell and recommend Rheuma.—Advertisement.

WHAT HAPPENED TO JANE

By Virginia Terhune Van de Water

CHAPTER XLVI. (Copyright, 1916, by Star Company)

As soon as the Hardys' simple and early supper was over, Jane said she must be going. She was suddenly nervous as she thought of what her husband might say to her of her absence. For hours, she had dreaded Ruth's opinion of her, but now the probability of her husband's displeasure began to weigh upon her. She was always frightened about something, nowadays, she told herself.

"I'll walk a ways with you," her father informed her. "It's hardly necessary to hitch up the horse for just that mile—is it?"

"Certainly not," Jane agreed. "And I must walk so fast that there's no need to bother you to go with me."

"We sit in the kitchen these days instead of in the sitting-room," Ezra remarked when he and his daughter were walking down the lane. "You mean that?" she rejoined. "Why do you do it?"

"To save coal and wood," Ezra explained. "We're hard up, Jane."

"Why are you so hard up?" she asked. "You live simply, and mother tells me she has sold some of her chickens, and that down at the hotel they've bought quite a lot of butter and eggs from her."

"It's not the living that worries me," Ezra said, "but it's the notes that will fall due soon and must be paid."

A Plea to the Daughter Jane recalled the bit of information her mother had given her last December. She said that Augustus had lent Ezra money to pay debts with and taken a note for the amount. That note was to fall due "sometime about March," Mrs. Hardy had said. And this was late February.

"You mean," she stammered, "that Augustus?"

"I mean," her father supplemented when she stopped, embarrassed, "that my note to your husband falls due soon—and I can't meet it. I wish, Jane, that you'd use your influence with him to get him to put the payment off for another six months. When summer comes I'll maybe be able to sell some land. I think it's hard of him to expect me to pay as prompt as it was an outsider. If it hadn't been for me he'd never have had such a wife as you."

In the dark the woman smiled bitterly. So this was another penalty that hadn't been for me he'd never have had such a wife as you. She must ask her husband to be lenient with her father!

"Ma didn't say anything to you about it, I suppose," Ezra went on. "But she's making herself sick worrying over it. Didn't you notice how poor and peaked she looked?"

"Yes, I noticed that she didn't look well."

"She isn't well—and it's all on account of worrying."

"I'm sorry, I will see what I can do," Jane promised. They had reached the end of the lane and she wanted to get away by herself.

As she sped up the path to the back entrance of the Reeves house, Mary opened the door for her.

"I heard you coming," she said, shortly. "Remember, your mother's been sick and wanted you, so you had to go to her. Remember!"

"What?" Jane faltered.

"That's what I told him, so don't spoil it for you and me both. He's got other things on his mind, so he isn't caring much about your being out, not the way he would at other times. Just be pleasant, and I guess it'll be all right."

She almost pushed the wife into the dining-room, where Augustus still lingered over the supper table, reading the Pattonville evening paper.

"Well!" he looked up as she entered, but did not rise. "I suppose, your father saw you home safe. He didn't come in, did he? That's right. By the way, how's your mother?"

"She's—she's better," stammered Jane. "Are you all right, Augustus?"

She forced herself to be pleasant and made her manner solicitous. Her fear was teaching her such deception as she would once have despised.

He smiled as if pleased at her question, then frowned slightly.

"I'm all right," he said, "but other things aren't."

"I'm sorry," she ventured. "Some stock I'd invested in has gone to pot," he explained.

And she must ask him to extend the time on her father's note. She could not do it now. She must wait a few days.

Suddenly he laughed coarsely. "Well, you sent Ruth about her business, didn't you? Mary told me about it. I'm glad you minded me. You're a good girl, after all, Jane. Come and kiss me."

Suppressing any signs of disgust, she obeyed. She wondered if she could have done this just now if she had not recalled her mother's pale face.

For her parents' sake she must keep this man in good humor. (To Be Continued)

USE SHEER LAWN FOR COMBINATION

Undergarments Now Made of Thinnest and Daintiest Crepe de Chine

By MAY MANTON

8901 (With Basting Line and Added Seam Allowance) Empire Combination, Small 34 or 36, Medium 38 or 40, Large 42 or 44 bust.

This is one of the prettiest of the combination under garments for which the season is remarkable. It is essentially dainty and charming and the lines of the corset cover make it especially admirable for evening wear. The skirt may be made just as a petticoat or can be made to become drawers, as it is finished with or without the extension on the back edge. For the drawers this extension is buttoned onto the front. On the figure, the material is crepe de chine with lace banding as trimming. In one of the smaller views, fine white batiste is shown with hem-stitched edges. Both treatments are pretty and both are fashionable. The drawers may be made with straight or curved lower edges.

For the medium size will be needed, 2 1/2 yards of material 36 or 44 inches wide with 4 yards of lace.

The pattern 8901 is cut in three sizes small 34 or 36, medium 38 or 40, large 42 or 44 inches bust measure. It will be mailed to any address by the Fashion Department of this paper, on receipt of ten cents.

DISCOVERING THAT HE WAS AN ARISTOCRAT

In the November AMERICAN MAGAZINE Don Marquis writes an exceedingly interesting dog story entitled "Blood Will Tell." Following is an extract:

"I am a middle-sized dog, with spots on me here and there, and several different colors of hair mixed in even where there aren't any spots, and my ears are frizzled a little on the ends where they have been chewed in fights."

"At first glance you might not pick me for an aristocrat. But I am one. I was considerably surprised when I discovered it, as nothing in my inmost feelings up to that time, nor in the treatment which I had received from dogs, humans or boys, had led me to suspect it."

"I can well remember the afternoon on which the discovery was made. A lot of us dogs were lying in the grass, up by the swimming hole, just loafing around, and the boys were doing the same."

"Us dogs was listening to the boys talk."

"A Stray Boy, by which I mean one not claimed or looked out for or owned by any dog, says to Freckles Watson, who is my boy:

"What breed would you call that dog of yours, Freck?"

"I pricked up my ears at that. I cannot say that I had ever set great store by breeds up to the time that I found out I was an aristocrat myself, believing, as Bill Patterson, a human and the town drunkard, used to say when intoxicated, that often an honest heart beats beneath the outcast's ragged coat."

"Spot ain't any one particular breed," says Freckles. "He's considerably mixed."

"He's a mongrel," says Squint Thompson, who is Jack Thompson's boy.

"He ain't," says Freckles, so huffy that I saw a mongrel must be some sort of a disgrace.

"A dog," chips in the Stray Boy, "has either got to be a thoroughbred or a mongrel. He's either an aristocrat or else he's a common dog."

"Spot ain't any common dog," says Freckles, sticking up for me. "He can lick any dog in town within five pounds of his weight."

"He's got some panache in him," says the Stray Boy.

"His nose is pointed like a hound's nose," says Squint Thompson.

"Well," says Freckles, "neither one of them kind of dogs is a common dog."

"Spot has got some bulldog blood in him, too. Did you ever notice how Spot will hang on so you can't pry him loose, when he gets into a fight?"

"That proves he is an aristocratic kind of dog."

MEDICAL MEN TO TALK HYGIENE

Commissioner Jackson Announces an Important Conference on the Subject

Conferences between physicians and surgeons who are interested in the problems attending occupational diseases, accident prevention and similar activities of the State government and the medical men of the State Department of Labor and Industry will be held every three months at the State Capitol. The first of the conferences has been called for Thursday, February 17, and will be on industrial hygiene.

Medical men interested in the subject, including the surgeons of railroads, industrial plants and mines, are being invited to attend the meetings, which will be under the direction of Dr. Francis D. Patterson, of Philadelphia, the newly appointed chief of the division of industrial hygiene and engineering. A special effort will be made to secure co-operation in efforts to reduce lead poisoning and similar occupational diseases this winter and Spring.

The State Industrial Board is also taking up similar subjects and is preparing standards of safety and sanitation for a number of industries.

DRINK HOT WATER AND RID JOINTS OF RHEUMATIC RUST

Why rheumatism and lumbago sufferers should drink phosphated hot water each morning before breakfast

Just as coal, when it burns, leaves behind a certain amount of incandescent material in the form of ashes, so the food and drink taken day after day leaves in the alimentary canal a certain amount of indigestible material, which if not completely eliminated each day, becomes food for the millions of bacteria which infest the bowels. From this mass of left-over waste material, toxins and ptomaine-like poisons, called uric acid, is formed and then sucked into the blood where it continues to circulate, collecting grain by grain in the joints of the body much like rust collects on the hinge as shown above.

Men and women who suffer from lumbago, rheumatism or sore, stiff, aching joints should begin drinking phosphated hot water, not as a means to magic relief from pain, but to prevent more uric acid forming in the system. Before eating breakfast each morning, drink a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it. This will first neutralize and then wash out of the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels the previous day's accumulation of toxins and poisons; thus, cleansing, sweetening, and freshening the entire alimentary canal, each morning, before putting more food into the stomach.

A quarter pound of limestone phosphate costs very little at the drug store but is sufficient to make any rheumatic or lumbago sufferer an enthusiast on the morning inside bath.

Millions of people keep their joints free from these rheumatic acids by practicing this daily internal sanitation. A glass of hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate, drunk before breakfast, is wonderfully invigorating; besides, it is an excellent health measure because it cleanses the alimentary organs of all the waste, gases and sour fermentations, making one look and feel clean, sweet and fresh all day.

Those who try this for one week may find themselves free from sick headaches, constipation, bilious attacks, sallowness, nasty breath and stomach acidity.
