LEADING FIGURES IN MISKINOFF LOVE TANGLE

Left to right, Yvonne Gouraud, Prince Alexander Miskinoff and Princess Aimee Miskinoff. Yvonne is the foster-daughter of Princess Miskinoff and the cause of many quarrels with the latter and her husband. At the suggestion of the princess herself, the prince and Yvonne underwent a three months' love test. Prince Miskinoff, who is considerably younger than his wife, admits he was fascinated by the latter's foster-daughter, Yvonne. The girl, he said, was simply irresistible at times. He claims she did all she could to attract his notice. Princess Miskinoff had several stormy marital experiences before her marriage to the prince, but none that compared to her troubles with him. Note the tattooing on her arm.

Need Root to Settle Peace, Asserts Butler

Detroit, Mich., Feb. 24.—Elihu Root is the man whom Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, president of Columbia University, suggests to settle the question of world peace.

"Elihu Root is the strong iron man to represent America as its President in dictating upon what final lines world peace shall forever be maintained," declared Dr. Butler in an interview here today.

That Roosevelt is not the man to beat Wilson was another striking statement of Dr. Butler. President Wilson could easily defeat Roosevelt if the latter would be nominated, he said.

BABE NO HEIRESS OR BORN PRINCESS

testimony regarding episodes of his life with the former Mrs. Albee Crocker Gouraud, on which he based his charges of cruelty.

After a conference with the principals Mr. Oldmixon, a lawyer, said: "An amicable settlement has been reached and there is no financial agreement. Prince Miskinoff is not angry at the princess. His feeling toward her is very friendly. He is now satisfied that no child was born to his wife and the case should be closed."

The baby that figured in this controversy," he added, "was a poor little girl named Vera, a foundling who was fortunate enough to win at the age of two months the friendship of Mrs. Gouraud. Her identity never will be established. She will be reared and properly educated and provided for. The princess never told the prince that a child had been born to them."

Again last night Prince Miskinoff said he was satisfied to let his separation suit drop.

Going to War, He Says

"I have been wanting to get back to Russia, into the war," he told a friend. "Now I shall go."

In court yesterday morning the prince was questioned about his relations with Yvonne Gouraud. He described them as "courteous and kindly." He used to kiss her hands, according to the French custom. In Paris, he said, his wife told him that she was too old for him and he should marry Yvonne, also that Yvonne was flirting with other men. When they came to New York and took a suite at the McAlpin he had to speak to his wife regarding the conduct of Yvonne.

"My room was first, madame's was next and Yvonne's next," he said. "I told madame that Yvonne was constantly appearing at the door in her night dress and listening. The porters and maids could see her. I suggested that she get another room farther away. Madame was furious and said Yvonne was very jealous. Yvonne wrote letters to me all the time."

He identified a letter to Yvonne which he said was a "consolation letter," written after he had told the girl he "could not marry her, as he was married to her mother. Madame had proposed divorce, but he had assured her that divorces were hard to obtain. She replied, said the prince, that "she knew more about divorce than most lawyers, because she had two of them."

Listened in Night Clothes

Mr. Lawrence, cross-examining, asked the prince if he had ever seen Yvonne listening at the door in her nightdress.

"No," he said, "Yvonne herself told me. Once she even put letters under my door when madame was in the room—but fortunately madame didn't see them. I remember very well, because I heard the rustling of paper and was trembling because madame was there."

After hearing of the birth of the baby, the prince said, he was occupied with the thoughts of a father and paid little attention to Yvonne. He said that when a divorce was talked of he went to Mr. Lawrence's office six times, and finally he was so sure a decree would be granted that he arranged to sail with Yvonne for Cuba on November 6.

"Did you ever kiss Yvonne?" Mr. Lawrence asked, continuing the cross-examination.

"Certainly. Every night before going to bed I kissed Yvonne and the madame too."

Mr. Lawrence read a letter in which appeared the line, "I kiss you, my charming little Kiss Kiss. Is it nice?"

"In France," said the prince, "one always writes like that. When I go back to France, Mr. Lawrence, I shall write you in the same way. He said it was Yvonne's affair, not his, if her affection was more than friendly—he knew all the time that she was in love with him.

"Did you and Yvonne write many letters?" was another question.

"So many it would take an express wagon to carry them," was the reply.

Here's the Reason Big Bank Building Was So Conspicuous

Exterior illumination by the "flood lighting" system is being tried every evening on the Mechanics Trust Company building, Third and Market streets, and the new scheme causes the white stone facade of the big building to stand out conspicuously among the business houses of the commercial section. The bank building is lighted by means of great, powerful electric lamps located on the roof of the opposite building by the Harrisburg Light and Power Company and the rays are so directed that the upper half of the structure stands bathed in a flood of white light that makes the bank easily distinguishable for miles around. The "flood light" plan is new in this city and is being tried out by the electric company along the lines which made the buildings at the Panama-Pacific Exposition in San Francisco so especially beautiful at night.

An attractive decorative feature has been added to the company's own building front by the installation in the display windows of a big waving electric American flag similar to the type that has been hung in one of the local theaters. The flag was lighted for the first time on Monday as background for the picture of the nation's first President and it will be kept burning every evening.

Anglo-French Bonds Are Part of Du Pont Melon

Wilmington, Del., Feb. 24.—There was considerable disappointment among a number of the stockholders of E. I. du Pont, de Nemours & C., the powder manufacturing concern, when it was announced that the quarterly dividend of the new company was 24 per cent., that being 1 1/2 per cent. regular quarterly dividend and a special dividend of 22 1/2 per cent. for the same period.

Of the dividend on the common stock of the new company, 19 per cent. is to be paid in Anglo-French war bonds at $95 per $100 bond, which bonds bear 5 per cent. interest, and the remaining 5 per cent. is to be paid in cash.

According to the estimates made, stockholders of the company will receive $2,000,000 in cash for dividends and $12,000,000 in the Anglo-French bonds. It was stated some time ago that the company had purchased $25,000,000 worth of the bonds, but no statement could be secured from the company on that line. This will mean that $12,000,000, or about one-third of all of the bonds purchased by the company, have now been handed over to the stockholders.

An Eight Hour Day

is demanded by the coal miners.

This is one of the 20 other demands made by the miners upon the coal mining companies.

The miners also want 20 per cent. increase in wages. An eight-hour day and 20 per cent. increase in wages will add about 60c on each ton of domestic size coal.

If there is a coal strike it may be months before a satisfactory settlement is reached and the surplus coal will be quickly consumed.

Don't wait until the last minute—put in a supply of coal at once. The quality is good now—later you may be glad to get any kind of coal.

Will Rebind Your Bible Satisfactorily

Some day you'll hit on a Sensible cigarette

And as soon as you smoke it, you'll at once know that it's sensible:

- (1) It will please your taste. That goes without saying, otherwise it would not be sensible for you.
- (2) It will be comfortable to your throat and tongue—not hot or bity as some cigarettes are.
- (3) And it will not leave you feeling "over-smoked" even after a long-smoking day.

We would like to have you match Fatima against each one of those three points for a sensible cigarette. Then try any other cigarette made on those same points.

So many other men have found Fatimas the most sensible cigarette for them that Fatimas now outsell every other cigarette costing over 5c.

Doesn't it seem reasonable that you will like Fatimas best too?
