Dean McCrea Gives Wharton Students Tips on Getting Men For Next Year

Dr. R. C. McCrea, who recently resigned as dean of the Wharton school of the University of Pennsylvania to accept the chair of economics of Columbia University, appeared last evening for the last time before the students of the Harrisburg extension of the Wharton school at a special meeting of the students.

Dean McCrea talked over with the students plans for getting a class for this Fall and gave positively assurance that the school was going to be a permanent institution in Harrisburg, just as long as the people of the city support it.

Active work will be started in the next month toward getting students for the Fall's class and the work will be in charge of W. P. Rainey, for the faculty, a committee of students, the Rotary Club, through C. Harry Kain, architect; a committee from the Chambers of Commerce and individual businessmen. Among these is E. C. Frey, chief accountant and one of the board of directors of the Pipe Bending Works, who is not only a student himself, but brought five men from his office into the school last Fall, and intends bringing the rest of them this fall.

Dean McCrea was met last night by T. J. S. Kishpaugh and Josiah Kline and taken first to the Wharton Students Club. He expressed himself as being very highly pleased with the latter organization. This club has been formed by the students in order to provide a place for the fellows to study. It has quarters at 213 Walnut street, near the school, and has a library of several hundred volumes on finance, accounting, law, etc., along the work of the course. These books were secured through the co-operation of Dr. T. L. Montgomery, State Librarian. The club is supported wholly by the students, a large number of whom are members, but there are a number of young men to whom the burden of paying tuition charges makes them unable to contribute to the cause, but member or not, every student of the school has the full privilege of using the rooms for study and the use of the library. As it is necessary for the students to do the most of their studying on Saturday and Sunday, the club has great advantages over the State and city public libraries in that the rooms are open at all hours every day, and it has proved a great help to the students. The leaders in getting the organization started were Josiah Kline, Norman Rintz, Richard McAllister, T. J. S. Kishpaugh and Edward Clouser. In a few weeks it is planned to have one of the professors give a talk of general interest to businessmen of the city, and on the night the school will have an open house, when everyone interested will be urged to attend and observe the work of the school.

Caught between the front and rear end of the coach they intended to board, their position was perilous. Onlookers held their breath. Mr. Kieffer sprang to the platform in the nick of time. Mr. Gerberich concluded to hold his ground and stood between the trains until the long string of freight cars had passed.

Will Investigate Rates of Seventeen Railroads on Soft Coal to Lake Erie

By Associated Press Washington, D. C., March 24.—Investigation of bituminous coal rates from mines in Pennsylvania, Maryland, West Virginia, Kentucky and Ohio to Lake Erie ports for transshipment over the Great Lakes was ordered to-day by the Interstate Commerce Commission on its own initiative. The commission fixed April 24 for the hearing here.

Formal complaint from the Pittsburgh Coal Operators' Association that rates of the Pennsylvania and other railroads are unreasonable and discriminatory from the Pittsburgh district to Ashtabula, Ohio, will be investigated at the same time. In announcing the investigation the commission stated that it had taken up the question because of numerous informal complaints. The terminal points involved are Conneaut harbor, Ashtabula, Fairport, Cleveland, Lorain, Huron, Sandusky and Toledo. Seventeen railroads are involved.
