

DO YOU WONDER THAT THEY CAN SELL THE GOODS?

WILL AUCTION OFF HEIRLOOMS AT SALE

still more indelibly affixed in the adjectives when the auction sale in full blast. Starting at 7 o'clock, every article that is left in the store will be placed on the block and it is rumored that three of the city's most effective auctioneers will subscribe their voices to the cause and demand the right sort of prices for their wares.

Mercer B. Tate, Flavell L. Wright and Floyd Hopkins, the auctioneers, probably do the honors, while the floorwalkers assisting will be pressed into service supplying lozenges and throat-cases tablets to the orators. The auctioneers will continue until the store is swept clear of every article, and the public is warned to be on their guard lest the ambitious auctioneers sell the clothes right off the buyers' backs. Worse things than that have been known to happen at rummage sales.

Wright to Start At the Chamber of Commerce yesterday Henry Claster, well-known jeweler, was heard to remark that if Flavell Wright would auction off the first article at the rummage sale to-night, he would buy it. And so the prospects are that the auctioneering will be given a merry send-off, "cause it is a matter of general knowledge that when it comes to Flavell making somebody else believe that he must have this or that thing, he is insurance or "rummage," there is only one answer, Henry Claster is sure to be a good loser.

Valuable Heirlooms Among the more valuable and higher-priced heirlooms and utilities that will come under the hammer this evening are the following: A John Harris bedstead of the turn of the century, which has been in the family of Mrs. Anna McDaniels, 1417 Market street, all her life; a two-horse wagon to hold six people, of the "Rogers" make and originally worth $200; a piano, owned by a prominent business man of the city; a beautifully finished player-piano, which Mrs. Mercer B. Tate presented to her son; a fine upright piano, which she bought; a number of organs and a piano; a double-seated carriage belonging to Mrs. Olmsted (she forgot herself); it was sold yesterday for $20; a "double trap" which has been tooting about town all morning with results that will be proved when the time comes to sell it. The engine, which caused the tooters of the horn produced a motorman to lean out of his car window and yell out in loud but good-natured tones: "If you've got a 'double trap' like that, it's a good thing it's all part of the game.

Miss McCormick's Coat Sold Right off the reel, Miss Anna McCormick's "green diagonal serge, size 24," which it was advertised "would be sold off her back," was gone in the twinkling of an eye, and for $3, but somehow or other the attractive divyette suit of Miss Robinson's hasn't been taken. There have been nibblings, but not a "strike." It will also sell for $2. The kittens have been sold! Yes, they have! And they were the biggest bargains in the store. "Little Don" was sold for $1.50, which was well worth, because they have gone to good homes, one in Steelton and the other down on Front street. It was a part of the agreement that the kittens be well taken care of.

Baby Pig on Sale The menagerie and livestock department was augmented at a late hour last evening by the presentation to the girls in the sporting department of a one-month-old baby pig, raised on Beaufort Farm by Harrisburg's youngest scientific farmer, Ehrman B. Mitchell. Little "Rummage" hadn't put in an appearance this morning, but it was rumored that he was still out at the farm being massaged and having his nails manicured and ribbons attached to him so that he might look his best when the time came for his transfer to owners. "Rummage" is guaranteed and would be a worthwhile addition to any family.

Men Behind the Guns One of the "men behind the guns" is Otto Plack, window decorator and advertising man, of the Astor store, who has worked untriflingly for five successive days, often until the early hours of the morning, arranging stock and looking after the details of decorating and making the improvements necessary to the success of the whole. Mr. Plack is a veteran in the handling of a sale of this sort and has proved himself invaluable in the assistance which he has given. Many appreciative remarks have been heard of the kindness of Mrs. Herman Astrich both in this matter and in offering the use of her property.

The sale has been featured by many humorous happenings and others not so humorous. One beautiful bargain didn't work out the way it had been intended. A $70 overcoat was sent in by the owner, who planned to come in and reclaim it for $20, but somehow the instructions got mixed up and an individual born under a lucky star carried it away for $4. On the other hand, there was a shadow lace and chiffon dress sold to a large and portly dame who will never in the world be able to wear it. The salesladies are becoming quite proficient in salesmanship, be it noted, and take as much joy in a sale well consummated. The total receipts from 10 o'clock this morning till noon totaled about $223.50, roughly estimated. Contributions by check are being received by Mrs. Meade Detweiler, treasurer, from a number of those who prefer to help out in that way. The biggest sales this morning were made in the women's cloaks and suit department, where the revenue amounted to $75 by high noon, and next in order came the men's clothing, which corralled $33. The other departments averaged between $3 and $15 apiece.

NEWS OF STEELTON

STEELTON TROUT FISHERMEN OUT

Seek "Speckled" Beauties in the Wilds of Cumberland County

If the citizens of Newville, that quaint little village of the Cumberland Valley, were started early, very early this morning by a motor truck load of noisy humanity that passed through its streets, it is a safe bet that they were not half so startled as the speckled little fish that inhabit the streams that flow through the Cumberland hills.

The occupants of the motor truck, although they may have been garbed in the helmets and khaki coats of invading soldiers, they were harmless to the residents of the villages through which they passed. But to the speckled trout—well they had come to slaughter and a terrible toll they levied, if reports are true. At the head of the "expedition" was Frank A. Stees, for some time Justice of the Peace in Steelton. His followers included the some twenty or more friends and political advisers who assisted him during the recent campaign. The outing was given by the Stees in keeping with a promise made during the campaign.

At noon, so stay-at-home sportsmen, whom it is just possible may have been a wee bit jealous said that dispatches from "the fields" say that the streams have been traversed for five miles and that the entire catch totaled: John E. Shupp, ex-fire chief, 2, and Squire Stees, of course, the Stees may have deleted a considerable part of the dispatches.

Contract Let For Big Steelton Blast Furnace

Work has been started on the erection of the new "B" blast furnace for the Pennsylvania Steel Company, for which contracts have been let.

The Raymond Concrete Pile Company, of New York, to whom the contract for excavations and concreting has been awarded has a gang of men at work building foundations. The contract for steel work and steel erection has been awarded the Pennsylvania Engineering Works, New Castle, Pa. The new stack will cost approximately $350,000.

Rechristen Stacks

General Manager Bent announces that the new furnace will be known as "B" stack and will be the second unit in the battery of five furnaces which the Schwab interests plan for the Steelton plant. No. 5 stack will hereafter be known as "E" stack and this furnace comprises the first unit of the battery. Work on No. 3 stack, which was started by the old management, and which it was planned would bring up the capacity of this furnace 500 tons daily, has been discontinued. It was further announced by Mr. Bent. It had been planned by the former management to build the new stack on the enlarged foundations of No. 3 furnace, having the new stack go up around the old one.

Explains New Plans

In explaining the plan for the proposed blast furnace expansion, General Manager Bent said that it is proposed to which the new battery start with the present No. 5 furnace, which hereafter will be known as "E" stack, and have the battery consist of Nos. 3 and 4 furnaces, which hereafter will be known as "D" and "B" stacks respectively. The "B" stack for which contract has just been let, and another stack to be built later and which will be known as "A" furnace.

To Abandon 1 and 2 Stacks

When this battery is completed the pig iron producing part of the big steel works will be a compact unit, and the arrangement of the separate units in a continuous line will facilitate the handling of materials and otherwise facilitate production. As this battery of furnaces is completed the plans of the new management call for the abandonment of Nos. 1 and 2 furnaces, which are now separated from the other units by considerable space.

Lebanon Stack on Spiegel

It was also announced by General Manager Bent this morning that the second of the Pennsylvania Steel Company's Lebanon furnaces was blown in April 8 on pig iron. The stack began to make Spiegel iron, yesterday. Spiegel is a brand of iron different from the regular pig iron and is used for special purposes.
