UNCLE SAM, TRAPPER

By Frederic J. Haskin
kota, and it may be carried into the ancient State of Maine, where one would not expect wild animals to menace industry, but where wolves are reported as being very abundant.

It is the sheep men that suffer most heavily and regularly from the predatory animals. Sheep are absolutely defenseless and easily "stampeded" by the ravenous range cattle are much better able to take care of themselves; but many calves and some full-grown stock are destroyed by wolves each year.

One of the best government trappers not long ago succeeded in catching an old timber wolf that was estimated to have killed $3,000 worth of beef. The total annual loss of livestock from predatory animals is estimated at $15,000,000. In addition to this, many deer and other valuable game animals are killed by them.

For many years the Biological Survey has been designing traps and importing them from foreign countries with a view to discovering the best kinds, both for government use, and in order that the information on the subject may be given to farmers and ranch men. It now has one of the most complete collections of traps in the world.

One of the best government trappers, the government has employed chiefly the steel traps used in taking fur for the market. In addition to a large assortment of these, it has gathered over the country a number of traps the receipts for making "scent" to attract the animals. This is a rather gruesome business, the basis of most of these lures being thoroughly decayed meat soaked in oil and flavored with musk, which always attracts the beasts of prey. This scent is sometimes dragged over the animal's trail in order that the animals shall follow the trail and fall into the trap.

The keen sense of smell which characterizes all the hunting animals may be taken advantage of in this way; but it also makes them hard to outwit. The government hunters all handle their traps with gloves, which are often soaked in musk, and stand on a hide or a piece of canvas while setting them. All of this is necessary to keep the "set" from being tainted with the odor of man, which all the wild creatures instinctively fear and shun.

WIN FIRST GAME
Harrisburg's Motive Power team won the opening league game Saturday, defeating Philadelphia; score, 12 to 2. The local players showed better team work and hit the ball hard, knocking two Quaker twirlers all over the lot. Embick and Wrightson were the best local hitters. A return game will be played at Philadelphia next Saturday.

COUNTRY CLUB WINS
In the opening game the Harrisburg Post Office team on Saturday lost to the Harrisburg Country Club; score, 4 to 2. Hits by the Country Club were timely, while those of the Post Office were scattered. The stars on the Country Club team were McCormick, Smith and Stackpole; for the Post Office, G. Hepford and W. Hepford.

The second boxing show under the direction of the West End Republican Club will be held to-night at Chestnut Street Auditorium. The program is one of the best ever offered outside the large cities. The seat sale indicates a record crowd. There will be music by an orchestra.

The only change in to-night's bill at the Chestnut Street Auditorium will be in the semi-wind-up. Young O'Neill, Comparative State of the methods of applying and operating the pulmotor and lungmotor will be demonstrated and other methods will be applied to persons simulating suffocation. The demonstration will be made at noon.

The major league teams switch east and west to-day and to-morrow. The American League teams are all in the West, starting a series that will continue for a month. The National League teams are moving west. This means the actual beginning of the "great race" in each organization. The western teams, while not showing the same pace as those in the East, may spring some surprises.

LUNG MOTORS TO BE DEMONSTRATED

One of the interesting features for the next conference on Emergencies

Actual demonstrations, of mechanical methods of inducing respiration and resuscitating workers, overcome by suffocation, will be made before the physicians and surgeons attending the Conference of Physicians to be held by the Division of Industrial Hygiene and Engineering of the Department of Labor and Industry at the State Capitol, Thursday, May 18. Comparative tests of the methods of applying and operating the pulmotor and lungmotor will be demonstrated and other methods will be applied to persons simulating suffocation. The demonstration will be made at noon.

Physicians and surgeons, interested in industrial accident prevention and vocational diseases in all sections of the State, have notified the Hygiene Division of the Labor Department that they will attend the meeting. Leading practitioners will read papers on various subjects and discussions will follow each paper with the intent of making this conference one of the most interesting symposiums on industrial disease prevention ever held in this State.
