True Love in a Cottage

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

"Love in a cottage" is not a poet's dream. It is a real practical possibility. But—and there is a large BUT—everything depends on whether the love and the cottage are both real. Love can make a rose-tinted cottage out of a room, a slum tenement, and cruel indifference is capable of turning a rose arbor over the door of a beautiful little home into a hedge of thorns.

If the foundations of love are firm and so too are those of the little house where it comes to dwell, both will stand sturdy years as one may expect and all the wear and tear of heat and cold and fortune's mischances right through life until eternity itself.

Now this is gloriously true; but you have to be fairly sure of both your love and your cottage. More, you have to be certain of them as one may be of anything in all this mutable world of ours.

I am not recommending a stamped-out altar on twelve dollars a week or a room with a "three hundred" in the bank. For some "good managers," for some sturdy workers with future advancement assured, such things might be the mouthpiece of the gods and the bread and milk for Love's sustenance and the warm gear to keep his spark of fire burning in the world's winter.

There is a happy mean in marriage as in all other things. Overcaution does not know it—for overcaution will waste glorious years of youth trying to work beyond the "love in a cottage" state lest that little cottage be haunted by aspects of love in rags. Nor does recklessness emotion know the happy mean for marriage. It takes sane judgment in each individual case.

How good a manager is Lucy? How much money will she go without? How patient will she be when she sees other women better dressed and indulging in trips to pleasure palaces from which she is barred by the price of admission? How willing is she to work to keep her cottage bright and shining and her soul radiant and her body sweet and dainty? How much strength has she to keep on hoping and to encourage Charley to fight on in the face of failure? These are the questions she must ask herself even after she is well assured that Charley is the man she loves supremely of all the men in this world.

And Charley must add to his knowledge that he wants Lucy and wants Lucy to be happy these questions of himself: "Will I love Lucy when she is tired and worn from working to make my scanty earnings cover our wants? Will I work with vim and vigor to get ahead for her? And am I sure of myself and my determination to succeed? Will I be tender and kind on my knees up for the luxuries I cannot give."

"Will I keep away from pleasures I cannot afford and forego being one of the crowd and find my happiness with my wife and in her happiness? Will I aid her efforts to make me a home and not insist on miracles of housewifery from her who is as adept at her game as I am at mine—of earning the wherewithal for her to build us a nest?"

But both will bear and forebear and work together as partners—if both will face difficulties with a laugh that marks from determination to win above them—both will bring unselfishness and consideration to keep love blooming and fresh—if tenderness and strength are there to keep their romance alive, then love in a cottage is a wonderful thing.

But love in a cottage is not for physical weaklings or moral cowards or idle wastrels. A year or two of emotion will for them be followed by breaking health, or insane jealousy of those who do not have to say, "I can't afford that," or extravagance that leads to ruin.

Love in a cottage may mean purgatory or "Heaven below." Each of us has to decide what it shall mean in our individual case and then do it or embrace it reverently. It will spell happiness when it houses perfect love mingled with independence and proper pride and willingness, plus ability to work and mutual confidence and trust. It needs loyal partners to keep it bright and then love in a cottage is love in a cottage over which the roses climb and on which the sun shines.

Tooth Loose? Watch out for Pyorrhea!

When you find a tooth that gives back and forth, even just a little, see your dentist at once.

He will find conditions which you might overlook. He will find a gum recession, even though slight, where the gums have pulled away from the teeth. And he will tell you that you have the dread disease pyorrhea.

From pyorrhea come by far the greater part of all tooth troubles. Unless treated and checked, it will result not only in the shrinking and malformation of your gums and of the bony structure into which your teeth are set, but in the loss of the teeth themselves.

A specific for pyorrhea has been discovered recently by dental science, and is now offered for daily treatment in Senreco Tooth Paste. Senreco combats the germ of the disease. Its regular use insures your teeth against the attack or further progress of pyorrhea.

But Senreco does more. It cleanses the teeth delightfully. It gives them a whiteness distinctive of Senreco alone. Its flavor is entirely pleasing, and it leaves in the mouth a wonderful sense of coolness and wholesomeness.

Start the Senreco treatment before pyorrhea grips you for good. Details in folder with every tube. A two-ounce tube for 25c is sufficient for 6 weeks' daily treatment. Get Senreco at your druggist today, or send 4c in stamps or coin for sample tube and folder. Address The Sentinal Remedies Company 503 Union Central Building, Cincinnati, Ohio.

Candidate For Legislature Suggests Rose Festival

James Evans, of 84 North Seventeenth street, has suggested to the Telegraph a rose festival for June this year. Mr. Evans has traveled all over the country and was most impressed with such a festival at Portland, Ore. He believes Harrisburg could duplicate the pageant.

Mr. Evans has for 23 years been an operator for the Pennsylvania railroad company and is now stationed at the superintendent's office at the Union station. He has submitted his name as a Republican and Washington party candidate for the Legislature and hopes that his friends will not forget him to-morrow.

His plans for the rose festival will be printed in the Telegraph to-morrow and he hopes that arrangements may be made for a great flower show next month.

THOUSANDS OF PHYSICAL DEFECTS DUE TO REFINED FOODS EATEN

CHAPTER 58
The Germans, Consuming Enormous Quantities of the Refined Foods So Popular in America, Proved by Their Complete Collapse That Thousands of Americans Owe Their Physical Defects to the Same Causes.

Feb. 23, 1915, the Kronprinz Wilhelm sank the French passenger steamship Guadeloupe, from Buenos Ayres to Bordeaux. There was more fresh meat aboard the Frenchman, with plenty of ham, butter, patent flour, potatoes, and canned vegetables. The Germans seized it all.

Some of the crew were complaining of swollen ankles and pains in the nerves of the legs and arms. They had never heard of the Maderiamore poison squad. Many of them were complaining of palpitation of the heart, but never heard one that heart involvement is one of the most marked symptoms of a severe acidosis.

They seemed able to eat, sleep, and work, and apparently no plague could menace them out there on the high sea for there still remained to them plenty of meat, tons of potatoes, and enough sugar, butter, and flour to suffice another year.

March 25, 1915, with fifty of her men acting queerly, and all of them manifesting a depressive and violent mood, she sank the British steamer Tamar, from Santos to Havre, seizing 65,000 bags of green coffee and with the butter, sugar, the flour, and canned vegetables aboard.

She did not heed the fact that there is a balance of acid and base-forming elements in the "ash" content of all food.

She did not heed the fact that in the food seized by her the base-forming elements had been removed for the purely commercial reason that they might "keep."

She did not heed the fact that after a diet of refined foods, and chronic acidosis is set up which abstracts the lime salts from the fibrous tissues, muscles, nerves, cartilages, and bones.

When the limbs of the German sailors began to swell they did not know that the swelling was due to the abstraction of these lime salts with the increased viscosity of the blood.

They did not heed the fact that loss of lime salts causes irritability and weakness of the muscles with neuritic pains. They did not know that the continued loss of lime salts causes effusion of the joints.

They did not know that following these stages in the progress of acidosis, the disease soon becomes involved, and that this condition is in turn followed by thinning and erosion, which actually destroys the nerves and eventually terminates in paralysis.

The Germans were consuming enormous quantities of the refined foods of high caloric value so extensively beloved in America, in the United States and they looked in all directions but in the right direction for the cause of their trouble.

They did not heed the fact that the abstraction of lime salts is a cause of the rapid progress of tuberculosis. Their business was to raid.

March 27, 1915, the German cruiser sank the British steamer Colaba, bound from Rosario to St. Vincent with another cargo of whole wheat in her hold. Her coal, patent flour, butter, potatoes, and canned vegetables were confiscated, but again the precious wheat was sent to the bottom.

Alarming conditions soon began to develop. Typical symptoms of pyorrhea, dilated heart, swollen gums, atrophy of muscles and pain on pressure over nerves, with considerable edema of the face, were observed. The men could not stand on their feet. They were dropping at the rate of two a day. It seemed that a curse had descended upon the cruiser. The entire crew was going rapidly to pieces.

It was evident that the Kronprinz Wilhelm would either be manned by 500 dead bodies in a few more weeks, or she would arrive at her destination, the nearest port. Her wireless had told her that Newport News had given harbor to her sister raider the Prinz Elke Friedrich. She would take a desperate chance against the enemy and make the dash.

That is why she was discovered Sunday morning, April 11, lying in the James River, thrashing in her hold, aboard a floating wreck, a hospital ship, a lesson to the American experts who cry "berl-berl and polished rice," "pellagra and corn meal," when meat and white bread and refined foods are the real issues.

At this point, we shall soon see, how long served to mislead the American public and cloud refined food in a maze of professional ignorance. Of that we have no doubt, although berl-berl that really is caused by polished rice, but there is no connecting link between the acidosis of the Kronprinz Wilhelm and the berl-berl of Billibidiparison other than is to be found in the natural and inevitable results which follow an acid-forming base-free diet of any kind, call those results by any name you will.

Here was a crew of men living in the open air, eating the staple articles of diet for which American scientists claim so much, and because of which they tell us we are the best-fed nation in the world. Fresh meat, all the butter and bread, the potatoes, the condensed milk, and tons of fancy cakes, biscuits, and sugar with all the coffee and tea they could drink constituted their diet.

There may be some skeptical souls who, notwithstanding the facts reported here, may ask: "But if German sailors had eaten American meals for 255 days and develop on such a diet of white bread and meat a condition of malnutrition that results so disastrously why do not the Americans themselves develop the same conditions?"

Americans do develop the same disease, but because they eat many other offsetting foods, which were outside the reach of the German sailors, the severity of the disease is modified accordingly.

On the Kronprinz Wilhelm the intensity of the cause determined the gravity and rapidity of the defect. There was no outside assistance in the form of offsetting fresh vegetables and fruits to lessen that intensity.

The Germans, however, consumed, although theoretically contributing base-forming elements, actually aggravated the condition for the reason that their juices were consumed. These juices, when heated, combined with salts of tin and sheet iron, acted as an additional irritant to the kidneys, already taxed beyond their capacity by the quantities of phosphoric, phosphoric, carbonic, and amino acids, elaborated in the digestion of high protein and refined carbohydrates.

Americans eat onions, lettuce, asparagus, cabbage, carrots, parsnips, cauliflower, celery, apples, berries, oranges, grapes, fresh milk, eggs, heart-lungs, nuts, berries, and other base-forming foods which assist nature to combat or to modify some of the evil effects of the refined foods.

It places a dreadful handicap upon pregnancy and makes normal lactation impossible. It causes tuberculosis, appendicitis, and cancer. It does not pile its woes in a heap as was done on the German cruiser. It spreads them out thinly over a larger area and is followed by many preventable ills rarely traced to their true cause.

So true is this that even the State is beginning to discriminate against the physically unfit. The chief feature of the annual report of the Civil Service Commission signed by Henry Moskowitz, president of the board, and Commissioner Darwin R. Warren, Jr., and Alexander Kehoe, submitted May 6, 1916, to Mayor Mitchell of New York City, records the adoption of physical standards for the city's employees.

Applicants for municipal positions during the year 1915, 7,639 were rejected.

The State makes no attempt to educate the people concerning the meaning of inadequate nutrition or foodless food. Yet it already signifies the tendency of the times in throwing to the mercenary the victims of such ignorance.

"There can be no doubt," says the report of the Civil Service Commission, "that the elimination of the physically unfit, and the consequent increase in the city service will result in increased efficiency. There is no more reason for the city service to accept those who are so physically handicapped that they cannot render the best service than for a railroad to employ men whose physical defect would render them a menace to life and property."

Never were employers so keen as now in their scrutiny of the health records of their employees. Yet notwithstanding the highest physical standards now being demanded in all departments of labor no organized effort is being made, as far as food is concerned, to enable the workers of America to attain the physical perfection demanded.

It is in this light that the facts which we are about to record merit the attention of Congress, although there is not the slightest hope that Congress will call upon them for many years. The schools must first succeed in translating them for the benefit of the rising generation.

Valuable Hints On Care of the Teeth

Great care should be exercised in selecting a dentifrice. Some powders and creams contain grit that scratches the teeth. Others actually eat away the enamel little by little. Others contain coloring matter that stains the teeth. Still others are so powerfully astringent they cause the gums to shrink and recede. Most of them have a decided effect on discolored films or "placques" which adhere so tenaciously and prevent many from having really white teeth, no matter how they rub and scrub.

The very best thing to use on the teeth is a tooth brush with a soft bristle, which may be found in any drug store in 25 cent tubes. It is open to none of the objections named, and besides cleansing so thoroughly cleansing, actually removes even the most obstinate stains or spots. Used daily, like a tooth paste, it will keep all teeth glistening white, healthy and beautiful. Occasionally a coat of fine refined astringent should be put on a coarse thread and drawn between the teeth, to keep the sides antiseptically clean and spotless—Advertisement.

ON VERGE OF NERVOUS PROSTRATION

Mrs. M. A. Sauble Resorts to Quaker Herb Extract

(Special, York, Pa.) Owing to various complaints from which Mrs. M. A. Sauble 141 E. Maple street suffered for a long time, I was nearly a complete nervous and physical wreck. I was afflicted with every imaginable kind of stomach troubles, gas, belching, constipation and torpid liver. Hardly a day passed during which I did not have a nervous headache, nervous chills, pains in my back and sides in fact was miserable in every way. How I suffered I cannot explain. I had indeed become melancholy and despondent and life had little interest for me. As medicines did not seem to help me what was I to do? So I continued to suffer and grow worse. I called at the drug store and had a talk with the Health

Teacher, I was pleased with his very kind advice. I could tell from his expressions that he was very worried but he did not discourage me. He simply suggested that I try a treatment of Quaker Herb Extract that if owing to my most weakened condition they failed to help me to call and be reimbursed for the original cost. How could I possibly refuse such a fair and honest proposition? I obtained the remedies and promised to give them a trial. Now I can report sensational results. I felt a little nauseated this morning for the first time; later a remarkable thing happened. I expelled a big tapeworm, and then came a wonderful relief. This monster I realized had been the real cause of all of my sufferings and Quaker Herb Extract by removing the cause made me well. I am happy now, and extremely grateful for what Quaker Herb Extract has done for me.

This is a rather remarkable case and may be doubted by many. The strictest investigation is therefore suggested that it is only another striking proof of what may be expected from the wonderful Quaker Herb Remedies. The complete line of which can only be obtained at all times from Keller's Drug Store, 405 Market street, so call to-day and obtain this wonderful Quaker Herb Extract, $1.00 per bottle, or three bottles for $2.50. Oil of Balm 25 and 50 cents a bottle. Kidney Pills, 50c.
