Two Kinds of Water From the Same Well
Jacksonville, Fla.—In the investigation of the wells and underground waters of Florida the geologists of the United States Geological Survey have noted many interesting things. Among them is a well at Welaka, on the St. John's river, from which two kinds of water are obtained. The well was first drilled to 160 feet and from this depth ordinary "sulphur" water was obtained. The drill was then carried to a depth of 209 feet, where it encountered a strong mineral water having a disagreeable, salty taste. In order to use both kinds of water an inner tubing was run nearly to the bottom of the well. Both this and the outer casing were connected with pumps, so that ordinary water and mineral water can be pumped at the same time. A favorite joke played on the visitors is to give them a drink of the weaker water in the first glass and to replace it with the brine in the second.
